A story is being told at the expense of an old English farmer who was recently called upon to explain why he had failed to take out a license for a favorite fox terrier dog. "'E's nobbut a puppy," the defendant remarked, in response to a question as to the animal's age. "Yes, yes! So you say. But how old is he?" "Oh, weel, I couldn' tell to a bit," was the reply. "I never was much good at remembering dates, but 'e's nobbut a puppy." On the other hand, it was maintained that the animal in question was a very, very old-fashioned puppy, and the magistrate inflicted the usual fine. Shortly afterward the farmer was met by a friend who wanted to know how he had fared at the police court. "Nobbut middlin'," was the reply. "Did they fine you?" "Yes," responded the victim; "an' 'ang me if I can understand it! Last year an' the year afore that I told the same tale about the same dog, an' it wor allus good enough afore! Who's been tamperin' wi' the law sin' last year?"

IN AGONY WITH ITCHING

"About four years ago I broke out with sores on my arms like boils. After two months they were all over my body, some coming, and some going away. In about six months the boils quit, but my arms, neck and body broke out with an itching, burning rash. It would burn and itch, and come out in pimples like grains of wheat. I was in a terrible condition; I could not sleep or rest. Parts of my flesh were raw, and I could scarcely bear my clothes on. I could not lie in bed in any position and rest. In about a year the sores extended down to my feet. Then I suffered agony with the burning, itching sores. I could hardly walk and for a long time I could not put on socks.

"All this time I was trying everything I could hear of, and had the skill of three doctors. They said it was eczema. I got no benefit from all this. I was nearly worn out, and had given up in despair of ever being cured when I was advised by a friend to try Cuticura Remedies. I purchased Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, and used exactly as directed. I used the Cuticura Remedies constantly for four months, and nothing else, and was perfectly cured. It is now a year, and I have not had the least bit since. I am ready to praise the Cuticura Remedies at any time. (Signed) E. L. Cate, Exile, Ky., Nov. 10, 1910.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. TAFT ON ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY

President Sends Another Special Message to Congress.

PLANS FOR BETTER SERVICE

Results of Commission's Inquiry Into Methods of Saving Money and Getting Better Work From Government Employes.

Washington, Jan. 17. — President Taft submitted to congress today another message, this time on economy and efficiency in the government service.

The message in part is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit for the information of the congress this report of progress made in the inquiry into the efficiency and economy of the methods of transacting public business.

Efficiency and economy in the government service have been demanded with increasing insistence for a generation. Real economy is the result of efficient organization. By perfecting the organization the same benefits may be obtained at less expense. A reduction in the total of the annual appropriations is not in itself a proof of economy, since it is often accompanied by a decrease in efficiency. The needs of the nation may demand a large increase of expenditure, yet to keep the total appropriations within the expected revenue is necessary to the maintenance of public credit.

Upon the president must rest a large share of the responsibility for the demands made upon the treasury for the current administration of the executive branch of the government. Upon the congress must rest responsibility for those grants of public funds which are made for other purposes.

Reason for the Inquiry.

Recognizing my share of responsibility for efficient and economical administration, I have endeavored during the past two years, with the assistance of heads of departments, to secure the best results. As one of the means to this end I requested a grant from congress to make my efforts more effective.

An appropriation of $100,000 was made June 25, 1910, "to enable the president to inquire into the methods of transacting the public business of the executive departments and other government establishments and to recommend to congress such legislation as may be necessary to carry into effect changes found to be desirable that cannot be accomplished by executive action alone." I have been given this fund to enable me to take action and to make specific recommendations with respect to the details of transacting the business of an organization whose activities are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. The operations of the government affect the interest of every person living within the jurisdiction of the United States. Its organization embraces stations and centers of work located in every city and in many local subdivisions of the country. Its gross expenditures amount to nearly $1,000,000,000 annually. Including the personnel of the military and naval establishments, more than 400,000 persons are required to do the work imposed by law upon the executive branch of the government.

Plan of the Work.

In accordance with my instructions, the commission on economy and efficiency, which I organized to aid me in the inquiry, has directed its efforts primarily to the formulation of concrete recommendations looking to the betterment of the fundamental conditions under which governmental operations must be carried on. With a basis thus laid, it has proceeded to the prosecution of detailed studies of individual services and classes of work, and of particular practices and methods, pushing these studies as far, and covering as many points and services, as the resources and time at its disposal have permitted.

In approaching its task it has divided the work into five fields of inquiry having to do respectively with organization, personnel, business methods, accounting and reporting, and the budget.

Organization.

I have stated that the congress, the president, and the administrative officers are attempting to discharge the duties with which they are intrusted without full information as to the agencies through which the work of the government is being performed. To provide more complete information on this point the commission has submitted to me a report on the organization of the government as it existed July 1, 1911. This report, which is transmitted herewith, shows in great detail, by means of outlines, not only the departments, commissions, bureaus and offices through which the government performs its varied activities, but also the sections, shops, field stations, etc., constituting the subordinate divisions through which the work is actually done. It shows for the services at Washington each such final unit as a laboratory, library, shop and administrative subdivision; and for the services outside of Washington each station and point at which any activity of the government is carried on.

Comprehensive Plan of Organization.

With this outline as a basis, the commission has entered upon the preparation of three series of reports. The first series deals with the manner in which the services of the government should be grouped in departments. This is a matter of fundamental importance. It is only after a satisfactory solution of this problem that many important measures of reform become possible. Only by grouping services according to their character can substantial progress be made in eliminating duplication of work and plant and proper working relations be established between services engaged in similar activities. Until the head of a department is called upon to deal exclusively with matters falling in but one or a very few distinct fields, effective supervision and control is impossible. As long as the same department embraces services so diverse in character as those of life saving and the management of public finances, standardization of accounting methods and of other business practices is exceedingly difficult of attainment.

So dependent are other reforms upon the proper grouping of services that I have instructed the commission to indicate in its report the changes which should be made in the existing organization and to proceed in the same way as would far-seeing architects or engineers in planning for the improvement and development of a great city. My desire is to secure and to furnish to the congress a scheme of organization that can be used as a basis of discussion and action for years to come.

In the past services have been created one by one as exigencies have seemed to demand, with little or no reference to any scheme of organization of the government as a whole. I am convinced that the time has come when the government should take stock of its activities and agencies and formulate a comprehensive plan with reference to which future changes may be made. The report of the commission is being prepared with this idea in mind. When completed it will be transmitted to congress. The recommendations will be of such a character that they can be acted upon one by one if they commend themselves to the congress and as action in regard to any one of them is deemed to be urgent.

Report on Particular Services.

The second and third series of reports deal, respectively, with the organization and activities of particular services, and the form of organization for the performance of particular business operations.

One of the reports of the second series is upon the revenue cutter service, which costs the government over two and a half million dollars each year. In the opinion of the commission its varied activities can be performed with equal, or greater, advantage by other services. The commission, therefore, recommends that it be abolished. It is estimated that by so doing a saving of not less than $1,000,000 a year can be made.

Another report illustrating the second series recommends that the lighthouse and life saving services be administered by a single bureau, instead of as at present by two bureaus located in different departments. These services have much in common. Geographically, they are similarly located; administratively, they have many of the same problems. It is estimated that consolidation would result in a saving of not less than $100,000 annually.

General Technical Services.

A third series of reports is being prepared on those branches of the organization which are technical in character and which exist for the service of the government as a whole—branches which have to do with such matters as public printing, heating, lighting, the making of repairs, the providing of transportation, and the compilation of statistics where mechanical equipment is essential.

Abolition of Local Offices.

Perhaps the part of the organization in which the greatest economy in public expenditure is possible is to be found in the numerous local offices of the government. In some instances the establishment and the discontinuance of these local offices are matters of administrative discretion. In other instances they are established by permanent law in such a manner that their discontinuance is beyond the power of the president or that of any executive officer. In a number of services these laws were passed nearly a century ago. Changes in economic conditions have taken place which have had the effect of rendering certain offices not only useless, but even worse than useless in that their very existence needlessly swells expenditures and complicates the administrative system.

The attention of congress has been called repeatedly to these conditions. In some instances the congress has approved recommendations for the abolition of useless positions. In other cases not only do the recommendations of the executive that useless positions be abolished remain unheeded, but laws are passed to establish new offices at places where they are not needed.

The responsibility for the maintenance of these conditions must naturally be divided between the congress and the executive. But that the executive has performed his duty when he has called the attention of the congress to the matter must also be admitted. Realizing my responsibility in the premises, I have directed the commission to prepare a report setting forth the positions in the local services of the government which may be discontinued with advantage, the saving which would result from such action and the changes in law which are necessary to carry into effect changes in organization found to be desirable. On the coming in of the report, such offices as may be found useless and can be abolished will be so treated by executive order.

In my recent message to the congress I urged consideration of the necessity of placing in the classified service all of the local officers under the departments of the treasury, the interior, postoffice, and commerce and labor.

Classification of Local Officers.

The importance of the existence of a competent and reasonably permanent civil service was not appreciated until the last quarter of the last century. At that time examinations were instituted as a means of ascertaining whether candidates for appointment possessed the requisite qualifications for government positions. Since then it has come to be universally admitted that entrance to almost every subordinate position in the public service should be dependent upon the proof in some appropriate way of the ability of the appointee.

As yet, however, little if any attempt has been made by law to secure, either for the higher administrative positions in the service at Washington or for local offices, the qualifications which the incumbents of these positions must have if the business of the government is to be conducted in the most efficient and economical manner. Furthermore, in the case of many of the local officers the law positively provides that the term of office shall be of four years' duration.

The next step which must be taken is to require of heads of bureaus in the departments at Washington, and of most of the local officers under the departments, qualifications of capacity similar to those now required of certain heads of bureaus and of local officers. The extension of the merit system to these officers and a needed readjustment of salaries will have important effects in securing greater economy and efficiency.

In the first place, the possession by the incumbents of these positions of requisite qualifications must in itself promote efficiency.

In the second place, the removal of local officers from the realm of political patronage in many cases would reduce the pay roll of the field services. At the present time the incumbents of many of these positions leave the actual performance of many of their duties to deputies and assistants. The government often pays two persons for doing work that could easily be done by one. What is the loss to the government cannot be stated, but that it is very large cannot be denied, when it is remembered how numerous are the local officers in the postal, customs, internal revenue, public lands, and other field services of the government.

In the third place, so long as local officers are within the sphere of political patronage it is difficult to consider the question of the establishment or discontinuance of local offices apart from the effect upon local political situations.

Finally, the view that these various offices are to be filled as a result of political considerations has for its consequence the necessity that the president and members of congress devote to matters of patronage time which they should devote to questions of policy and administration.

The greatest economy and efficiency, and the benefits which may accrue from the president's devoting his time to the work which is most worth while, may be assured only by treating all the distinctly administrative officers in the departments at Washington and in the field in the same way as inferior officers have been treated. The time has come when all these officers should be placed in the classified service. The time has also come when those provisions of law which give to these officers a fixed term of years should be repealed. So long as a fixed term is provided by the law the question of reappointment of an officer, no matter how efficiently he may have performed his duties, will inevitably be raised periodically. So long as appointments to these offices must be confirmed by the senate, and so long as appointments to them be made every four years, just so long will it be impossible to provide a force of employes with a reasonably permanent tenure who are qualified by reason of education and training to do the best work.

Superannuation.

Attention has been directed in recent years to the need of a suitable plan of retiring the superannuated employes in the executive civil service. In the belief that it is desirable that any steps toward the establishment of such a plan shall be taken with caution, I instructed the commission to make an inquiry first into the conditions at Washington. This inquiry has been directed to the ascertainment of the extent to which superannuation now exists and to the consideration of the availability of the various plans which either have been proposed for adoption in this country or have actually been adopted in other countries. I shall submit, in the near future, for the consideration of the congress a plan for the retirement of aged employes in the civil service which will safeguard the interests of the government and at the same time make reasonable provision for the needs of those who have given the best part of their lives to the service of the state.

Efficiency of Personnel.

I have caused inquiry to be made into the character of the appointees from the point of view of efficiency and competence which has resulted from present methods of appointment; into the present relation of compensation to the character of work done; into the existing methods of promotion and the keeping of efficiency records in the various departments; and into the conditions of work in government offices. This inquiry will help to determine to what extent conditions of work are uniform in the different departments and how far uniformity in such conditions will tend to improve the service. I have felt that satisfaction with the conditions in which they worked was a necessary prerequisite to an efficient personnel, and that satisfaction was not to be expected where conditions in one department were less favorable than in another.

This inquiry has not been completed. When it has been ascertained that evils exist which can be remedied through the exercise of the powers now vested in the president, I shall endeavor to remedy those evils. Where that is not the case, I shall present for the consideration of the congress plans which, I believe, will be followed by great improvement in the service.

Business Methods.

In every case where technical processes have been studied it has been demonstrated beyond question that large economies may be effected. The subjects first approached were those which lie close to each administrator, viz., office practices. An illustration of the possibilities within this field may be found in the results of the inquiry into the methods of handling and filing correspondence. Every office in the government has reported its methods to the commission. These reports brought to light the fact that present methods were quite in the reverse of uniform. Some offices follow the practice of briefing all correspondence; some do not. Some have flat files; others fold all papers before filing. Some use press copies; others retain only carbon copies.

Unnecessary Cost of Handling and Filing Correspondence.

The reports also show not only a very wide range in the methods of doing this comparatively simple part of the government business, but an extraordinary range in cost. For the handling of incoming mail the averages of cost by departments vary from $5.84 to $84.40 per 1,000. For the handling of outgoing mail the averages by departments vary from $5.94 to $69.89 per 1,000. This does not include the cost of preparation, but is confined merely to the physical side of the work. The variations between individual offices is many times greater than that shown for averages by departments.

It is at once evident either that is is costing some of the offices too little or that others are being run at an unwarranted expense. Nor are these variations explained by differences in character of work. For example, there are two departments which handle practically the same kind of business and in very large volume. The average cost of handling incoming mail to one was found to be over six times as great as the cost of handling incoming mail to the other. Excluding the cost of preparation, the average cost per 1,000 for outgoing mail to one was nearly 50 per cent. greater than that for the other.

It has been found that differences of average cost by departments closely follow differences in method and that the greatest cost is found in the department where the method is most involved. Another fact is of interest, viz., that in the two departments above referred to, which show the lowest averages, orders have been issued which will lead to large saving without impairing efficiency. It cannot be said what the saving ultimately will be when the attention of officers in all of the departments has been focused on present methods with a view to changing them in such manner as to reduce cost to the lowest point compatible with efficient service. It, however, must be a considerable percentage of nearly $5,000,000, the total estimated cost of handling this part of the government business at Washington.

Results have already been obtained which are noteworthy. Mention has been made of the orders issued by two departments. Of these the order of one is most revolutionary in character, since it requires flat filing, where before all correspondence was folded; the doing away with letterpress copies; and the discontinuance of indorsements on slips, one of the most expensive processes and one which in the other department has been carried to very great length.

Need for Labor-Saving Office Devices.

The use of labor-saving office devices in the service has been made the subject of special inquiry. An impression prevails that the government is not making use of mechanical devices for economizing labor to the same extent as are efficiently managed private enterprises. A study has been made of the extent to which devices of this character are now being employed in the several branches of the government and the opportunities that exist for their more general use. In order to secure information as to the various kinds of labor-saving devices that are in existence and as to their adaptability to government work, an exhibition of labor-saving office appliances was held in Washington from July 6 to 15, 1911. One hundred and ten manufacturers and dealers participated, and more than 10,000 officers and employees visited the exhibition. There is no doubt that the exhibition served the purpose of bringing to the attention of officers devices which can be employed by them with advantage. The holding of this exhibition was, however, but a step preparatory to the contemplated investigation.

Unnecessary Cost of Copy Work.

The efforts of the commission resulted also in the adoption by several bureaus or departments of improved methods of doing copying.. The amount of copy work heretofore done by hand each year in the many offices is estimated to aggregate several hundred thousand dollars. The commission exhibited, at its offices, appliances that were thought to be especially adapted to this kind of government work. Following these demonstrations methods of copying were introduced which have brought about a saving of over 75 per cent. in offices where used for six months. This change in one small cross-section of office practice will more than offset the whole cost of my inquiry.

Waste in the Distribution of Public Documents.

Going outside the office, one of the business processes which have been investigated is the distribution of departmental documents. This is a subject with which both the congress and administration heads are familiar. The prevailing practice in handling departmental publications is to have them manufactured at the government printing office; each job when completed is delivered to the department; here the books or pamphlets are wrapped and addressed; they are then sent to the postoffice; there they are assorted and prepared for shipment through the mails; from the postoffice they are sent to the railroad station, which is only a few steps from the government printing office, whence they started. The results of this laborious and circuitous method is to make the use of the best mechanical equipment impracticable and to waste each year not less than a quarter of a million dollars of government funds in useless handling, to say nothing of the indirect loss due to lack of proper co-ordination.

Wasteful Use of Properties and Equipment.

The use of equipment is a matter which also has been investigated. Up to the present time this investigation has been in the main confined to the subject of electric lighting. The government pays over $600,000 per year for electric current; it has made large capital outlays for wiring and fixtures. With the increasing demands in many buildings the present equipment is taxed to its limit and if the present methods are continued much of this wiring must be done over; in many places employees are working at a great physical disadvantage, due to inadequate and improper lighting, and thereby with reduced efficiency. In every place where the inquiry has been conducted it appears that there is large waste; that without the cost of rewiring, simply by giving proper attention to location of lights and the use of proper lamps and reflectors, the light efficiency at points where needed may be much increased and the cost of current reduced from 30 to 60 per cent. Other inquiries into the use which is being made of properties and equipment are contemplated which promise even larger results.

Unnecessary Cost of Insurance.

It is the policy of the government not to insure public property against fire and other losses. Question has been raised whether the government might not apply the same principle to other forms of risk, including insurance of the fidelity of officials and employees. A report is now in preparation on the subject which will show opportunities for large savings. I believe that the present expense for insuring the faithful execution of contracts, which, though paid by the contractor, is more than covered in the added price to the government, can be largely reduced without taking away any element of security.

Lack of Specifications.

The importance of establishing and maintaining standard specifications is found not only in the possibility of very materially reducing the direct cost of government trading, but also in insuring to the service materials, supplies and equipment which are better adapted to its purposes. One of the results of indefiniteness of specifications is to impose contract conditions which make it extra hazardous for persons to enter into contractual relations. This not only deprives the government of the advantage of broad competition, but causes it to pay an added margin in price to vendors who must carry the risk.

Excessive Cost of Travel.

One of the first steps taken toward constructive work was the reclassification of the expenditures for the year 1910 by objects. The foundation was thus made for the investigation of government trading practices. While it was recognized that this large field could not be covered within a year except at enormous cost, the subjects of "Transportation of persons" and "Subsistence while in travel status" were taken as concrete examples. The annual cost of travel to the government was found to be about $12,000,000. It was also found that the government employees were traveling in practically every way that was open to the public; it was further found that although the government was the largest user of transportation, it was buying railroad tickets on a less favorable basis than would be possible if the subject of traveling expenditures were systematicaly handled from the point of view of the government as a whole. The form of ticket most often used between such points as New York, Philadelphia and Washington was the single-trip, first-class ticket. In two departments definite tests have been made in the use of mileage books and in each practically the same result has been reported, viz., an average saving of a little over one-half of one cent per mile.

Better Methods for Purchasing.

Through a long period of years and by numerous laws and orders there has grown up a procedure governing public advertising and contracting that is more burdensome and expensive in some cases than is necessary. The procedure is not uniform in the various departments; it is not uniform in many cases for the different services in the same department. To make uniform the requirements so far as practicable will be in the interest of economy and efficiency and bring about that simplicity that will secure the largest opportunity for contractors to bid for government work, and will secure for the government the most favorable prices obtained by any purchaser.

The Budget.

The United States is the only great nation whose government is operated without a budget. This fact seems to be more striking when it is considered that budgets and budget procedures are the outgrowth of Democratic doctrines and have had an important part in the development of modern constitutional rights. The American commonwealth has suffered much from irresponsibility on the part of its governing agencies. The constitutional purpose of a budget is to make government responsive to public opinion and responsible for its acts.

The Budget as an Annual Program.

A budget should be the means for getting before the legislative branch, before the press, and before the people a definite annual program of business to be financed; it should be in the nature of a prospectus both of revenues and expenditures; it should comprehend every relation of the government to the people, whether with reference to the raising of revenues or the rendering of service.

In many foreign countries the annual budget program is discussed with special reference to the revenue to be raised, the thought being that the raising of revenue bears more direct relation to welfare than does government expenditure. Around questions of source of revenue political parties have been organized, and on such questions voters in the United States have taken sides since the first revenue law was proposed.

Public-Welfare Questions.

The principal government objects in which the people of the United States are interested include:

The national defense; the protection of persons and property; the promotion of friendly relations and the protection of American interests abroad; the regulation of commerce and industry; the promotion of agriculture, fisheries, forestry and mining; the promotion of manufacturing, commerce, and banking; the promotion of transportation and communication; the postal service, including postal savings and parcels post; the care for and utilization of the public domain; the promotion of education, art, science and recreation; the promotion of the public health; the care and education of the Indians and other wards of the nation.

These are public-welfare questions in which I assume every citizen has a vital interest. I believe that every member of congress, as an official representative of the people, each editor, as a non-official representative of public opinion, each citizen, as a beneficiary of the trust imposed on officers of the government, should be able readily to ascertain how much has been spent for each of these purposes; how much has been appropriated for the current year; how much the administration is asking for each of these purposes for the next fiscal year.

Furthermore, each person interested should have laid before him a clear, well-digested statement showing in detail whether moneys appropriated have been economically spent and whether each division or office has been efficiently run. This is the information which should be available each year in the form of a budget and in detail accounts and reports supporting the budget.

Continuance of the Commission.

I ask the continuance of this commission on economy and efficiency because of the excellent beginning which has been made toward the reorganization of the machinery of this government on business principles. I ask it because its work is entirely non-partisan in character and ought to apply to every citizen who wishes to give effectiveness to popular government, in which we feel a just pride. The work further commends itself for the reason that the cost of organization and work has been carefully considered at every point. Three months were taken in consideration of plans before the inquiry was begun; six months were then spent in preliminary investigations before the commission was organized; before March 3, 1911, when I asked for a continuation of the original appropriation for the current year, only $12,000 had been spent.

The expenditure for the inquiry during the present fiscal year is at the rate of $130,000. The mass of information which must be collected, digested and summarized pertaining to each subject of inquiry is enormous. From the results obtained it is evident that every dollar which is spent in the prosecution of the inquiry in the future will result in manifold savings. Every economy which has been or will be effected through changes in organization or method will inure to the benefit of the government and of the people in increasing measure through the years which follow. It is clearly the part of wisdom to provide for the coming year means at least equal to those available during the current year, and in my opinion the appropriation should be increased to $200,000, and an additional amount of $50,000 should be provided for the publication of those results, which will be of continuing value to officers of the government and to the people.

$25,000,000 FOR PENSIONS LIKELY

SENATE COMMITTEE WILL PROCEED WITH GREAT DELIBERATION IN REPORTING BILL.

AGAINST SULLAWAY BILL

Will Report a Substitute Which Will Carry An Annual Increase Only One-Third As Large.

Washington, Jan. 20.—It is apparent that the senate committee on pensions will not report the Sherwood bill, already passed by the house, but will report a substitute, drafted, in all probability, along the lines of the bill introduced in the senate by Mr. McCumber of North Dakota, committee chairman.

The Sherwood bill, according to figures submitted by the secretary of the interior, would add $75,651,548 a year to the pension roll, making it aggregate about $235,000,050. The supporters of the bill deny that the amount will be that large, and it is for the purpose of permitting Mr. Sherwood to present his figures that the senate committee has invited him to appear before it.

Bill to Carry About $25,000,000.

The likelihood is that the senate committee will ultimately agree on a bill carrying not to exceed about $25,000,000, maybe less. Such a bill would go through the senate, and in conference the house would probably yield, permitting the senate bill to become law.

Some interesting figures have been compiled for the senate committee on pensions, covering the pension operations of the government from the revolutionary war down to date. With reference to the civil war, these figures show that there were in round numbers, enlistments in the union army aggregating 2,700,000 men. Eliminating all reenlistments, 2,000,000 separate persons wore the union colors during that four years of stress and strain. The total sum since paid them or the dependent members of their families in the way of pensions aggregates about $4,000,000, or in round numbers, $2,000 has gone, out of the federal treasury in the way of pensions, since the close of the civil war, on behalf of every soldier who served on the union side in that war. The average length of service of these 2,000,000 men was one year.

It was estimated that in 1908 there were 705,195 surviving veterans of the civil war, and in 1910, 626,000 This estimate is to the effect that there will be 423,000 survivors in 1915, 251,000 in 1920, 116,000 in 1925, 37,000 in 1930, 6,000 in 1935, and 300 in 1940. According to these figures, the number of survivors will decrease 30 per cent in the next five years.

Washington, D. C.—Senator McCumber of North Dakota appealed to the senate to immediately ratify President Taft's arbitration treaties with England and France without amendment. He argued that the terms of the treaties in no way usurped the constitutional rights of the senate nor did they compel the arbitration of any traditional question of American policy such as the Monroe doctrine or the control of immigration.

Ratification of the treaties, Senator McCumber declared, would give to the cause of arbitration such an impetus that like treaties would soon be made with all civilized nations.

"With a treaty of this kind signed by all the great nations," said Senator McCumber, the war with Tripoli would never have been heard of and the cries of Persia for justice and mercy would not now be ringing throughout the world. The time is coming when no great nation will be able to borrow money from other nations to carry on an unjust war."

Senator McCumber quoted statistics to show that the government's appropriations for the army and nav had increased 230 per cent in 20 years, while the increase of population was 44 per cent.

England's war appropriations had increased 115 per cent in 20 years, he said, while her population had been increasing 20 per cent.

"Who can fail to see what the real end must be? Which country will first become bankrupt or paralyzed in its further efforts? The nations of the old world are being pauperized to defend themselves against each other. The condition is a crime against civilization."

Senator McCumber took the position that no construction of the language of the treaties could bind the United States to arbitrate a question involving the Panama canal.

"We must properly say this is an American question, not an international one, and one which could not be submitted to arbitration," he said.

Washington, D. C. — After Postmaster General Hitchcock had been closeted with President Taft for more than an hour an authoritative statement was made at the White House that there had been no friction between the president and the postmaster general over the latter's proposed recommendation that the government acquire and operate all telegraph lines as an adjunct of the postal system.

Mr. Hitchcock had been summoned to the White House shortly before noon and there had been reports that the president was annoyed over the publication of the matter at this time. It developed, however, that Mr. Hitchcock had called the matter to the president's attention a year ago, but to make a more complete investigation a delay had been decided upon. Mr. Hitchcock had intended to bring the matter up again in recent cabinet sessions, but press of other business had prevented.

It also was said that the postmaster general's recommendation would go to congress according to schedule to receive such consideration as the leaders of the house and senate saw fit and without comment by the president.

Speaker Champ Clark declared that government ownership of the telegraph was too big a subject to discuss until all the details of the postmaster general's plans became known. Democratic Leader Underwood was reticent, and Republican Leader Mann of the house, treated the project gingerly.

Says Project Means Loss.

New York.—Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph company declared that if the government took over the telegraph lines of the country as is desired by Postmaster General Hitchcock, he believed the investment would be unprofitable. He said the cost would be enormous and he did not believe the plan would be carried out as long as there was competition in the telegraph business.

"The step would lead to taking over the telephone lines also," said Mr. McKay. "The British government has found this to be so. Two weeks ago it took over the telephone lines in England at an enormous expense.

"The telegraph and telephone lines in this country are worth from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000. This would include the independent telephone companies, owning nearly $500,000,000 of property and having some 450,000 stockholders. I venture to say that they would be operated by the government at great annual loss, just as in Great Britain, where the losses on the telegraphs alone, up to date, are figured at $175,000,000. Moreover, the government would then be employing hundreds of thousands of clerks, telephone girls, telegraph operators, managers, etc. It would be a colossal political machine."

Long Session of Congress.

Washington, D. C. — Both Democratic and Republican leaders in the house of representatives agree that there is little likelihood of congress adjourning before next August.

TO OPEN INDIAN LANDS

2,000,000 Dakota Acres Would Be Opened to Settlement.

Washington, D. C.—The 2,340,880 acres of remaining allotted lands on the Cheyenne River and Standing Rock Indian reservations in the Dakotas would be opened to settlement under two bills by Senator Gamble which are favorably reported. The Gamble bill to extend payment for lands on the open portion of these two reservations for a year was also favorably reported.

COURSE IN DOU

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE AT ACE OF EMPRESS DOWAGE ACOMPLISHES LITTLE.

YOUNG PRINCE OPPOSED

Manchu Outbreak in Pekin Is Feared—Situation Continues Tense.—Quan Shi Kai Stays Out of Conference.

Pekin, China. — The princes of the imperial clan, a number of leading Manchu officials and several members of the government had a protracted conference with the empress dowager at the palace, but again separated without arriving at a decision on the question of abdication.

The leading princes favored an unconditional abdication of the throne. Three of the younger princes together with Tieh Liang, the former Tartar general at Hankin, would not, however, agree to the court's retirement to Jehol, although they did not suggest an alternative. There was considerable effervescence in Pekin throughout the day among both foreign residents and the Chinese. There were many rumors of the possibility of a Manchu outbreak, which, however, appears unlikely at present.

PRINCE CHUN,
Ex-Regent of China.

The ex-regent, Prince Chun, and the former premier, Prince Ching, visited Premier Yuan Shi Kai and had a long conference with him. It appears the court has not produced the gold it promised to provide and the imperial soldiers do not show any anxiety to fight for glory.

Premier Yuan Shi Kai was invited several times to participate in the conference of the princes but he steadfastly refused as he desired to leave the decision entirely to the court.

The situation continues tense. It seems impossible that Pekin can escape eventually a Manchu outbreak. Soldiers belonging to the imperial body guard openly distributed leaflets summoning the people to defend the constitutional monarchy unto death, but it is unlikely that any persons except the Manchus will fight for the monarchy.

It is currently reported that the irreconcilable prince Tsai Tao, brother of the ex-regent, is inciting the Manchu troops to cause the trouble.

Rebels Ask Powers' Recognition

Nanking, China. — The republican government has sent an appeal to the powers for recognition. This took the form of a circular which was sent to Washington, Tokio, London, Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg, and was signed by Wang Chung Wei, the foreign minister of the republican cabinet.

The terms of the circular are as follows:

"The Manchu government having entered into negotiations with the Republic of China for the purpose of abdicating its entire sovereign rights, powers and privileges we fervently pray for recognition, in order to avoid a disastrous interregnum.

(Signed)
"WANG CHUNG WEI,
"Foreign Minister

Demands Are Made.

It appears to be absolutely certain that fighting between the revolutionists and the imperialists will be resumed on the morning of Jan. 28, unless Premier Yuan Shi Kai concedes the demands of the republican government. These demands, which were telegraphed to Premier Yuan Shi Kai at Pekin, are very drastic and substantially as follows:

1. The abdication of the throne and the surrender of the sovereign powers are demanded.
2. No Manchu may participate in the provisional government of China.
3. The capital of the provisional government cannot be established at Pekin.

UNTINGTON WILSON.

Huntington Wilson of Chicago, assistant secretary of state, is being discussed as a possibility for the position of ambassador to France, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Bacon. Mr. Wilson is thirty-six years old and entered the diplomatic service during President McKinley's administration.

FREES BANKER MORSE

FIFTEEN - YEAR SENTENCE IS COMMUTED.

Will Leave Army Hospital at Once and Sail for Carlsbad for Treatment.

Washington, D. C. — President Taft commuted to expire immediately the 15-year sentence for violation of the national banking laws under which Charles W. Morse, the New York banker and ice king, served two years in the federal prison at Atlanta. The commutation of sentence, which gives Morse his complete freedom, but which, unlike a pardon, does not restore his civil rights, was granted upon recommendation of Attorney General Wickersham and Surgeon General Torney, U. S. A. According to the surgeon general's report to the president, Morse could not live one month longer in confinement and even at liberty probably would not live six months.

Efforts made for a complete pardon were unavailing and under the law Morse could not be paroled until he had served five years. Under the commutation he will be allowed to leave the army hospital at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta, at once. Recent efforts in his behalf developed the fact that his friends wished to take him to Carlsbad for treatment.

TURKS ARE REPULSED

Severe Battle Rages Several Hours and Losses Are Heavy.

London, England.— Further serious fighting between the Turks and Italians is reported to have taken place in Tripoli. The Italian fleet the night of Jan. 16 bombarded Zoara to punish the Turkish garrison for sniping Italian patrol boats. On the 18th, 2,000 Turks and Arabs attacked the Italian positions at Chigarsh and there was brisk fighting for several hours. The Turks suffered heavily and were repulsed. The Italians lost 48 men, killed or wounded.

Cotton Strike Settled.

Manchester. England — The dispute in the cotton trade which culminated in a lockout affecting about 300,000 men, Dec 27, has been settled. All the mills will be reopened.

CUYUNA GAINS FAVOR

Forecast of Probable Output of Chipping Mines for the Year.

Brainerd.—H. J. Kruse, superintendent of the Rogers-Brown Ore company, gave the following estimate of the tonnage to be produced by the Cuyuna range this year. He said: "The Kennedy mine will ship 200,000 tons of iron ore; the Armour No. 2 mine will ship 75,000 tons; the Armour No. 1 will ship 40,000 tons. All this ore is contracted for. The latter part of this season the Meacham mine may commence shipping and will then probably produce a tonnage of 15,000 to 20,000 tons. The Thompson mine of the Inland Steel company may also ship, and if it does the mine will produce about 50,000 tons. The Armour No. 2 mine was in ore a week ago. They passed through a seam seven feet thick assaying 57 to 58 per cent, a rich red hematite.

"The payroll of the Kennedy mine at Cuyuna is $15,000 a month and approximately 300 men are at work. Two levels have been opened at the Armour No. 1 mine, one at 200 feet and one at 300 feet. At the Armour No. 2 mine a 2,000-gallon compound Prescott pump has been installed at the 168-foot level. At the Armour No. 1 mine a 2,000-gallon Prescott pump has been installed at the 300-foot level. The Kennedy mine has shipped in 1911 147,500 tons. In its stock pile at the present time are 42,000 tons, an average much better than the corresponding period last year."

Coupled with Superintendent Kruse's announcement of the tonnage of producers on the north range is the statement from authoritative sources that the Adams mine in section 30, south of Deerwood, and the Barrowers mine, operated by M. A. Hanna & Co., four miles south of Brainerd, are also expected to enter the shipping lists of 1912.

The Iron Trade Review, published at Chicago, had an article on the Cuyuna range written by Chester D. Tripp, the general manager of the Rogers-Brown Ore company. The tone of optimism displayed is a happy indication of increased confidence in the range.

HOLD DITCH LAW VALID

People of Traverse County Win Case Against State.

Wheaton. — The Mustinka state ditch damage suit was finished. The drainage board was unable to get any evidence introduced and there was no rebuttal. Judge Flahery will make findings upholding the law. The result is very gratifying to the people here. No appeal will be taken by the state.

The case was entitled Alfred Anderson vs. A. O. Eberhart, Julius Schmahl and S. G. Iverson. The people of Traverse county were represented by Senator Edward Rustad and F. W. Murphy of Wheaton and Thomas Kneeland of Minneapolis. Assistant Attorney General A. L. Janes appeared for the drainage board The action involved $35,000 appropriated by the last legislature to aid in deepening and widening the outlet to the Mustinka river by the state drainage commission. The attorney general ruled that the act was unconstitutional, being an internal improvement. The contention of Traverse county was that the state ditch into Mustinka river, built in 1896, carried a large amount of water into the river that otherwise would go into Otter Tail and Wilkin counties, thereby overflowing some 8,000 acres of fertile land along the banks of the Mustinka and reducing its value from $40 an acres to $15, in other words that the appropriation was not for an internal improvement, but to remedy a wrong created by the state when the Mustinka ditch was dug ten years ago.

An act similar to the point involved in this case was vetoed by Governor John A. Johnson on the ground that it was unconstitutional

ELK RIVER BOY DROWNS

Kent S. Frye Believed to Have Drowned Self in Mississippi.

Elk River.—There is no doubt in the minds of the residents of this city that Kent S. Frye, who mysteriously disappeared recently, has been drowned, although his body has not yet been recovered. His footprints were traced to a hole in the ice in the Mississippi river and it is believed his mind became temporarily unbalanced and led to his act of self destruction.

OTTERTAIL FOR GOOD ROADS.

County Board Decides to Seek Benefits of State Aid.

Fergus Falls.—The good roads movement is going to receive a substantial impetus in Otter Tail county in the coming summer by the expenditure of $15,000 on certain roads recently designated as state roads by the county commissioners.

Otter Tail county has never taken any of the money that is distributed among the different counties of the state under the state highway commission law, as the commissioners were unwilling to appropriate the amount required from the county funds and to build roads according to approved plans. The board has now changed its policy, and at its November sessions it designated a number of roads as state roads, and called for Otter Tail county's share of the money. The fund has accumulated so that the county is now entitled to $7,500, and the board has just held a meeting and appropriated the same amount from the county funds.

A competent engineer will be placed in charge, and the work will be done by contract instead of by the "working out" system that has heretofore prevailed, and it is expected that the roads designated will be vastly improved.

BOOSTERS AT BEMIDJI

Strong Program Arranged for January 25.

Bemidji.—What is expected will prove to be one of the most interesting meetings of boosters and business men ever held in Northern Minnesota has been called for Bemidji January 25. H. J. Maxfield, the new state immigration commissioner; Prof. D. E. Willard, the soil expert for the Northern Pacific railway company; Dan Wallace, editor of the Farmer; George Authier of Minneapolis, possibly L. W. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railway company, and a representative for Edward Pennington, president of the Soo Railway company, will deliver addresses. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Bemidji Commercial club and the addresses will be "on subjects of the greatest interest to the commercial clubs of Northern Minnesota."

"3-FEEDS-FOR-1-CENT"

Finds It Hard to Follow Two Food Laws.

Washington, D. C. — May the states enact pure food legislation now that congress has passed a pure food and drug act?

This question was presented to the supreme court of the United States for decision. The constitutionality of the Indiana pure food act of 1907 was up for argument before the tribunal.

Marion W. Savage of Minnesota, manufacturer of an animal food whose slogan is "3 feeds for one cent," attacked the law as raising two standards for the manufacturers of food stuffs and drugs entering into interstate commerce to obey. His attorneys contended it was enough to obey the federal law to say nothing of a state law.

Automobiles at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis. -Plans are complete for the fifth annual automobile show to be held in Minneapolis February 17-24. Hundreds of models will be shown in the armory building and in every way this exhibition will go down in the motor history of the northwest as the most representative display ever staged. Manufacturers are realizing the importance of Minneapolis as a motor car distributing center and have arranged to send their complete show exhibits direct from the Chicago show of the week before. So popular is the Minneapolis Automobile Show Association that every inch of space was sold within half an hour's time. A score of firms since that time have been refused space because of lack of room. There will be an elaborate scheme of decoration carried out throughout the large building; there will be singing by well known vocalists and band concerts afternoon and evening throughout the week. In all there will be sixty-one complete lines of cars shown besides all the attractive exhibits of the oil and accessory firms.

The Kidnaped King

NARRATIVE OF CAPTAIN ADAMS

"Detective-Diplomat"

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

I NOW have to recount one of the most extraordinary of all the episodes that occurred during my work as courier to his majesty, King Edward the Seventh. This was the event of that fearful week of suspense and anguish in the spring of 1909, when his majesty was supposed to be at Biarritz, in Spain, recuperating after the English winter.

Needless to say, he was not in Biarritz then. He was, as a matter of fact—but let my story speak for itself.

At this period the relations existing between Great Britain and Germany were strained to the utmost. It was an open secret, among that small body of citizens of both countries that does not take its news from the papers, that war between the two states was imminent, and that it was to be declared by England. In fact, his majesty, believing that the increase in the German armaments was a direct menace to England, had resolved to begin hostilities before Easter.

I was then living in chambers in Half Moon street, Piccadilly. I had not been requisitioned by the government for several weeks, but I waited for a summons, and as the affair grew more serious and the prospects of peace darker, I knew that I might at any moment find myself called upon for immediate service upon some delicate mission. I was not surprised, therefore, when a royal landau appeared at the door of my house one morning and a cockaded footman, ascending the stairs, requested my instant presence before Prince George of Wales at Buckingham palace, where he was residing, having come up for Easter from White house, his suburban lodge at Richmond.

I was driven to the palace with all possible speed. Although I always discounted my experiences in advance, I was not prepared to find Prince George, usually the most immaculate of men, seated before an open grate fire in the library of his apartment, wrapped in a dressing gown, his eyes red, his hair disordered, while the table in front of him was heaped with cigar butts. At his side stood the king's secretary, the genial and garrulous Lord Knowles. The poor old gentleman was completely disconcerted and, sunk into a chair much too big for him, seemed like a feeble, elderly man.

When I entered the prince sprang to his feet and greeted me warmly, with self-possession. "Sit down, Captain Adams!" he began. "This is the most terrible business—" But he was interrupted by the entrance of a uniformed attendant.

"His excellency the German ambassador requests instant audience," he said, saluting.

"Tell him to go to the devil," cried Prince George heartily.

"His excellency the German ambassador demands instant audience, in the absence of the de facto head of the state," the attendant repeated mechanically.

I understand that, in accordance with diplomatic privileges, the ambassador was within his rights. The prince recognized this too. Hastily he threw off his dressing gown and robed himself in his frock coat. A moment later the ambassador was claiming audience.

"I hope the occasion justifies your demanding audience at this early hour," said the prince irritably.

"Yes, sir," the ambassador answered. "I am instructed by my government to ask your intentions in concentrating a large naval force in the German ocean."

"If you mean the North sea," the prince replied, "I must refer you to the king, my father."

"Ah, but where is the king?" asked the ambassador, smiling.

"You know!" shouted the prince, losing patience. "You have made a treacherous attack upon the person of my sovereign in time of peace, to hold him hostage. Do you think you will thus prevent the just anger of an outraged people?"

I saw the ambassador's face turn purple.

"Yes, I am not ignorant of what has occurred," he answered. "I shall report your accusation to my government. And with regard to the fleet in the German ocean—"

"Our fleet will sail up and down the North sea and wherever it chooses," Prince George shouted. Lord Knowles, alarmed, arose and came toddling up between the two men, but the ambassador, with a low bow, withdrew through the doorway. The prince sat down and mopped his brow.

"Now, Captain Adams," he said presently, "there is no time to lose. Let me acquaint you with the facts. Yesterday afternoon his majesty, my father, was strolling in the grounds of White house, Richmond, where I reside. He had motored down and, dismissing his suite, had wandered among the ornamental shrubberies until he was lost to sight. Suddenly the gentlemen in waiting were astonished to see a large dirigible gas balloon approaching from the east, swoop downward from the skies with astonishing celerity and come to a halt some three hundred yards away, just where his majesty was strolling. For a moment they were paralyzed with astonishment; then they heard the king's voice and ran to his aid. As they neared the spot the balloon rose suddenly into the air, carrying with it the king, whose form and features were plainly visible. The other man in the basket was seen to be detaining him; the balloon shot upward into the skies and, before anything could be done, was nothing but a blur in the distance. In short, my father was kidnaped."

"But the motive?" I interjected.

"That, Captain Adams, is known to us. The instrument is none other than the mysterious German machine which has been frightening all England at night by its mysterious journeyings. The German government undoubtedly obtained information of our plans in connection with them, and resolved, by kidnaping our sovereign, to hold him as a hostage for peace."

"And you have heard nothing more?" I asked.

"On the contrary," answered Prince George, "though, fortunately, the public believes that his majesty has departed for Biarritz, confidential requests for information as to the whereabouts of the balloon have been sent out to all the counties and to ships at sea. The miscreant was seen above the town of Ipswich, late last evening, flying low and burning red lights—doubtless as a signal to German vessels at sea. Now it is morally certain that he is making for the German coast, and yet, had he crossed the North sea, he would have been sighted by our patrol boats, which are strung out all along the English coast, from the Tyne to Southend, while the whole heavens are lit up by searchlights. No, the German seems to have disappeared into space. And yet, had he come to earth, he would have been discovered. I cannot make it out."

"I can tell you why he has not yet crossed the North sea," I interposed. "Doubtless his gas bag will not need replenishing for several days—with the new material almost all leakage can be prevented. And so he is sailing in the upper air, waiting for a chance to cross to Germany."

"A chance?" he cried.

"Yes. No dirigible made could face the easterly gale that has been blowing this last 24 hours."

"True," cried the prince, leaping to his feet. "Then what can we do?"

"We can go in pursuit of him," I answered. "If we had but an aeroplane, which could be free from restraints of wind, we could run him to earth within a day. Reports will be coming in—but has the government no machine?"

The prince touched a bell. "Ask Mr. Haldane to come here immediately," he told the page who answered.

Mr. Haldane, the war minister, had been in attendance at the palace for the past week. He came in promptly, rubbing his hands nervously, a nervous look upon his sleek, comfortable features. He nodded to me frigidly; since I had been attached to his majesty relations between us had been but frigid. He deemed me to be a common spy, I believe.

"Where is the army war aeroplane?" asked the prince.

"In care of the aero expert at Aldershot," the war secretary answered.

"Captain Adams," said the prince, turning to me, "I place you in charge of this affair. Do anything you think fit. The balloon is at your disposal."

"Pardon me," interposed the war minister, not too suavely, "but I think—"

"Haldane, give Captain Adams your authorization," interrupted the prince.

"I cannot," said the war minister doggedly. "I am responsible to parliament—"

"Good God! Is this a time to talk of parliament?" cried the prince, losing his temper. Then he sprang toward me. "By heaven, I'll go with you," he cried. "I'll see if they'll refuse to carry out my orders! Knowles! Knowles! Wake up, man. Please have my touring car brought round to the front of the palace in 15 minutes. I want a portmanteau packed. Hurry! Hurry!"

Punctually a quarter of an hour later we were spinning out of the palace yard, amid the cheers of the few who had assembled around the gates, and were taking the quickest cut for Aldershot, the chief military encampment. Mounted police sprang forward and drew back discreetly at sight of the prince's arms upon the vehicle. In ten minutes we were speeding through the heart of leafy Surrey. In less than an hour and a half we came in sight of the military encampment and were slackening speed before the headquarters of General French, the commander-in-chief, who had been advised by telegraph of our approach. He was waiting to welcome us and, having greeted the prince, put a telegram into his hands. It was from Chester. The balloon had been seen, apparently blown out of her course before the strong wind, but now the gale was slackening and she was beating up eastward.

"We can catch him yet if the aeroplane is working," said Prince George. General French was acquainted with the facts. He nodded.

"If," he said. "But can you steer it? Captain Cody, the American who has it in care, is on leave. He is hurrying back from the continent, but cannot return until tomorrow. Who can drive it?"

"His assistant?" cried the prince.

"He's had none since Peake left last week."

"Who the devil's Peake?" cried the prince.

"A damned Yankee," cried the general, nettled. "A Yankee assistant of Captain Cody, and the only other man who could drive the thing. He pestered us for six months to buy a new machine of his invention. When we refused to look at it he ended by threatening. He swore he'd teach the war office of England a lesson they'd never forget for not giving his new dirigible a trial. He said it was ten times as good as the aeroplane here that Cody's developing. Said the dirigible could outrace and outlast the aeroplane any time. We didn't want to lose him, but he got too violent, and he was discharged last week and went away, taking his machine with him and threatening vengeance."

"Let me try to drive the aeroplane," I urged.

"Impossible," said General French gravely.

"But damn it, man, we've got to catch the German before he reaches the east coast!"

"Too much at stake," the general answered. "It would take weeks to learn the mechanism. The machine would be smashed to atoms, even if she rose at all, and—"

He stopped short. There was a thunder of hoofs behind us and, as we turned our heads, we saw a man spring from the back of a swiftly-galloping horse and fall at our feet.

"Cody, by heaven!" the general cried. "How did you make the passage? There was no boat; you're the devil."

"I borrowed Farman's aero in Paris and ran her over to Dover," he answered. "Then train and race horse. Never mind. Can I sleep, or d' you want me?"

"Take out the machine," yelled the general, clasping his hand. "Here! get a bite to eat first and I'll tell you."

"Tell him all, general," said the prince. He turned to me. "You will accompany Captain Cody?"

I took out my watch.

"It's ten minutes past two," I answered. "The dirigible should be beating over the midlands. The wind is dropping. Sir, if the skies do not cloud I can pledge my word to you he shall never reach Germany."

"But how will you find him?" the prince asked.

"One can see half across England at an altitude well within our limits," I reminded him.

"Good!" cried the prince enthusiastically.

"I want two rifles, cartridges and a week's rations for two men," I said to General French, who had returned and was directing the removal of the aeroplane from her shed. A couple of soldiers were wheeling her out along a rail. She rocked and tipped—a slender, graceful thing, apparently landbound, like some swan upon earth, longing to spread her broad wings in the empyrean.

At an order from the general rifles, rations and cartridges were placed within the box. Captain Cody returned, wiping his mouth. He was dressed in a buffalo robe and staggering behind him under the weight of another came an orderly.

"You'll be glad of this up above," he said. "It's colder than sin." He looked in the tank. "Gasoline for seven hours," he said. "By thunder, we must fill up again if he leads us anything of a chase. Get in, comrade."

I had never entered an aeroplane before; I had not even been up in a balloon. I confess a thrill of fear ran through me. But I strapped on a bandolier full of cartridges and entered the narrow framework, to take my seat upon the narrow space allotted to me. Just then a man came running with a telegraphic dispatch. It was addressed to General French, but the prince tore it open.

"Huntingdon, he read. "Dirigible sighted, two thousand up. Heading northeast. Gale increasing.' By thunder, general, we'll get him yet." Suddenly his face grew grave. "Captain Adams," he said, "you will be careful of your cartridges?"

I understood.

"I will not shoot unless in the utmost extremity," I answered. I knew that he was thinking of his father. But a more serious danger he had not thought of. What if, hard pressed, the German should throw his companion overboard, as so much ballast, and fly to safety? Well, though the chance was slim, we could but do our utmost. And a few bullets through the gas bag should bring the great dirigible slowly to earth.

My musings were interrupted by a rush of wind. Could it be possible that we were away? The earth seemed to rush downward. The camp grew rapidly remote. We tipped and swung on every vagrant breeze, but gradually ascended until the strong gale from the east caught us and sent up spinning northward. The sensation was distinctly one of fear at first, but this was soon lost in wonder. And now I realized indeed how it would have been impossible for me, unaided, even to have launched the machine into space. Captain Cody, at my side, rode her like a yacht or a bicycle, or perhaps a combination of these, rising and falling upon the eddies of the wind. Under us a dark shadow began to spread.

"Fog," cried the captain, pointing downward. "London. We must rise higher."

Up, up, up we went until the aneroid registered 2,000 feet. We were scudding in the void, a furious wind from the east sustaining and lifting us.

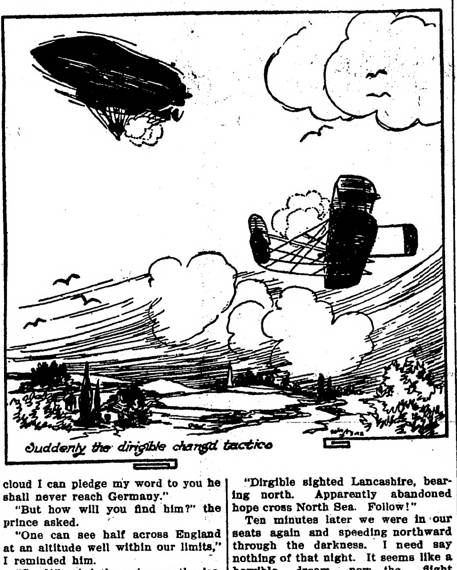
"Even we could never face that gale," said Cody. "He will not try in his gas bag. He will put about and make for the Yorkshire moors. And on the Humber we overhaul him."

He seemed to speak prophetically. London was left behind us. Far below towns and villages were spread out in endless panorama. And still we were far short of our destination. The day began to close in.

Finally, our gasoline all but exhausted, we came to earth in a disheartened state of mind, to find that we were on the outskirts of Lincoln. We filled up in the garage of a village, while gaping rustics stood surrounding us in awe. A guard was placed round the machine and a telegram sent to Aldershot.

"There's one consolation," said Cody as he paced the corridor of the restlessly; "he can't have made headway against that wind."

An hour later an answer was received from headquarters. It read:



Suddenly the dirigible changed tactics

"Dirigible sighted Lancashire, bearing north. Apparently abandoned hope cross North Sea. Follow!"

Ten minutes later we were in our seats again and speeding northward through the darkness. I need say nothing of that night. It seems like a horrible dream now—the flight through the darkness, the sudden squall that struck us in the lake country and sent us hurtling downward for a thousand feet before Cody regained control; the halt, to find ourselves at Appleton; the answer to our telegram at seven in the morning, desperately late, telling us to hasten northward. We would overhaul him in Scotland; he had been sighted in Argyll.

What was his purpose in this apparently desperate flight northward? And how could the king, an elderly man, endure his cramped quarters in that narrow car, exposed to the inclement weather of early April? With brimming tanks and empty hearts we pursued our desolate way northward, ever northward. Now we had reached the barren wastes of South Scotland. And then, suddenly, my heart leaped. I clasped Cody by the arm and pointed.

Far north of us a tiny speck was beating eastward against the gales.

Cody shouted and I cried back at him in ecstasy. I reached backward and slung the rifle to my arm. I opened the breech and inserted a clip of cartridges. And we beat our way onward.

Now the dirigible evidently perceived us and guessed who we were, for we saw it cease suddenly its attempted eastward flight and head northward again. We ran at full speed. I heard the motor plunging frantically behind us; in front the icy blasts nipped our faces. But, though we dipped and swung to every breeze, in front, almost immobile to appearance in its steady flight, the dirigible ran northward.

By noon we had gained little, if at all. Cody turned to me.

"I'm going to drop," he said. "There's a south wind, a cross-current, 500 feet below. See those geese riding in it?"

I looked down. Under us, riding easily upon the wind, a V-shaped flock of large birds were bearing steadily south. Cody depressed the steering plane. We sank with fearful suddenness. Then—we seemed to leap forward. In ten minutes our gain was evident. The dirigible was not more than a mile ahead and rapidly increasing. She seemed in terror, began to swing aimlessly hither and thither. Five minutes more! Cody whooped exultantly. Then—

The motor, which had whirred like an electric fan, chugged loudly and irregularly. We seemed to stop, hung poised, swooped downward. The motor had ceased. We rushed down—or rather the earth seemed to leap up at us. Cody raised the steering gear. That saved us; he guided her gently to the ground. Near by stood a little village of stone, ringing a low hill.

"Gasoline exhausted," yelled Cody, pointing to the dirigible, now rapidly lessening in the north. "No chance—get gasoline here. She'll burn—oil—great secret." We ran panting toward the village. Five minutes later we were at the door of the inn, an excited crowd around us.

"Oil," gasped Cody. "Paraffin—any quantity."

"We've na paraffin," cried the innkeeper. "We burn candles nights. Ye'll no find paraffin norte o' Glasgow. Except a little gasoline for the motor cars. Now if ye had wanted that!—"

That saved us. Half an hour after the disaster our tanks were filled and we were away. And, in the distance, a little speck still hung between heaven and earth!

But this time there could be no escape. Little by little we drew nearer. Now, through my glasses, I could make out the car—long and low—and a figure that reclined in it and another that leaned back at us and shook its fist in impotent defiance. I unslung my rifle.

"Fifteen hundred," cried Cody. "Aim high, for the bag."

I fired. I saw the fugitive raise rifle to shoulder too. And something hissed overhead and a splinter fell from the wooden frame of the aeroplane.

"Thirteen," cried Cody. Suddenly the dirigible changed tactics. She swung in a wide circle and came directly toward us. This was madness—gas against steel. I fired four times; I saw the dirigible falter, hover, poised, and begin slowly to subside. Her bag was pierced in several places. I dared fire no more, for fear of sending her in collapse to the ground with her precious burden.

We were right over them when he fired again. We were some 1,500 feet up, and 200 above the slowly sinking dirigible. I heard Cody give a cry, looked round, saw the blood spurt from his sleeve and his right arm fall from the steering gear. An instant later a breeze struck us and tipped us. The aeroplane wheeled, swung like a condor that is caught by an unexpected breeze, and suddenly rushed earthward at a furious speed. I saw a mocking face that peered out at me from the dirigible as we swooped past, and fired my last cartridge at it. The ground swept up toward us—and stayed! Cody had caught the steering gear with his uninjured hand.

Five minutes later we stood on the solid ground and watched the dirigible, like a wounded bird, drop gently earthward. From the rent silk the gas was escaping slowly. We caught the guy rope and pulled her down like a floating feather. There, within, lay the king, in the bottom of the car. But it was not for him that Cody cried, but at sight of the wounded man beside him who clung desperately to the car rim.

"Peake!" he shouted.

"Yep, Peake," he answered, staggering where he stood. "I told 'em I'd teach the war office a lesson they'd never forget for not looking at my machine!"

"Well, Peake," said Cody, "you've tried her against mine and lost out with her."

Peake stepped out like a drunken man. His face was ashen.

"W-w-wouldn't have lost it—I'd had as light a passenger as you," he answered, and fell fainting at our feet.

There were many who would have brought Peake to trial for his adventure, and it was thought for long that he was, in fact, a German agent. But it seemed to me that the German ambassador had actually known nothing of the kidnaping until told by confederates among King Edward's suite, and that, learning his country was suspected, he had shrewdly refused to deny his share in the conspiracy, thereby actually gaining his object in postponing the declaration of war. Before his majesty could be removed to London assurances had been given and received by Germany, and the disaster was averted. But when I think how a half-crazy American saved the peace of Europe I often wonder whether he should not have been rewarded instead of shipped out of the country as a criminal lunatic.

BACK THE VULNERABLE PART

Comparatively Easy to Kill Snake by Striking It With Cane or Stone.

The first impulse of a man on seeing a snake is to stamp on its head, which, according to the Rosary Magazine, is unwise. A snake's skull is very tough, as behooves a part of the body that is always liable to be knocked against stones, etc., owing to the extreme short-sightedness of all serpents.

The back, on the contrary, can be broken with a light rap, for it consists of a delicate system of ball and socket joints. Should snakes be harmless the best plan is to leave them alone; should they be dangerous a shot from a revolver is safe and effective.

In case no revolver is at hand a rap with a cane will be sufficient, but care must be taken to keep away from the head of the creature.

A snake does not normally go about hitting its skull against hard objects; it only does this when in a hurry. Moving at its ordinary pace it feels its way with its long, delicate, forked tongue.

In the same way when about to swallow its food it touches it all over with its tongue in order to ascertain where to take hold, and this process has given rise to the mistaken idea that a snake covers its prey with saliva prior to swallowing it. No doubt a considerable quantity of saliva is generated during the process of deglutition, but it does not come from the tongue, which is merely used as a feeler.

When a snake bites it bisects its head up to the nape of its neck and opens its jaws till they are in the same plane, i. e., at right angles to the body. These jaws are provided with six rows of strong, sharp teeth, four on the upper and two on the lower jaw.

This is a very formidable arrangement, but when you remember that a medium-sized constrictor can project its head with sufficient force to knock a man off his feet, and will either on provocation or sometimes without it, let go this catapult, rat-trap machinery, you are likely to avoid constrictors so far as is possible. Such a snake can take hold of a man and shake him or strip the skin and flesh from the part seized as if it were paper.

A Clear Distinction.

"Sorry you couldn't git to the Sit and Argue club last night, 'squire," sympathetically said Hi. Spry. "We had considerable of a discussion. I want to tell you! Prof. Twiggs pretty nearly convinced the rest of us that the planet Mars is not inhabited. He contended that if there is no life on Mars—"

"What's that got to do with it?" interjected the Old Codger. "Even if there is no life on Mars it don't follow that Mars is uninhabited. Look at this town, right here, for instance!"—Puck.

IN THE SPONGING SEASON

How Valuable Utensil of the Bathroom Is Brought From the Ocean's Depths.

From October until July the sponging season in the Bahamas is in full swing. There are several thousand men and boys engaged in the fishery, each schooner carrying a crew of from five to seven. The sponges are found all over the banks, which vary in depth from two to four fathoms.

Arrived on the ground, the small boats, of which each schooner carries two or three, put off, manned each by two men, one of whom sculls, while the other, armed with a 30-foot pole bearing at the end a double hook, lies extended over the bow and examines the bottom through a "sponge glass," or bucket with a glass bottom. Laying this upon the surface, he sees everything below as clearly as if no water intervened.

The sponges when found are hooked up, and as soon as the schooner's deck is filled she sails away to a "ranche," where she deposits her evil-smelling load in a "crawl," or inclosure of wattles in shallow water, where it remains for a couple of weeks, during which the crew are fishing for a fresh cargo.

On their return all hands enter the crawl and beat out the now rotted fleshy parts of the sponges, which when first gathered present the appearance of round masses of dark india-rubber, freely perforated.

When the fleshy part has been thoroughly removed and the marketable skeleton washed the heap is laid on shore in a secluded spot and the schooner starts again for the sponge banks. At length, when enough sponges have been gathered and cleaned to load the vessel they are sorted by the crew into glove, reef, lambs' wool, grass, etc., and each kind is separately strung in rings of from one to two dozen.

In this way they are sold at auction in the sponge exchange, when the first step of the preparation for the consumer is carried out by the sponge merchants. The sponges are exposed to the sun to improve their color. They are then clipped and all irregularities and pieces of shell or rock are removed.—Harper's Weekly.

City and Country Prices.

Mr. Citiman—What in the world are you carrying?

Mr. Suburb—Milk and eggs and vegetables and things.

Mr. Cityman—Huh! Why don't you buy them in the country, where you live?

Mr. Suburb—I'm too poor.—New York Weekly.

One Exception.

"I admit I'm out for money all the time," said Hussel. "There's only one thing I could ever be induced to do for my health."

"What's that?" queried Ascum.

SERIAL STORY

No Man's Land

A ROMANCE

By Louis Joseph Vance

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety.

"A change has come over the spirit of our dream—yes?" Appleyard inquired. "Nothing like food on the human stomach to make the skies seem brighter. Not that it seems to affect this weather any: it's thick as curds. We ought to pick up that buoy before long—won't be happy till I get it."

"You're sure about this thing?" asked Coast, perhaps not quite coherently. The other seemed to understand him, none the less.

"Ab-solut-lully," he returned. "I know where we started from and what we're aiming for; this is a perfectly good compass, so long as you keep it from flirting with the coil; and I've made allowance for a lee-tide. You watch!"

Coast sat down. "Well?" he said, with the air of one no longer to be denied.

"Wel-l," said the little man reluctantly, "if you must know all . . ." Coast received an amused glance. "I read the papers."

"What's that go to do—"

"So, when you were kind enough to tell me your real name, after your gallant rescue yesterday morning, I knew at once just who and what you were."

"O!" said Coast, a thought blankly.

"Just so. It never occurred to you that you were a public character, in a way? I noticed that. And your lack of self-consciousness interested me. Also the aroma of mystery you exhale, intrigued (if I may coin the word) my romantic imagination."

Coast flushed. "The deuce it did!" he exclaimed angrily.

"Don't lose your temper—please. I know I sound impertinent, but I don't mean to be so; it's just my temprymant makes me such a cut-up. . . . When I waked up before you did yesterday, I thought it all out, and I sez to myself, sez I: 'His biography ain't half-written yet, and unless I'm mistaken something grievous, Romance is a-leadin' of him by the hand, like a little che-ild. If I can work it, I'm goin' to stick round and see what happens next.' You see, it's my business to go about nosing into other people's."

"I see," said Coast curtly, with a feeling of contempt which he took no trouble to disguise.

"Yes," assented Appleyard serenely. "I make my living that way. Government pays me a handsome salary for doing it."

"What!" A light was beginning to dawn upon Coast.

The little man nodded gravely. "The U. S. Secret Service," he affirmed.

"Let us begin at the beginning, for clearer undrestanding," Appleyard continued. "I'm not here for my health—I'm on the job; and things have shaped round so that I want your help temporarily—while you certainly need mine. That's why I'm letting you in by the basement door and speaking in stage whispers. You get me? What I'm telling you is to be kept under your hat."

"Certainly; that's understood."

"Right you are. . . . Now, the particular phase of lawless industry at present engaging my distinguished professional attention is"—he allowed himself the dramatic pause—"smuggling. For some time the Treasury Department has been aware that a very considerable quantity of highly dutiable goods was finding its way into the country—mainly for the New York markets—without paying toll. A syndicate of Maiden Lane jewelers has been reaping most of the profit, although other goods have been coming through; but that's by the way. Now the Customs net is fine enough to assure us that no such heavy importations could have been sneaked in through any regular port of entry. All we were certain of was that it was getting in duty free—though we couldn't prove even that. . . . So then, I was turned loose on the problem, and I've been puzzling over it for six months."

He was briefly silent, apparently in reminiscent mood. "Early in the game," he resumed, "I had cause to believe that most of the stuff was seeping in through New England. So I sat me down and tried to figure it out from the other side's point of view—supposing I wanted to turn the trick on my own account. See?"

"Clearly. Go on."

"Being a product of this neck o' the woods made it some easier; I know the coast pretty thoroughly. It struck me how all-fired easy it would be to establish a depot for the reception of goods on one of these little islands hereabouts—or even at some retired point on the mainland. Then one could ship the stuff over by any old unlikely tramp, trans-ship it to a smaller vessel at some agreed point off the coast, and stow it away for distribution practically at one's own convenience. With such a central station, the stuff could be smuggled to the railroad through any number of small harbors—a trunkful here, a trunkful there, all disguised as passenger baggage; and these waters are so thick with small craft that their comings and goings attract practically no attention. . . . Plausible, feasible—yes?"

"Ingenious, certainly."

"To cut it short, I finally satisfied myself that the schooner employed for the trans-shipment was the fisherman that, as you saw, preferred my room to my company. I took a chance there, like a fool—lucky to get off with a whole skin. But by the time I hit the water I felt pretty sure they had some sure-enough good reason for not wanting any strangers hanging round."

"I'd think you justified in assuming that much."

"The worst of it was, that mishap made me a marked man; I'd been a wee mite too indiscreet. For a while I thought I'd have to fade into the background and let one of my brother sleuths polish off the job. You can fancy how that would have galled. Fortunately you offered yourself—"

"I like that," Coast commented.

"Anyway, my magnificent imagination offered you to me," Appleyard pursued without loss of countenance. "I began to see how easy it would be to snoop along the coast as your crew—inconspicuous, unsuspected. You seemed to have only the vaguest idea of what you wanted to do, where you wanted to cruise. And I'd begin to suspect myself of failure of the parts of speech if I couldn't insidiously talk you into going where I wanted to—No Man's Land, Muskeget, Tuckernuck, Chappaquiddick, or wherever."

"I'm ready to certify you're qualified to talk the hind legs off the domestic mule," Coast averred with enthusiasm.

"Don't worry; I'm a merciful man. . . . Rather cheap, that—what?"

"Extremely."

"Your fault; you fed it to me. I'm beginning to think you must be the only original, perfectly-pasteurised mascot. Since we met the very stars have seemed to battle in their course for me. Even the fog helped—shunting us off to No Man's Land."

"Yes—?"

"I had no particular notion of investigating that island first of all; but a number of circumstances made me suspect we were in its neighborhood. I had figured it out that the variation of the magnetised compass must have carried us sou'west, for one thing; and the absence of fog signals made me think we must have got well south of the main-traveled routes; finally, I knew that, once south of Devil's Bridge, the set of the tide would snake us out toward No Man's Land. So, when we ran aground and I went ashore, leaving you asleep, I wasn't surprised to recognize the place."

"You could—in that fog?"

"I've an excellent memory, and had visited the island a good many times on fishing trips when I was a boy in these parts. That abandoned fishing village made me sure of my ground; in the days when the bluefish ran in these waters there used to be quite a settlement there. . . . However, I'm fortunate in the possession of a sense of locality something above the average, and though it was pitch dark, at first, and thick as mud, I wasn't afraid of losing myself. So I struck out boldly, and by daylight had made a number of interesting discoveries. . . . Hello! . . . Good morning, Twenty-seven!"

The little man got up and bowed profoundly, as to a valued acquaintance, to a black can buoy conspicuously numbered "27," swimming past in a grey wash of seas to starboard.

"Some navigatin', that!" Appleyard observed complacently. Coast watched Appleyard shift the spokes until the Echo swung upon a course at a salient angle to that which she had been holding. "And now where?"

Appleyard looked up from the binnacle. "No'th by east," he said abstractedly; then, rousing: "Quick's Hole, and it please you. I venture to recommend the spot. It's quiet, retired, charmingly salubrious: quite a cosy corner for a day's loaf."

"Loaf!" exclaimed Coast in exasperation.

"Tut," said the little man in a tone of mild reproof; "and again tut. Eftsoons I will a tale unfold that'll shed a heap of light upon the plot of this issue of the Half-Dime Library. Know you not that Desmond the Dachshund Detective is on the scent? . . . Le's see: where'd I get off?"

"You were on the point of making some interesting discoveries," Coast prompted patiently.

"To be sure. . . . As I was about to say, I felt my way along, lost it, and presently stumbled onto what seemed a pretty raw slice of melodrama. . . . The first thing I struck for was the farmhouse. Last I heard of the island, it was inhabited by a single family, a farmer, his wife and a couple of kids. Must've been a bit lonesome, but they didn't seem to mind. They do say the man once petitioned the State Legislature to build a school-house on the island to educate his offspring, on the ground that as a taxpayer he was entitled to their schooling at the expense of the Commonwealth. Shrewd customer: as I recall it he nominated himself for the job of janitor and his wife to be school-mistress, both on salary! . . .

I had it in mind to pump him, you see, but somehow I missed the farmhouse, the first cast. And when I pulled up to take soundings I heard a curious sort of noise—singular in that locality, at least; one of those noises that, once heard, is never forgotten; as nearly as I can describe it, a sort of ripping crash—very irregular in duration and much muffled by distance and fog. I picked up my ears and tried to mark down the quarter it came from. Then I followed it up as best I could. After two or three false turns I fell over what seemed to be a wire stay, groped round and found a mast. The noise had stopped by this time, but I knew what had made it without doubt; that mast was an aerial, and I'd been listening to somebody operating a wireless station. Next thing, I made out a glow of light that led me to a window. By now I was interested and laying very low.

"We Ought Pick Up That Buoy Before Long—"

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

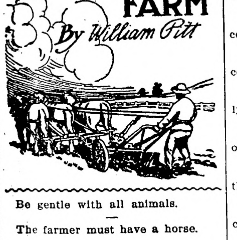
By William Pitt



Be gentle with all animals.

The farmer must have a horse.

Examine the collars of your work horses often.

With the better poultry is coming better equipment.

A heated chicken house is a bad thing for poultry.

The proper time to spray fruit trees is during the dormant season.

Well-bred, well-selected pigs, make more profit on the food eaten.

A horse in order to keep in good condition should be well bedded every night.

A machine in the shed is worth just about two machines left in the fence corner.

The brood sows should have all the bright clover or alfalfa hay that they will eat.

The cleaner the feed and feeding places, the better the quality of the pork in all.

It is conducive to health to feed hogs when they can have the range of the pasture field.

Those seeds, like the elm and soft maple, which ripen in May or June, belong to the "sooner" class.

Never work a team of colts together until they are thoroughly broken, as they will worry each other.

Filling up the neglected holes about the drinking tank is now in order. Fill them up now and avoid trouble.

The man who calls improved stock "fancy stock" will have an account to settle with his Maker on the judgment day.

Carry your good care of the ewes this fall as far as feeding plenty of nice bright oats to keep them in condition.

The old troughs will soon have to replace the fountain waterers or there may be a burst fountain some cold morning.

After the strawberry bed has been set and cared for through the summer, it should be mulched through the winter.

The milk should be strained through one thickness of clean white flannel and then should be quickly cooled and well aired.

Wise turkey breeders will not breed from the same tom more than one year unless the same breeding hens are retained.

No matter how highly bred and carefully cultured a colt may be if it is not carefully trained and properly developed it loses its value.

The first thing to do with the newly-born lamb is to get it full of the ewe's first milk, after which its chance for living is equal to that of the calf's.

For general or common use, caustic or burnt lime or ground limestone are employed almost exclusively for the correction of soil abnormalities.

Wetting the hoofs with a sponge and clean water every day, or simply dipping each foot into a pail of water, will keep the feet from becoming dry.

If there are two kinds of roughness for the cows this winter it will be better to feed of both at the same time rather than to feed out one then start on the other.

Look out for a collar that rubs a lap of flesh at every stride of the horse. It is liable to wear a gall on his neck, and much sooner sometimes than suspected.

The neck and shoulders of a horse are points that must not be overlooked when buying. A weak neck and a narrow breast do not go with the most desirable horse.

During the winter the dairy farmer has more time to figure out his plans for improving his system of farming. The great question should be to get a better and more profitable lot of cows.

It would be easier to keep good men on the farm if the dairy farmers would keep better cows. A man appreciates the opportunity of handling good stock, and he realizes that some responsibility is placed upon him if he knows that nothing but valuable and profitable cattle are kept.

Rape is popular with hogs.

Very fat fowls are poor layers.

A horse suffering from colic should be kept quiet.

Asparagus may also be forced near cellar furnaces.

As tillers of the soil, earth worms constitute a great army.

Put kerosene on the roosts frequently to keep down chicken lice.

Teach the colt to eat a mixture of oats, wheat bran and linseed meal.

There is something in the first milk that the calf needs, and should have.

Remember to treat your cow with consideration in these days and nights.

The demands on the foal's digestive system for nourishment is very great.

A flock of ewes rightly handled should produce 125 per cent. of lambs.

It is the income from each sheep that should determine the value of the flock.

Every progressive keeper separates the light-colored honey from the dark fall honey.

Unless the bird is extremely valuable the ax is the best remedy for a sick chicken.

The cow that is allowed to fall off in her milk flow is seldom made to regain it at a profit.

Skimp your sheep on good pasture and they will skimp you on mutton. Works both ways.

Rabbits do great damage to young trees during winter, especially when snow covers the ground.

The use of fruit is a great help toward keeping in good health, and more of it should be grown.

It's a mistake to expect the miraculous or abnormal from your cows. Better make them work naturally.

If sows are expected to raise a fall litter, it is best to wean the spring pigs at from 8 to 10 weeks old.

When there is good stuff in the feed box the heifer soon learns to be a good barn cow when night comes.

Do not try to winter the cows without grain. Wheat bran, corn-meal and oil-meal will be found valuable.

Sheep are comfort lovers and the man who neglects to provide them with good, dry shelter makes a costly error.

Irregularity in feeding—that is, a good ration one day and a poor one the next, will play havoc with the best of cows.

Peach trees can be planted any time between last and first frost; the earlier in the winter they are planted the better.

A queen bee lives from two to five years, workers from forty-five days to six months, and drones seldom more than five weeks.

Some breeders claim that six or seven weeks is long enough for the pigs to remain with the sow, but this, I think, is extreme.

The pig is merely a meat producing machine and the more he is fed—with good judgment, of course—the more meat he will turn over.

All living plants have definite needs every day during their growth, and if these needs are not supplied fully or regularly bad results must follow.

While the orchard is coming into bearing try vegetable growing as a side line. This makes one of the surest and best resources of income.

It will pay to buy wheat bran to mix with the barley or corn meal for feeding cows. Bran and barley meal half and half makes good meal for milk.

The best roosting place for young turkeys is on branches of trees. They will not suffer from exposure, and the open life will make them strong and healthy.

Some milkers handle the teats as if they were made of rubber and devoid of all feeling; but, strange to say, there are nerves in the udder which are very sensitive.

We like to see the cows approach their master in the yard to be scratched and petted. It shows that they are used to kind treatment and are not afraid of him.

In the feeding of live stock there is a chance for a large leak and yet have it unknown. The most economical feed is the one that supplies the animal's needs at the least expense.

The safest bull the dairyman can use is generally a cross bull. At first this may seem a strange assertion. The reason, however, is simple. The bull that is known to be cross will always be watched. On the other hand, it is easy to put too much confidence in a tame bull that may suddenly become cross.

RAILROAD MAN WRITES REMARKABLE LETTER.

In 1903 and 1904, I was a terrible sufferer for about five months with kidney and bladder trouble. I could not sleep nights. One doctor said I was going into consumption and gave me up to die. Had two other doctors but received no help from either of them and am sure I would have been in my grave had I not seen your advertisement in the "Marinette Daily Eagle Star." After taking several bottles of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root I was entirely cured.

In the last two years I have been a railroad fireman and have passed two examinations for my kidneys successfully so that I know that my kidneys are in excellent condition now as a result of your great preparation.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE KENSLER,
109½ 13th Ave. So., Minneapolis, Minn.

Personally appeared before me this 25th of September, 1909, George Kensler, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

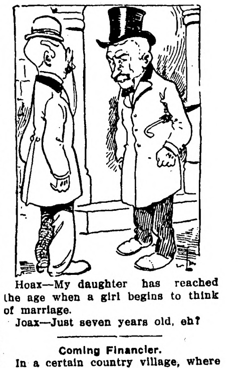
Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention this paper. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

THE WAY NOWADAYS.



Hoax—My daughter has reached the age when a girl begins to think of marriage.

Joax—Just seven years old, eh?

Coming Financier.

In a certain country village, where co-operation has a firm hold on the inhabitants, and where the "trading check" habit also flourishes, one little girl proudly called to another:

"We've got a new baby at our house!"

"Where did you get it?" was the reply.

"Oh, the doctor brought it."

"Now why," queried the thrifty little sympathizer gravely, "didn't you buy it at the store and get either a dividend or a trading stamp? The doctor doesn't give either, does he?"

"Those Youthful Prodigies."

"Will wonders never cease?" said Jones to his wife. "Here is an account of a six-year-old boy who can work the most difficult problems in algebra."

"Remarkable!" admitted Mrs. Jones, "but I know a four-year-old girl that knows Greek. Where does your little wonder live?"

"In Boston. Where does your linguistic marvel live?"

Mrs. Jones gazed out of the window with a far-away look in her eyes as she answered: "In Greece."—National Food Magazine.

SURPRISED DOCTOR.
Illustrating the Effect of Food.

The remarkable adaptability of Grape-Nuts food to stomachs so disordered that they will reject everything else, is illustrated by the case of a woman in Racine, Wis.

"Two years ago," she says, "I was attacked by a stomach trouble so serious that for a long time I could not take much of any sort of food. Even the various kinds prescribed by the doctor produced most acute pain.

"We then got some Grape-Nuts food and you can imagine my surprise and delight when I found that I could eat it with a relish and without the slightest distress.

"When the doctor heard of it he told me to take several small portions each day, because he feared I would grow tired of it as I had of all other food.

"But to his surprise, (and that of everybody else), I did not tire of Grape-Nuts, and became better day by day, till, after some weeks, my stomach entirely recovered and I was able to eat anything my appetite craved.

"My nerves, which had become so weakened that I feared I would become insane, were also restored by the Grape-Nuts food in connection with Postum which has become our table beverage. I appreciate most gratefully and thankfully the good that your food preparations have done me, and shall be glad to answer any letters inquiring as to my experience." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

"Eberhart, the interests' taffy dummy," is the way the Karlstad Advocate speaks of our governor. It has the ring of truth, too.

A Chicago man says Christ is coming back to earth again within the next twenty years. He should come sooner than that if some of the Chicago politicians are to be saved.

Duluth has a barber who advertises hair cutting for 15 cents. Some of 'em charge 35 cents that do not advertise at all, but get awful sore if the local newspaper fails to give 'em a chunk of free advertising every time they turn around.

There are 700 co-operative creameries in Minnesota, which have been built, equipped and are managed by 70,000 of the foremost farmers in the state. It is only 20 years since co-operative creameries were started in this state, and the showing in this line of industry is remarkable. If co-operation succeeds in one thing it ought to succeed in other matters.—Roseau Region.

Authier, who is said to be close to the governor and Ed Smith, is trying his hand at fixing up a slate for delegates from Minnesota to the 1912 Republican National convention. His list of probabilities contains the names of several good, deserving men, but it is also loaded down with the names of a lot of has-beens, political hacks, spineless echoes and influenceless hangers-on of the machine. If the delegation be made up from Authier's list, it will not be one representative of the best citizenship of the state.—Warren Register.

Over at Oslo a local business man stopped his subscription to the local newspaper a few days ago. He was also a very poor advertiser, so that the editor loses nothing by his stopping the paper, or by publishing the fact and commenting on it. When a business man treats his home paper that way he very evidently intends that the editor shall be forced to get out of town, and the paper be killed off. Sometimes papers are put out in that way, but the town and its business men are branded as being no good and their obituary comes in next.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed bids will be received by the County Auditors of Marshall and Beltrami Counties up to 2 o'clock P. M. of February 2nd, 1912, at Warren, Minnesota, for installing culverts (by separate townships or the whole work) on Judicial Ditch No. 11. Bidders to state the price per foot. Specifications to be obtained of W. R. Hoag, Engineer, Rollis, Minn. Sealed bids will also be received for hauling eleven tons of sectional cast iron culverts Middle River to the center of section 19, town 157, range 40. Bidders to state the price per ton for hauling.

All bidders will be required to give a satisfactory bond for the amount of the contract to be approved by the said Auditors.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check on a State or National Bank of Minnesota for at least 10 per cent of the amount of the bid.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids,

Dated at Warren, Minnesota, this 3th day of January, A. D. 1912.

THIS PAPER WILL HELP YOU

WHAT would be thought of a public official who did not read the papers? Even the criticisms of him are valuable pointers as to how he may render better service.

HE IS ELECTED TO REPRESENT THE PUBLIC. THE NEWSPAPERS ARE THE VOICE OF THE PUBLIC.

The paper is a help to every class. The workingman may find through it a chance to better his situation. It is an invaluable aid to the housewife in her shopping.

The boy who reads the papers may go some day to the state senate or to congress. The one who does not will vegetate.

Have You
LAND TO SELL?

I am now preparing to issue my first 1912 List of Lands for sale in eastern Marshall County. If you want to sell your land this year I can find a buyer, and NOW is the proper time to get your land listed for early advertising.

The agent who does no advertising may sell a farm once in a great while, but the systematic advertiser is sure of getting the business all the time. Call or write to me before tying up your land with some agent who wants to keep it off the market until he gets HIS price for it instead of YOUR price.

In Japan the Rich Pay More.

A common complaint made by tourists in Japan is that they are obliged to pay for everything far higher prices than the natives are charged, or, in other words, that because they are foreigners they are being fleeced, but a glance at the social conditions by which the people have been educated would reveal the curious fact that throughout Japan's long period of isolation it was an accepted principle that the rich must live for the sake of the poor, and prices have always been based upon the purchaser's rank in society or upon his presumed ability to pay. This understanding remains largely in force today, being fully recognized and acted upon by all favored classes throughout the empire.

The occidental, coming from lands where the reverse practically holds good—the poor living for the sake of the rich—naturally complains of being robbed, as from his point of view he really is, but it is not because he is a foreigner, but because, being a tourist, he is presumably wealthy.—Arthur May Knapp in the Atlantic.

Saved the Crown Jewels.

A very romantic adventure once befell the Scottish crown jewels while they were deposited for safety in Dunottar castle. This stronghold was besieged by Cromwell so hotly that the little garrison decided to surrender. On the eve of yielding the wife of Ogilvie, the commander of the beleaguered castle, managed, with the aid of the wife of the local minister, to elude the besiegers and get the jewels away. The latter were buried under the pulpit in the parish church and lay there till the restoration, though the minister and his wife were tortured to disclose the place where the jewels were hidden. Ogilvie was afterward rewarded with a baronetcy, and Keith, who stoutly declared he had seen them in the possession of the exiled King Charles II., was made an earl. But the faithful minister and his wife went unrewarded.

Old Superstitions.

It is only when we begin to investigate the origin of certain old customs and superstitions that we gain any real idea of how deeply rooted in men's minds during the dark and middle ages was the fear of the supernatural and particularly of evil spirits. To this day in a certain country the cottagers after the Saturday morning scrubbing take a piece of chalk and draw a rough geometrical pattern round the edge of the threshold stone. This they do, not knowing that their ancestors thought it a sure way of keeping the devil from entering the house. Another custom, often noticeable in country parishes, is the reluctance to bury the dead on the north side of the churchyard. This is because evil spirits were always supposed to lurk on that side of the church precincts.—London Spectator.

The Gentle Sex.

An eminent English statistician has calculated that of two children, a boy and a girl, born on the same day the boy will have only seventeen chances against eleven of living one year, while the girl will have twenty-one chances against eleven. From five to fifteen there appears to be but little difference, but from fifteen to nineteen the boy will have 269 chances and the girl 277 chances of living against one of death. If a thousand ablebodied men and a thousand ablebodied women be armed and equipped for battle and ordered on a long, weary march more men, says this authority, would probably reach their destination, while more women would be found exhausted, but more men would be found dead by the wayside.—New York American.

A Connoisseur.

A great painter was asked by his little son, "Father, what is a connoisseur?"

"Well, my son," the father answered, "did you notice that tall, white haired gentleman at my studio tea yesterday?"

"The one with the sable lined overcoat, father? Oh, yes, I noticed him."

"Well, my son, he is a connoisseur."

"But how do you know he's a connoisseur, father?"

"By his actions, my son."

"But, father, he acted like every one else at the tea, didn't he?"

"Certainly not, my son! Certainly not! The others drank my Russian tea, ate my foie gras sandwiches and took leave. But he—he bought a picture!"

A Biting Retort.

Lady Wortley Montagu, one of England's most brilliant women, incurred Pope's undying hatred in the following manner: The poet, who was deformed and very dark and addicted to questioning everybody, once asked her to define an interrogation mark. She defined it as "a little, crooked black thing that asks questions."

Particular Woman.

Judge—She insisted on having a woman lawyer secure her divorce.

"Why was she so particular?"

"She did not want to go contrary to that portion of the marriage ceremony that reads, 'Let no man put asunder.'"—New York Herald.

His Use For Soap.

"Lady," said Meandering Mike, "would you lend me a cake of soap?"

"Do you mean to tell me you want soap?"

"Yes'm. Me partner's got de hiccups an' I want to scare him."—Washington Star.

Ignorance.

Have the courage to be ignorant of a great number of things, in order to avoid the calamity of being ignorant of everything.—Sydney Smith.

He Was Prepared.

An honest old Philadelphia Quaker was refused a vote because he could not show the necessary papers. He attempted to cast his ballot, but was turned down by an inspector.

"Why, my friend, thee knows me. Thee knows that I live in thy ward," said the Quaker.

"I know you by sight, but I must see your papers," was the reply.

"I would not tell thee a falsehood. I have the papers at home, and I will go and bring them to thee."

"Get the necessary papers and you can vote."

The old gentleman went home and got the papers and cast his ballot. The next year he again appeared at the polls and the same inspector challenged his vote.

"Surely thee would not have me go again a mile to get thee my papers?" asked the Quaker. "Thee must know that I have a vote."

"No papers, no vote, sir," answered the inspector.

"I thought thee might be so vicious," said the old man, as a smile played under his broadbrim, "and I have brought them with me this time. Thee will not have the pleasure of having me walk a mile for them. I will bring them next year, too."—Washington Star.

Wall Street's Name.

Wall street got its name from a military wall or earthworks that was thrown up by the Dutch in 1654. The English colonists in Connecticut, laying claim to all the land "as far as the ocean," moved down and settled on Westchester creek in what is now Bronx borough. The Dutch of New Amsterdam were in great fear of a hostile move down on them and sent an armed force to arrest the approach of the invaders. At the same time they hastily built the wall from river to river to make sure of effective resistance if the enemy should decide to make a hostile move against New Amsterdam. For a time a regular patrol of soldiers was distributed along the military wall, detachments being assigned to keep close guard over the two gates in the wall, one at what is now Broadway and the other at the East river end. At that period the wall marked the northern boundary of the town of New Amsterdam.—New York Times.

Not Discouraged.

"There's a New York man," said a Brooklynite, "whose daughter during a winter in Nice got engaged to a certain Count Beau de Beau. The New York man was rich at that time, but a few weeks before the date set for the wedding he went to smash.

"'My dear Count Beau de Beau,' he groaned that night, 'I'm very sorry for you. You are to marry my daughter—you were to have had $2,000 a year—but the crash has come. I'm ruined now. How sorry I am, count!'

"But Count Beau de Beau gave the New York man a reassuring slap on the back.

"'Oh, don't you worry about me, sir,' he said, with an easy laugh. 'With a title like mine, you know, I can find another heiress tomorrow.'"—Exchange.

"Overhang" Houses.

By the year 1670 wooden chimneys and log houses of the Plymouth and Bay colonies were replaced by more sightly houses of two stories, which were frequently built with the second story jutting out a foot or two over the first and sometimes with the attic story still further extending over the second story. This "overhang" is popularly supposed to have been built for the purpose of affording a convenient shooting place from which to repel the Indians. This is, however, an historic fable. The overhanging second story was a common form of building in England in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and the Massachusetts and Rhode Island settlers simply and naturally copied their old homes.

England's Silver Greyhounds.

The "silver greyhounds," as the king's foreign service messengers are called, wear a broad silver disk stamped with a greyhound in full gallop, surmounted with a crown. They are intrusted with the most delicate duties. The chief qualification for the post, as defined by Lord Palmerston to a friend who applied to him for the office, is a knowledge of the gentle art of "holding your tongue in several languages."—London Express.

Declined With Thanks.

The Duke of Wellington, who had a taste for anything that Napoleon had liked, applied to David, the artist, who had painted Napoleon's portrait, requesting David to execute one of himself.

"Sir," replied David, "I paint only historical characters."—Life.

He Began to Talk Business.

"I shall make you love me yet," declared Mr. Stinjay determinedly. "I shall leave no stone unturned."

"Ah, that sounds something like!" exclaimed the fair girl. "If the stone weighs not less than a carat and is pure white you may interest me."

Too Short.

"I don't like these modern sermons much."

"Why not?"

"They're over before a man fairly gets to sleep."—Detroit Free Press.

Bring us the news.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

When in town call at this office and let's get acquainted.

Carl Steinhauer was a visitor at the Heiser home in Excel Sunday.

Attend the big Poverty Dance at the Woodman hall tomorrow night.

Rudolph Sagamoen of New Solum, was a business visitor here Monday.

Miss Edna Risberg is confined to her bed with an attack of illness that looks like the grip.

The Ladies Aid will hold their next meeting at Fred Larson's place on February 7th. All welcome.

The creamery report for December was received too late for publication this week and will appear in our next issue.

Moss Dora Peterson returned yesterday to her home at Thief River Falls after a short visit with Miss Minnie Anderson.

Dr. Gambell was up from Thief River Falls last week to attend Fred Heiser, of Excel, who is laid up with an attack of rheumatism.

Arno Bornstein and John Olson went out hunting jackrabbits Sunday afternoon but they failed to catch the one they thought they saw.

There will be services and Sunday school in the Holt church on Sunday February 4th at 11 A. M. Conferments and all the children meet for services and Sunday school.

Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Nelson went out to their claim southeast of Mud Lake on Tuesday after spending the real cold weather in town. John Batten officiated as their chauffeur on the trip.

Horse Bargain—Gray horse, six years old, weight about 1,100; sound and gentle; thoroughly broke to all work, single or double. A real bargain for quick, cash sale. Call at this office for particulars.

The practise of giving away copies of this paper free will be discontinued after February 1st. If anybody who is not a subscriber wants a copy any time after that date they will be charged 5 cents for it. We have to make a living, too, and cannot be expected to give away our products any more than any other business man or farmer can.

Munson is Still Champion

That Ludvig Munson is champion wrestler of northern Minnesota is the claim now made by his friends here. Quite a bunch of them went to Thief River Falls to take in the big Munson-Norland match, last night which Munson won in straight falls. It was a great match and it took 59 and 33 minutes respectively for the two falls. Munson's speed and cleverness showed up to good advantage as Norland outweighed him by about 15 pounds.

Notice of Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Farmers' Co-Operative Creamery Co., of Holt, Minn., will be held at the creamery in Holt on Saturday, January 27, 1912, at 1 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

New York City's Seal.

A man who has done research and writing in New York city history explained the other day the significance of the two barrels on the seal of the city. Of the four spaces cut off by four windmill blades, set at right angles to each other, two beavers occupy the upper and lower, while a barrel is in each of the spaces to the right and the left.

"I can understand the meaning of the windmill arms and of the beavers, but why should the city of New York be represented by a couple of beer barrels?" some one asked.

The barrels are not beer, but flour barrels. In early colonial times under the English New York got the exclusive right to bolt flour, which brought the town such prosperity that the flour barrel was naturally an appropriate selection for the city seal.—New York Sun.

Don't Miss This.

If a woman has one daughter, who goes away, the Mrs. misses the Miss and the Miss misses the Mrs. If she has two daughters and both are away the Mrs. misses the Misses and the Misses miss the Mrs. If she has three daughters and two are at one place and one at another the Mrs. misses the Miss and the Misses, and the Miss misses the Mrs. and the Misses. If it is four daughters she has and two are at one place, while the other two are away from home and separated the Mrs. misses the Miss and the Misses and the Miss, and the Miss and the Misses miss the Misses and the Mrs., while the Misses miss the Mrs., and the Miss misses the Miss and the Misses and the Mrs. So they would all better remain at home with the Mr. of the Mrs.—Judge.

Pittsburgh In 1784.

When General Forbes captured Fort Duquesne in 1758 he renamed it Pittsburgh in honor of the great English inspirer of victory. Later it dropped the "h" and became Pittsburg, only finally to tack the "h" on officially and revert to the original spelling. In 1784 Arthur Lee described the place in language which seems strange to those who know "the Smoky City" of today: "Pittsburgh is inhabited almost entirely by Scots and Irish, who live in paltry log houses. There are in the town four attorneys, two doctors and not a priest of any persuasion, nor church or chapel, so that they are likely to be damned without the benefit of clergy. The place, I believe, will never be very considerable."

Cheaping.

In parts of Switzerland the baker's wife carries round the bread in a sort of hamper, and she has not a fixed, immutable charge, but chaffers for a price with the customers. The old English word for this process was "cheaping," which in many places in England has been corrupted into chipping. Chipping Norton, for instance, is really Cheaping Norton, or the place where goods were cheapened—that is, sold by chaffer.

Wise Exceptions.

"You really believe that a man should always be truthful to his wife?"

"Certainly I do, always."

"And do you always tell your wife the truth about her cooking?"

"Oh, well—er—there are exceptions, you know."—Houston Post.

THE FEEVISH CHILD NEEDS TREATMENT

When a child sulks drowsily, or is fretful, it is usually due to some slight disorder of the digestive organs, and a mild laxative is very often all that is necessary to restore cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits.

In cases where the use of a gentle, effective laxative stimulant is indicated, many of the best physicians are now prescribing Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is admittedly the perfect laxative, being mild, yet positive in its action on the bowels, and far preferable to violent cathartics and purgative waters. It is very pleasant to the taste and is an ideal remedy to regulate and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. Its easy, natural action makes it especially desirable in the case of children, a dose at bed-time being sure to have the desired result next morning, with no attendant unpleasantness or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this splendid remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for a sample. He will be very glad to send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

NOT MUCH OF A GENTLEMAN.

DISFIGURED WITH CRUSTS

"Some time ago I was taken with eczema from the top of my head to my waist. It began with scales on my body. I suffered untold itching and burning, and could not sleep. I was greatly disfigured with scales and crusts. My ears looked as if they had been most cut off with a razor, and my neck was perfectly raw. I suffered untold agony and pain. I tried two doctors who said I had eczema in its fullest stage, and that it could not be cured. I then tried other remedies to no avail. At last, I tried a set of the genuine Cuticura Remedies, which cured me of eczema when all else had failed, therefore I cannot praise them too highly.

"I suffered with eczema about ten months, but am now entirely cured, and I believe Cuticura Remedies are the best skin cure there is." (Signed) Miss Mattie J. Shaffer, R. F. D. 1, Box 6, Dancy, Miss., Oct. 27, 1910.

"I had suffered from eczema about four years when boils began to break out on different parts of my body. It started with a fine red rash. My back was affected first, when it also spread over my face. The itching was almost unbearable at times. I tried different soaps and salves, but nothing seemed to help me until I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. One box of them cured me entirely. I recommended them to my sister for her baby who was troubled with tooth eczema, and they completely cured her baby." (Signed) Mrs. F. L. Marberger, Drehersville, Pa., Sept. 6, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

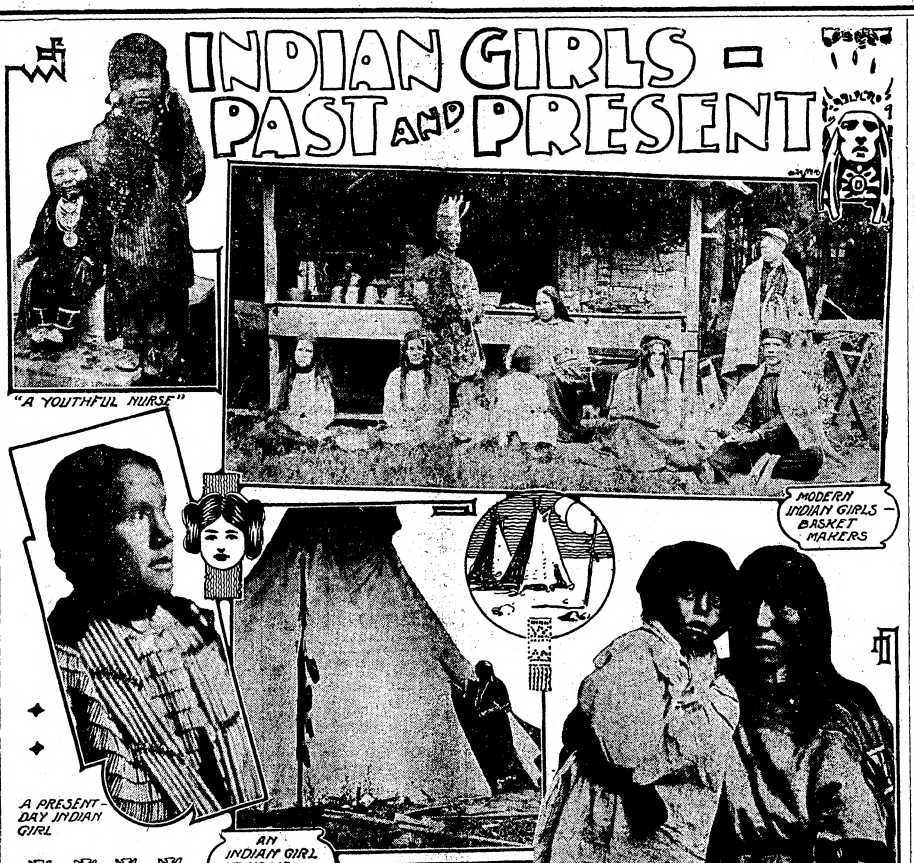
INDIAN GIRLS – PAST AND PRESENT

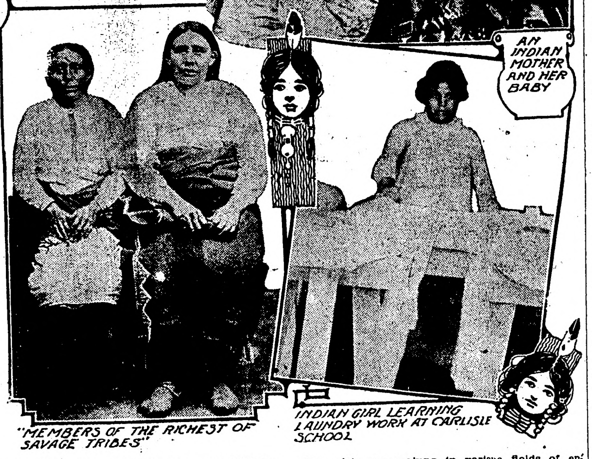


"A YOUTHFUL NURSE"

MODERN INDIAN GIRLS – BASKET MAKERS

A PRESENT-DAY INDIAN GIRL

AN INDIAN GIRL AT HOME



AN INDIAN MOTHER AND HER BABY

"MEMBERS OF THE RICHEST OF SAVAGE TRIBES"

INDIAN GIRL LEARNING LAUNDRY WORK AT CARLISLE SCHOOL

THE Indian girl is progressing in accordance with the example set by her white sisters. Indeed, it is a question whether the Indian girls are not, in many respects, advancing more rapidly than their prototypes among the palefaces. However, it must not be inferred that the present-day trend of culture and education and progress among the Indian girls is a parallel as to aims and purposes with that which prevails among her fair-complexioned cousins. Quite the contrary, as a matter of fact. For instance, it may be cited that, generally speaking, the Indian girls of the present give far less thought to fashions in dress than do feminine members of the white race. Similarly they are not exercised over suffrage and they do not place such stress on the development of musical accomplishments.

But, on the contrary, the twentieth century Indian girls are devoting their energies to a mastery of cookery and sewing and the other essentials of successful home-making to which, in the estimation of some old-fashioned folks, the white girls of the period are giving all too little attention. At the same time, many of the red-skin belles are not content to ignore the social accomplishments which are supposed to enhance the attractiveness of modern young women. Accordingly at the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa., and other large institutions of this kind we find the daughters of the forest crowding the classes in music, painting, drawing, dancing, modern athletics, etc., and even behold these descendants of the savages developing marked dramatic ability in amateur theatrical entertainments of various kinds.

Every person is forced to admit of the wisdom and benefits of the "white man's education" for some Indians. The remarkable life stories of some of the self-made Indians who have, after acquiring the white man's book learning, adopted the white man's mode of life, amply attest the success of the transformation in individual cases. There is, however, and perhaps always will be a difference of opinion as to the wisdom of attempting to fix the Anglo-Saxon standards for the entire rising generation of America's native tribes. Oddly enough there seems to be more widespread belief in such a policy for the Indian girls than for the young men of the tepees.

We say, oddly, because when new conditions have confronted an uncivilized or semi-civilized people it has usually been the men who have accustomed themselves to the new order of things more readily than the women. In the case of most Indian clans, however, the women have proven more amenable to the exactions of the new life wherein seems to lie the only salvation of the entire Indian life. Various reasons have been advanced in explanation of this, one of the most plausible being that it has not been as difficult for the Indian girl to forego such pleasures as she enjoyed in her old life as it has been for the young brave to foresake the excitement of the chase and the care-free nomadic life and to settle down in a fixed habitation with the irksome monotony of the white man's life. Also, it is impossible to overlook the influence exerted by the example of the considerable number of Indian women who have married white settlers in Oklahoma and other parts of the west.

Even at the outset of her career in the conventional environment of the age the Indian girl has many advantages over her brother who completes his education at the same time. It not infrequently happens that a young man of Indian blood graduates with honors from some Indian school only to find no opportunities awaiting him commensurate with his ability. Small wonder that in some instances the young men revert to the ideals and mode of life of their forefathers. The Indian girl, on the other hand, can be sure that when she finishes a school course that includes domestic economy there is a place awaiting her. She will never have any difficulty in obtaining a well-paid position in domestic service, for the instructors at our Indian schools have more applications than they can accept from responsible families eager to secure competent Indian girls as household helpers. Some of the applicants even suggest the possibility of adopting a young Indian girl if one be found to fulfil expectations.

Or, if the Indian girl of the present day, upon completing her education, elect to try for a livelihood in some one of the artistic pursuits she seems to have advantages over her brother fully as marked as under the circumstances above mentioned. The Indian brave, in his native state, does not show aptitude for any form of artistic handicraft unless it be the fashioning of bows and arrows. But the Indian women have traditional skill in bead work, in feather work and in leather work and the Indian women of the south west have for countless generations excelled in pottery manufacture, in rug weaving and in basket manufacture. When an Indian girl is enabled to use such talents in accordance with the knowledge of modern art ideals which a school education gives her, it goes without saying that she has ready to hand a very agreeable and very remunerative means of livelihood.

School teaching is another vocation which opens to the educated Indian girls a future that is virtually closed to the redskins of the sterner sex. There are in the United States a large and constantly increasing number of Indian schools,—that is, primary grade schools for the education of the younger Indian children on the reservations,—and it is coming about that almost all of the teachers in these schools are Indian young women who have qualified for the work at Carlisle or other schools and by courses in normal schools. Indeed the success of great numbers of these young Indian women school teachers in earning their livelihood by brain work while so many of the Indian young men of the period must depend upon manual labor for their earnings emphasizes as does nothing else the change that has come about in the status of Indian women. It is, under such circumstances, a complete reversal of conditions over those that obtained in the long ago when the Indian women were compelled to do all of the hard labor, whereas the men were responsible only for the lighter tasks,—or, mayhap, devoted themselves exclusively to warfare and the chase.

There is little doubt that one explanation of the success which so many twentieth century Indian girls are making in various fields of endeavor is found in the heritage of good health which has come to them from generations of healthful ancestors, and the influence of their own early training and out-door life. Particularly would this explanation account for the splendid constitutions possessed by so many Indian girls and which have stood them in good stead in many exacting vocations, for instance, in nursing. Great numbers of Indian girls have qualified as trained nurses and the services of most of them are in constant demand at $100 a month.

The Indian baby, strapped to a board or securely packed in an elongated basket woven for the purpose, can neither kick nor squirm and this proves an advantage which is far-reaching in its effect in later life. Similarly is there no danger that the child will attempt to walk at an earlier age than is desirable. From earliest childhood the average Indian girl has been subjected to that rigorous outdoor life which results in making them almost perfect physically. For instance, there may be cited the method followed in giving an Indian child a bath,—a weekly event. The mother visits some convenient pool or stream and the young member of the household, after being loosened from her odd cradle, is placed in shallow water to kick and splash to her heart's content. In due course the dripping youngster is lifted from the water and, instead of being tenderly dried with soft linen, is simply hung to the bough of some convenient tree, by means of a cloth tied around the waist, and there dries in the air and the sunshine while the mother stands by, looking with approving eyes upon the progress of this heroic hardening process.

In the old days the Indian girls accepted at tender age the traditional lot of Indian women—that of pack horse, and it was nothing unusual in the average Indian camp to see wee girls toiling along with bundles of wood, etc., almost as large as themselves. This condition yet obtains to a considerable extent, although it is not so universal as formerly. The capacity of the Indian girls for hard work, however, finds daily exemplification in every walk of life which they have entered. Incidently, it may be mentioned that whatever influence civilization may exert upon the young woman in whose veins courses Indian blood she never seems to lose that love of ornaments and bright colors which characterizes all children of the wilderness and which the Indian girl will let crop out in her latter-day costumes, even though they be fashioned in accordance with the most conventional modes.

When the Flag Looks Good.

"I have been in countries where the laboring man had meat once a year; sometimes twice—Christmas and Easter. And I have seen women carrying upon their heads a burden that no man would like to carry, and at the same time knitting busily with both hands. And those women lived without meat; and when I thought of the American laborer I said to myself: 'After all, my country is the best in the world.' And when I came back to the sea and saw the old flag flying in the air, it seemed to me as though the air from pure joy had burst into blossom."—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Will Market Cats

Company Proposes to Raise Tabbies for Their Fur.

Animal Society's Views—Treasurer Bergh Frowns on Scheme, but Fur Dealer Has Nothing but Praise for It.

Corona, L. I.—This city is to have a cat farm, to be run on the same plan as a chicken farm or any other kind of farm. The scheme originated with residents of Corona who foresee a fortune in selling the skins of the cats. Judging by the sentiment prevailing against cat farms, however, the Corona Catskin company, as it is to be called, will have troubles of its own before very long.

The company was organized recently and it was said that application for a charter will be made to the secretary of state within a few days. The promoters are to pay nominal sums for all stray cats that can be gathered up within a reasonable freight rate radius. Having possession of these cats, they intend to go into the business of breeding cats on a large scale.

Should this scheme become effective the first to oppose it will undoubtedly be the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Henry Bergh, treasurer of the society and a member of the board of managers, when asked about such a scheme recently, said that in his opinion the society would be authorized to interfere.

"I don't think the object attained by the killing of cats by wholesale," he said, "would be justifiable. Of course it raises a point which would first have to be decided.

"The promoters of the catskin company might argue that killing cats for their fur is no more unjustifiable than killing birds for their feathers. I doubt whether it would be justifiable to kill cats under any consideration unless the flesh of the animal is to be used as food. Of course, I realize that some use might be made of the flesh other than for food purposes, but this, to my mind, would be unjustifiable cruelty to animals. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will certainly investigate such an institution if it becomes effective."

The use of common, ordinary domestic catskins in the fur business, although not common, has been heard of in this city. The fur sometimes appears on the market under various trade names, and a select lot of skins, it is said, can be utilized to such advantage as to make a fine appearance.

I. Freundlich of I. Freundlich & Sons, furriers, said that in his opinion there would be a big market for a catskin industry, so large, in fact, that enough cats to furnish the demand could never be raised.

"I would not be surprised at all to see such industries flourish in the future."

HAS LOST HUMAN HEADS

University of Pennsylvania Museum Has 200-Year-Old Smoked Heads.

Chickasha, Okla.—Prof. George B. Gordon, director of the University of Pennsylvania museum, has just received, through his agents in London, three human heads, which, although preserving the full contour of the features, are approximately 200 years old. They are the grotesquely tattooed heads of leaders of the ancient Maori of New Zealand, who were first discovered in 1770 by the famous explorer, Capt. James Cook.

Professor Gordon explained that the heads were preserved by a process of smoking them and were kept for the same reasons that Caucasians keep pictures of their ancestors. The heads are not gruesome or revolting, even to the most sensitive and highly imaginative person.

The faces are smooth and do not suggest human flesh any more than the face of a wax doll. The eyes are closed and the hair is well preserved. The entire face is covered with fanciful though symmetrical figures, tattooed during life. The Maori are the only tribe of the entire Polynesian race who preserved their heads. The people of Borneo also preserve heads, but do not tattoo their faces as did the Maori.

According to Dr. Gordon, the preserved heads are very rare, there being only two or three known to be in existence besides the Robley collection at Columbia university, which contains nearly a score.—North American.

SAYS DON'T WED ORIENTAL

Princess Hassan Points Out Fatal Mistake After Five Years' Trial.

New York.—"Never marry an Oriental—it's a fatal mistake," said the beautiful Princess Hassan, who, before her marriage to a cousin of the khedive of Egypt, was Miss Ola Humphrey of California, an actress. After five years' absence from her native land, the princess has arrived from her home in London and she will remain a few days at the Knickerbocker before going to join her mother in Oakland, Cal.

The princess spoke feelingly and somewhat knowingly on the subject of marriages between members of the Oriental and Occidental nations, for her life as a member of the khedive's immediate family was one that was far from romantic and happy.

"To begin with," she said, "an American girl is far too independently brought up and too spoiled by her own countrymen to be dominated in the manner an Oriental expects his wife to be. You see, my meeting with the Prince Hassan was so romantic and I was so overpowered by his great manner and his magnificence that I married him impulsively after two months' courtship.

"I have always been impulsive and I shall always be so. My marriage with Prince Hassan should have taken some of that quality out of me, but it hasn't.

"I know, however, enough to give advice to other American girls and the advice is never to marry people of Oriental origin or with Oriental strains in the blood. They can never understand each other and the woman will be the one who suffers."

The princess was wonderfully attired in a new Parisian frock and ermine toque trimmed with sweeping aigrettes.

The skirt of the frock, by the way, was made simply of a wide border of lace over nothing but chiffon. No petticoats were worn underneath.

"All the frocks are made in that fashion in Paris and London now, and no petticoats are worn," she added.

MEETS DEATH IN WIRE FENCE

Wealthy Pennsylvanian, Unable to Free Himself, Freezes, While Friends Search.

Pottsville, Pa.—Too weak to free himself from a barbed wire fence that held him captive on a mountain three miles from here, Louis Stoffregen, 80 years old, a wealthy resident of Pottsville, was frozen to death. While his body was swaying about in the wind hundreds of friends searched the valley below.

Mr. Stoffregen left home in the afternoon to take a walk. He apparently climbed the mountain, and was held fast when his clothing caught in a barbed wire fence. The aged man was probably exhausted by the long climb, and his feeble shouts were lost in the rush of the wind.

Friends started the search when he failed to reach home at dark. State policemen who had been called in climbed the mountain and found the body.

THE HOME LIFE OF THE SETTLER

WESTERN CANADA AFFORDS ALL THE COMFORTS AND MANY OF THE LUXURIES.

A young lady of Wisconsin secured a certificate at the Milwaukee office of the Canadian Government, and on presenting this to the ticket agent of the railway at the Canadian boundary line she secured a ticket at a reduced rate which carried her to Edmonton, Alberta, from which point, about forty miles, she had friends. This was a couple of years ago, and the young lady is now married to one of the promising young farmers of the district.

In writing of her trip to the Milwaukee representatives of the Canadian Government she says: "I enjoyed my trip up here very much, and expect to go out to our homestead in the Pembina district next spring." To the housewife the information that she has "put up twelve quarts of raspberries" is important, as they "picked them themselves," and they might have picked ten times the quantity if they had required them, for there is no country where wild fruit grows in such abundance. The letter goes on to say, and this is interesting from a woman's standpoint, "the country is very beautiful." Speaking of the friends with whom she went up to live, she says: "They certainly have a beautiful farm and house"—they had been there about four years, also going from Wisconsin—"they have about twenty acres of oats and barley, five acres alfalfa, three acres potatoes and I don't know how many of vegetables. I think they have about forty acres under cultivation altogether. They are now draining a slough which they will afterwards plow and put into fall wheat. They also have a large herd of cattle, and Mrs. C. has about 100 chickens. They make on an average of 30 pounds of butter every week. I never saw such grand cream."

Now these people are enjoying life in Alberta; they have a splendid climate, excellent prospects, and are happy that they are part and parcel in the working out of the upbuilding of a new country, that will take its place amongst the progressive countries of the century. Numbers of letters that express satisfaction as extreme as the one quoted appear in literature sent out by the Canadian Government and which may be had on application to any of its agents.

IOWA WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Shooting Pains, Spinal Weakness, Dizziness, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my health."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of KNOWN COMPOSITION. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

IT IS easy enough to be prudent
When nothing tempts you to stray;
Then without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away.
But it is only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the one that resists desire.

Meat is so costly that never a scrap should be wasted. The bones can be used in soup and the gristle and tough portions likewise.

Breslau of Beef.—Mix a pint of chopped cold cooked beef with the yolks of three eggs; add a half pint of stock, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a half cup of bread crumbs, a cup of thin cream, a teaspoonful of salt and one of minced parsley, and pepper to taste. Put into buttered ramekins and set in a pan of water to bake in the oven. Cover with buttered paper and bake thirty minutes.

Ham Timbales.—Beat two eggs, add three-fourths of a cup of rich milk and a quarter of a cup of cream, one cup of chopped cold cooked ham, a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, a fourth of a cup of soft bread crumbs. Mix all together and turn into buttered timbale molds, set in a pan of water and cover with buttered paper and bake until firm in the center. Turn out of the molds, surround with sauce and put a sprig of parsley in the top of each timbale. This may be steamed in a quart mold if desired.

Creamed Chicken With Curry of Rice.—Melt a fourth of a cup of butter, cook in it a fourth of a cup of flour and half a teaspoonful each of paprika and salt; gradually stir in a cup of milk and a cup of cream. Cook until smooth and thick, then add a pint of minced chicken. Keep hot over water.

Cook an onion in a tablespoonful of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of curry powder, a half cup of milk and a half cup of water. Cook until smooth. Have ready a half cup of cooked rice; add this to the curry mixture, remove the onion, add a tablespoonful of butter and a dash of pepper and dispose as a border on a dish with the creamed chicken in the center.

THE sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells;
The book of life the shining record tells.
—M. S. Browning.

EASY DESSERTS.

Custards, when eggs are reasonable, are one of the easiest and most wholesome of desserts and an ideal one for children who have to carry their lunches to school. They may be either baked or steamed in cups.

Rice Custard.—Take two cups of good rich milk, add a half cup of cold cooked rice. Beat the yolks of two eggs, add six tablespoonfuls of sugar and a pinch of salt, add this to the rice mixture and cook like a soft custard. Take from the fire and add the beaten whites of the eggs and vanilla to flavor, serve cold in cups, with or without cream.

Floating Island.—Scald a pint of rich milk, add a half cup of granulated sugar and the beaten yolks of two eggs, cook until smooth, and when cool add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook the whites beaten stiff and sweetened with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, by dropping in spoonfuls on to boiling water. Arrange the islands on the custard and put a cube of jelly on each.

Prune Pie.—This is an exceptionally good pie. Wash one and a half pounds of prunes and soak over night in water to cover. Cook in the same water and remove the stones, cut prunes in quarters and add a half cup of sugar, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Reduce the juice to one and a half tablespoonfuls. Line a pie plate with crust and dredge with flour, cover with the prunes, dot with butter, put on the upper crust and bake in a hot oven. Baked or boiled custard may be made more elaborate by the addition of cocoanut for flavor or chocolate, grated, may be added, if one cares for that combination.

IT IS a good and safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness or speaking a true word or making a friend. —Ruskin.

FISH AND FISH DISHES.

To steam fish prepare and clean the fish, wipe dry in a cheese cloth and lay in a deep pan in a steamer with a slice of onion, a bit of bayleaf and a few pepper corns and a little salt. Make a white sauce to serve with the fish from the juice which gathers in the pan.

Boiled fish should be served with highly seasoned sauces as the boiling extracts so much of the flavor of the fish. It is an extravagant method of cooking.

Fish Rabbit.—Bone sections of any fresh fish; dip in seasoned butter and place close together in a deep plate. On top spread a mixture of fine crumbs and grated cheese moistened with milk and seasoned. Bake until the cheese mixture is done and browned.

Fish Forcemeat.—Chop any raw white fish and mix with each pound two eggs, one cup of thick white sauce, or a cup of thick cream and a cup of bread crumbs, season with salt, pepper, onion and lemon juice. This may be used to stuff fish or to roll up in turbans, or cook in the form of croquettes, or steam in a mold, or shape in small balls and cook in water and use as a garnish for soup. Small fish are usually rolled in cornmeal or flour before frying and are cooked in hot salt pork fat in a frying pan.

Salt mackerel should be thoroughly soaked, flesh side down over night or longer, then place in the oven with a little water and just before serving pour over a cup of sweet, thick cream; when hot serve.

Baked Fish.—Spread butter over a baking pan or lay in slices of salt pork, sprinkle over it an onion minced fine, lay on this a thin slice of fish or any small whole fish, split down the middle. Add a tablespoonful of vinegar and spread the fish thickly with flour and butter rubbed together. Bake until the fish is tender and serve with a sauce made from the gravy in the pan.

BY THE cynic, the sad, and the fallen,
Who have no strength for the strife,
The world's highway is cumbered today;
They make up the item of life.
But the virtue that conquers passion
And the sorrow that hides in a smile,
It is these that are worth the homage of earth,
For we find them but once in a while.

MEATS FOR THE TABLE.

Variety is the spice of life and the progressive housekeeper is constantly varying the diet so that monotony is never a bugbear. It is easier to go on day after day cooking the same old dishes, it takes study and planning to make a variety and keep within the allowance for the table expenses. In many homes with the same allowance there is a vast difference in the food, because it is the last thing planned for and studied. In such establishments there is bound to be waste.

As meat is our most costly food it is reasonable to give thought in planning the meat dishes or there is needless expense. It is not niggardly to buy as little as is ordinarily consumed and one can always "water the porridge that all may dine," in case unexpected company arrives. A good way to serve chicken:

Stewed Chicken.—Cut up the fowl and cover with hot water, allow it to cook slowly until tender, boiling will toughen the tenderest meat. About half an hour before serving add a teaspoonful of salt and a slice of onion, more salt will be needed, but add it to the broth if necessary. Take two tablespoonfuls of flour, moistened with water, add to the broth with a half cup of cream, when hot pour over a well-beaten egg and serve poured over the chicken.

Irish Stew.—Take one pound of the neck of mutton and cut into small pieces, add three carrots and four onions, cover with boiling water and bring to a boil; stew slowly for 45 minutes then add five potatoes, pepper and salt to taste, and serve very hot with the vegetables around the meat.

Nellie Maxwell.

He Knew His Business.

The elderly woman was walking along with a young woman, evidently her daughter, and a young man. A newsboy persistently asked the young man to buy a paper.

"G'wan and buy one. I want to sell out and git home to my maw! She's by herself." The boy hung on until he was dismissed by a negative nod. Then he approached the elderly woman.

"No, I can't read," said the woman, with a smile. "I'm German."

Then the young man was approached again. "You kin read. Go ahead and buy one. You kin read it to her."

"No, my eyes are bad. I can't see very well."

But the newsboy was determined to make a sale. "Well, buy one for your girl," indicating the younger woman; "she's got pretty eyes!" And, needless to say, he made the sale.

Accommodating.

"Why do you argue with your wife?" asked the bachelor. "Don't you know the futility of it?" "Of course," replied the married man, "but I have to allow her a little pleasure once in a while."—Puck.

Gathered Smiles

HIS INNING.

The waitress at the Littlehat inn smoothed her apron and turned, giggling, to her assistant. "There's a regular old countryman just come in," she whispered. "He's ordered a chowder first, the way they always do. When it comes to dessert I'm going to have some fun. You listen."

The old countryman was taking his last spoonful of chowder from his tilted plate when he became aware that the waitress was hovering near him. He looked up, and she spoke in a clear, carrying tone.

"We've got four kinds of pie," she said. "Which will you have?"

The shrewd old eyes twinkled up into the pretty, impertinent face.

"I'll have a piece o' the last," said the old countryman, gravely.—Youth's Companion.

A Fair Offer.

She was strong minded and meant to have her rights at any cost, and when she was hauled up before the justice of the peace for exceeding the speed limit she demanded to be represented by counsel.

"I just tell you one thing, judge," she said, whacking the table with her right hand, "I'd rather pay a lawyer $25 than give this court $10 for a fine."

"All right, madam," said the judge, "I'm th' only lawyer hereabouts, and if ye'll just hand over that $25, I'll guarantee to appear before myself and get ye off."—Harper's Weekly.

Subtle Flattery.

"Dibbles is what I would call a diplomatic man."

"In what particular?"

"Mrs. Dibbles asked him to make out a list of ten of the world's greatest women, and whom do you think he put at the head of the list?"

"I can't imagine."

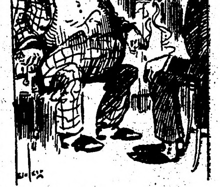
"Mrs. Dibbles!"

Praise or Condemnation.

Author (cheerfully) — Couldn't I take my call now? They're shouting "Author."

Manager (doubtfully)—If you like. But I'm not quite sure whether it's "author" they're shouting or "awful."—Bystander.

A DIFFERENCE.



The Preacher—Why don't you put more stock in honesty?

The Millionaire—Can't. All my money is tied up in railroad stocks.

Mystified.

A balky mule is bad enough
When harnessed to a rig,
But the hardest thing on earth to drive
Is a bottle-fed blind pig.

Incoherent.

"Jobbins got rather mixed in his talk when he was telling me how meanly his so-called fried treated him."

"What did he say?"

"He said he got a raw deal when they cooked up that scheme."

A Vigorous Performer.

"Does your boy Josh play on the football team?"

"No," replied Farmer Corntassel. "John wouldn't stand fur no mollycoddle job like that. He's the feller that leads the mob and wrecks opry houses after the game is over."

A Family Dialogue.

She (in dispute over some figures)—I tell you I'm right.

He—And I tell you you're wrong.

She—Didn't I got to school, stupid?

He—Yes, and you left it stupid.

Feminine Taste.

"What's the meaning of this elaborate collection of charlotte russe, fudge and sweet pickles?"

"Oh, I am advertising a business woman's lunch."

Close Enough.

Amateur Nimrod.—Can you show me any bear tracks?

Native.—I kin show you a bear.

Amateur Nimrod.—Thanks awfully, old chap. Tracks will suffice.

Something Better Needed.

King Arthur had just invented the round table.

"Fine," we cried, "but can you invent one where nobody gets the chicken neck?"

The Mightier One.

"Pop, what is the female of the species?"

"It's the lady on the silver dollar, my son."

THAT IMPUDENT QUESTION.

Just as Rivers was about to sit down to dinner there came a ring at his telephone.

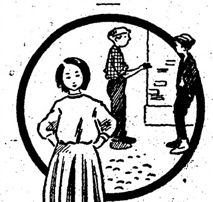
"Well?" he said, placing the receiver to his ear.

"Who is this?" demanded a high pitched, impatient voice.

"This," pleasantly answered Rivers, "is Don Hippolito Lopez Pomposo Antonio Ricardo Doloroso. Is that all you wish to know? Good-by."

Hanging up the receiver, he sat down and ate his dinner, happily unaware that an indignant person at the other end of the wire was storming at central for giving him the wrong number.

THINKS IT A BLUFF.



Mickey—Say, Chimmie, it's wrong ter ill-treat a woman, but if me goil ever says to me wot some goils says ter dere fellers I know I'll lose me temper.

Chimmie—Wat's dat?

Mickey—Why, when I proposes to her an' she says dis is so sudden.

Considerate.

Though humble are his labors,
He's fit to sit with kings,
Because he loves his neighbors,
He never, never sings.

Clearly Unfitted.

"Your son isn't with you in the real estate business any more, is he?"

"No, I advised him to get out of it. He never was intended by nature for the real estate business. I sent him out to show a place to a man the other day and he let the fellow get away without buying, merely because it wasn't the kind of place he wanted."

Craving for Variety.

The servant girl who had been given an afternoon off to attend a matinee, returned unusually early.

"Why," said her mistress, "you can't have waited to see the whole performance?"

"No, ma'am," was the reply; "it said on the program that Act III. was the same as Act I., and I don't want to see it again."—London Opinion.

Whah She Was Bo'n.

Lawyer (examining middle-aged negro woman as a witness—Madam, did I understand you to say your daughter was born in wedlock?

Witness—No, sah; I nevah said she was bo'n in wedlock; I said she was bo'n in Hahudsbu'g, Kaintecky.—Judge.

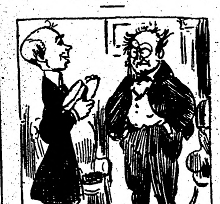
Provoking.

Clara—While I was playing whist with Mrs. Singleton last evening, she asked me what was the trump at least six times.

Maude—Weren't you provoked?

Clara—I should say so! As if I knew!—Puck.

CALLED HIM.



Her Father—But can you support my daughter?

Her Suitor—I have expectations, sir.

Her Father—See here, young man, I am not nearly as rich as people say I am.

Publicity Seekers.

Lives of great men now remind us
Good advice they understand;
All, in ways that can not blind us,

LIVE STOCK IS BASIS OF ALL SYSTEMS OF AGRICULTURE

Crops From Soil Furnish Nutrition for Animal Body and Waste Products of Barns and Feed Lots Supply Food for Plants—Neither Can Exist Long Without Other.

Prize-Winning English Shorthorn Steer.

Live stock is the foundation of all systems of permanent agriculture and agriculture is, in turn, the base upon which rests the superstructure of all national prosperity.

No country on earth has ever continued to prosper without live stock as a vitally important part of its agriculture and none can do so. The crops from the soil supply nutrition for the animal body and the waste products of our barns and feed lots furnish food for the plants. Neither can long exist without the other.

The grain farmer flourishes for a time, but with every load of grain he sends to market he sells a portion of his farm. If not during his lifetime, then in the time of his children, will his farm become worn and worthless.

High-priced land or high-priced feeding stuffs should not shorten the production of live stock. The cheap cattle of the ranges were possible only because of the cheapness of the land. With the increase in the price of land has come an improvement and more general distribution of high class cattle anad these are more profitable and more economical than the range steer ever was or could become.

Farmers generally are a conservative people and this is one of their most valued characteristics, yet it seems to stand in their own way at times. The farmer who gives thought to the matter can easily see how impossible it is for him to hope for success in raising cheap, poorly bred and hard feeding animals on his high priced land.

On the other hand, he can easily see that a good animal which will put on flesh rapidly and that of the highest quality and which will reach a marketable condition in a few months, instead of several years, is the only one he can afford to grow.

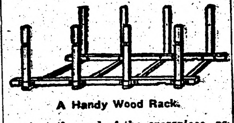
The farmer must have live stock and present conditions demand that he keep good live stock or fail.

PRACTICAL RACK TO CARRY WOOD

Useful Implement May be Made by Using Two Strong Pieces of Timber as Illustrated.

Directions for making a practical wood rack, with an illustration, is given in the Farm and Home as follows:

Take two 4x5 pieces of very strong wood 11 to 12 feet long, and cut a notch in each, so as to fit down over hind bolster of wagon to prevent rack from slipping backward or forward. Use four or six standards on each side and the same number of crosspieces, so placed that the standard in going down through the socket catches against the end of the crosspiece, as shown in cut. Make standards 3½ feet long. They may be cut off afterwards if desired.



A Handy Wood Rack.

Make standard sockets from old wagon tires to admit a standard 1½x4 inches and with holes for one-half-inch bolts. Bolt all crosspieces firmly. Have wagon near by when making rack and place the rack so far forward that in turning the front wheels will just miss the end.

WINTER SHELTER FOR THE SWINE

Natural Instinct Is for Cozy Quarters, Which May be Accepted as Suitable for Them.

(By W. R. GILBERT.)

No animals enjoy freedom more in the summer than hogs, but their desires are altogether different in winter. The natural instinct is for cozy quarters, which may be accepted as altogether suitable for them.

No one need ever look for the pigs on windy hill-tops when winter sets in, but if any disappear they are almost sure to be found in the best protected and snug spot within their reach.

Warning words are often given not to have sows farrowing in the shortest days, when cold weather prevails, as they can make no progress against low temperatures.

In summer pigs at large pick up a great deal of their food in the fields, but little is available now that will do them any good, and although those in store condition may still be allowed a run out daily, they should all be housed at night and some altogether.

All being fattened for pork of bacon should be kept in constantly. And sows suckling little pigs should never be allowed to take them out and around as absolute shelter and constant comfort assist their development; while chills hinder or are indeed dangerous.

Some have a fashion of letting the pigs run about the yard in winter, sometimes shutting them in at night, and in other cases letting them find their own accommodations, but this is a bad way.

They certainly make themselves most comfortable at times, but the exposure which is equally freely indulged in has the reverse of a satisfactory result, and it is much better to confine them all to their proper quarters.

These should be in good order, with absolutely waterproof roofs and surroundings that will prevent draughts. There should be no holes in the floors, as these make the bedding muck very quickly, and comfort is thereby reduced and progress impeded.

LIGHT NEEDED FOR ALL TREES

It Influences Transpiration and Consequently Metabolism of Green Plants—Other Effects.

Light is said to be absolutely indispensable for the life and growth of trees. In common with other green plants, a tree, in order to live, must produce organic substance for the building of new tissues. Certain low forms of vegetable life, such as bacteria and fungi, do not require light. They exist by absorbing organic substance from other living bodies; the higher forms of plants manufacture their own organic material by extracting carbon from the air. The leaves, through the agency of their chlorophyll, or green coloring matter, absorb from the air carbon dioxide, and give off a nearly equal volume of oxygen. The carbon dioxide is then broken up into its elements and converted into organic substances which are used in building up new tissues.

Light also influences transpiration, and consequently the metabolism of green plants. It influences largely the structure, the form, and the color of the leaf, and the form of the stem and it largely determines the height growth of trees, the rate at which stands thin out with age, the progress of natural pruning, the character of the living ground cover, the vigor of young tree growth, the existence of several storied forest, and many other phenomena upon which the management of forests depends. A thorough understanding, therefore, of the effect of light upon the life of individual trees, and especially on trees in the forest, and a knowledge of the methods by which the extent of this effect can be determined are essential for successful cultural operations in the forest.

Lime for Sour Soils.

For a soured soil, a liberal application of lime is the only thing that will remedy the trouble. This comes in many forms, but the cheapest and most beneficial is ordinary ground limestone. The cost of ground limestone is about 60 cents a ton at the pit.

Farmers, Attention!

A meeting of farmers will be held in the Woodman Hall in Holt next Friday, the 9th inst, for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Farmers' League of minnesota. All businesses are organized, and we must organize also. There is no politics in this, but it is to look after our interests as farmers collectively; indidividually we can do nothing.

Col. R. A. Wilkinson, of Lake Elmo, will be here to speak and it will be worth while to hear him, so be sure and come.

Ball and Basket Party

A grand ball and basket party will be given at the Woodman hall in Holt on Saturday evening, the 10th inst, for the benefit of the Holt Base Ball Club. The ball team has during the past couple of years furnished the public with a lot of the best and cleanest kind of amusement, and the boys are entitled to the most liberal kind of treatment on this occasion. The committee in charge are doing their level best to make this the biggest and best event of the season. Fine orchestra music has been arranged for, and a general invitation is given everybody to attend and bring their friends. Each lady is asked to bring a lunch basket. Think of the ball games during the coming summer, and dont miss this dance

Officers For Ensuing Year

The annual meeting of stockholders of the Farmers' Co-Operative Creamery Co. was held on Saturday and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: J. A. Sorum, secretary; N. Engebretsen, treasurer; T. B. Folden, Ole Reierson, Carl Larson, directors. In order to perfect the water supply it was decided to have a 4-inch well drilled at the creamery.

R. F. D. Route No. 1.

A party was given at the home of Mrs Furr Sunday evening and a most enjoyable time was had by all who attended.

Miss Matilda Furr left Friday last for her school near Angus.

Fred Peterson and Oscar Knutson took in the [illegible] Dance at Holt Saturday evening.

A surprise party was given at Ole Lunke's last Thursday evening. All went home with smiling faces, especially the girl with the new ring. One girl, at least, seems to have taken advantage of Leap Year.

Alfred Larson and Jesse Sorum came out from Holt to taks in our two parties.

The Misses Ellen and Jennie Johnson, Zelma, Melinda and Lucy Wegge called at the Peterson home Sunday afternoon.

Carl Surmo called at the Carlson home Sunday. We believe his visits are frequent.

Charlie, Burndette and Leo Horian called at Wegge's Wednesday evening.

Miss Alma Carlson went to Thief River Falls Friday and returned on Monday.

THE FOUNDATION of future financial independence is a growing Bank Account. Place your earning and watch it grow. We pay a liberal rate of interest on time deposits.

Why you should bank with HOLT STATE BANK:—

We can with pleasure assure you of the entire safety of your funds under our care. Our Cash is protected against any possible loss thru burglary or hold-up robbery by ample insurance and any loss thereby would be promptly replaced. We are organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota which now require two examinations yearly by the Examining Committee, four printed reports, two examinations yearly by a capable Bank Examiner. Also the bye-laws, require that the active officers be bonded and be personally responsible for all moneys or valuables left under their care which assures a straight and honest administration of its affairs. And further, our loans are so drawn that payment is assured at maturity either by the pledging of personal property or real estate, or by some responsible party of good financial standing acting as guarantor.

Our cash resources have increased $25,000.00 during the season 1911 and we want a like amount of increase during 1912. Affording our patrons absolute protection and safety and conducting our affairs in a business-like way are factors which lead to our success, and under these conditions we feel entitled to a generous share of your business during 1912.

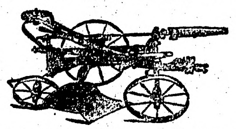
DIAMOND RIDING PLOWS

The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.



It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

NOT ALTOGETHER HIS FAULT

Verdict Brought In by Jury Certainly Was Not Flattering to the Accused.

A Wheeling (W. Va.) lawyer says that he has heard many queer verdicts in his time, but the quaintest of these was that brought in not long ago by a jury of mountaineers in a sparsely settled part of the state.

This was the first case for the majority of the jury, and they sat for hours arguing and disputing over it in the bare little room at the rear of the court room. At last they straggled back to their places, and the foreman, a lean, gaunt fellow, with a superlatively solemn expression, voiced the general opinion:

"The jury don't think that he done it, for we allow he wa'n't there, but we think he would have done it ef he'd had the chanst."—Harper's Magazine.

BABY'S HAIR ALL CAME OUT

"When my first baby was six months old he broke out on his head with little bumps. They would dry up and leave a scale. Then it would break out again and it spread all over his head. All the hair came out and his head was scaly all over. Then his face broke out all over in red bumps and it kept spreading until it was on his hands and arms. I bought several boxes of ointment, gave him blood medicine, and had two doctors to treat him, but he got worse all the time. He had it about six months when a friend told me about Cuticura. I sent and got a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three days after using them he began to improve. He began to take long naps and to stop scratching his head. After taking two bottles of Resolvent, two boxes of Ointment and three cakes of Soap he was sound and well, and never had any breaking out of any kind. His hair came out in little curls all over his head. I don't think anything else would have cured him except Cuticura.

"I have bought Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap several times since to use for cuts and sores and have never known them to fail to cure what I put them on. Cuticura Soap is the best that I have ever used for toilet purposes." (Signed) Mrs. F. E. Harmon, R. F. D. 2, Atoka, Tenn., Sept. 10, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept L, Boston.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man.

"The window was open—it was warm enough for that—and because of the fog I could stand quite near and see what was taking place inside without being seen. . . . It was a goodish sized room, one of three under a single roof, by all appearances, and stuffed full of apparata of various kinds. There was a big gas-motor singing away at one end, running a dynamo. Right near the window was a heavy table with all the paraphernalia of a wireless station.

"There was a young man standing right by the table, evidently just out of his chair. He was taking off the telephone headpiece when I first saw him. He looked to be under thirty, and wore red hair and a good coat of sunburn; and he was mad clean through—mad at another man who was standing just inside a doorway leading to another room. That door was closed. The second man was evidently just out of bed; he had a crash bathrobe belted round him, with his pyjamas showing underneath, and beefy, naked ankles running into bedroom slippers. They were having it hot and heavy, ripping out at each other straight from the shoulder.

"I don't know—didn't hear—what started the row, and it ended just after I came within hearing. The younger chap was saying—he had a bit of a brogue: 'Don't let that trouble you, Mister Black. I'll have you know I wired for a relief last night, while you were at dinner, and the minute he sets foot on this damned island, I leave it; nor will I be resting till I've turned in my report at the home office. Put that in your pipe, now.'

"Black (as he called him) seemed to lose control of himself for an instant. He sort of lurched forward, his hands working as if he was going to throw himself at the younger man's throat; then he caught up, thinking better of it, as if he knew the other fellow had grabbed his chair by the back and stood ready to brain him with it; which he couldn't have known, for it turned out he was blind. 'If I had my sight,' he said, 'and could lay hands on you, Power, I'd break every bone in your body.'

"That staked Mr. Power to an ugly laugh—the kind of a laugh that's calculated to make the other chap's blood boil. 'Divvil a doubt of that,' says he; 'but well you know I'd stop at nothing to protect myself against a brute like you, Mr. Black. And what's more' (I thought he tried to hold his tongue, but couldn't; this last seemed fairly to burst out of him) 'I warn you if ever again I see you lay finger on that unhappy woman, your wife, I'll murder you with the first weapon that comes handy. Remember that.'

"Black was white with rage by this time; I don't think he could have held in much longer. As it happened, just then the door behind him opened, and a woman in a dressing-gown stepped into the room. She was ghastly pale, frightened to death, but otherwise just about the prettiest woman I ever laid eyes on. She said just one word in a pitiful voice—'Douglas'—and touched her husband's arm; but I saw her eyes were praying Power to go. He saw it too.

"'Very well, then,' he said with a little bow to the woman. 'I'll be going now.'

"'And you needn't come back,' said the man he called Black. 'I'll do without you until your successor comes.'

"'That suits me to a T,' says Power. 'Good morning, Mrs. Black; I'm sorry we woke you up.'

"Black listened to his footsteps, with that weird expression the deaf and blind have, for some seconds after I had lost the sound of them; then he shook himself and said to the woman in a pretty steady voice, considering how hot he had just been: 'Get back to bed, Kate. I'll stay up the rest of the night. That matter's settled; you needn't worry any more.' I thought his voice sounded not unkind, but it was plain his temper ruled the man.

"His wife hesitated, but seemed afraid to cross him. She said something I didn't catch, and went back, closing the door.

"I was of two minds, whether to follow Power (if I could) or wait and see what next, and while I was debating it, Black returned, pulling on his coat. He'd managed to get into his clothing in a surprisingly short time. He went straight to the door, jerked it open, and slammed out, taking the same path as Power. I followed, judging my distance at discretion.

"The path led us directly to the farmhouse. Unfortunately I was a bit overcautious, and so permitted Black to get too far ahead. By the time I caught up, something had happened I didn't quite see through, at first. I heard the gate click behind Black, then his footsteps as he pounded across the stoop, and an instant later voices followed by a sound of shuffling, scuffling feet. But when I found him again he was alone—sitting alone in the kitchen, the only lighted room in the house. He had drawn a chair up to the table and sat square to it, his feet solidly on the floor, his hands spread out flat. I could see him quite plainly through the open door. He just sat there, staring at the blank wall opposite (of course, he couldn't see anything, for that matter) and never moved a muscle through what seemed to me an eternity.

"I daresay this lasted over ten minutes: it seemed hours. Then suddenly it came—what we'd both been waiting for—like a thunderclap for unexpectedness, only more awful. I fancied I heard, first, a thin, far shout; at any rate, Black threw back his head, as if he had heard something. The next instant the air seemed to shudder with the most terrible, indescribably harrowing scream of mortal agony . . .

"Then silence again—nothing more. Beyond that preliminary start, Black hadn't moved. He sat on, just as he was, though he understood as well as I, and better, what had happened off there in the darkness: that Power, suspecting Black's intentions, had made a break to get away by boat, but had been overhauled by somebody instructed by Black—overhauled and murdered. . . . And he could sit there, unstirring, with that on his conscience . . .!

"After a while I heard something moving in the barnyard and dodged back into hiding—into the shadows. Then a man passed between me and the light, like a ghost, trotting along noiselessly. He jogged up to the house and into the kitchen: as he entered, Black swung round sharply. This new arrival was a Chinaman—a low-caste coolie, I judged. I couldn't hear what they said—they spoke in undertones—but I managed to catch a word or two, among them 'boat:' which fitted in with my suspicions. At once Black got up—heavily, as if very tired—and went through the house and out by the front door; I tagged along, of course. He went directly back to the wireless station, sat down at the operating table, and gave another marvelous exhibition of what a blind man can accomplish, with instinct reinforcing the sense of touch.

"He threw in the motor cut-off switch, to begin with, and the motor started on the spark, just as some automobile engines will. Then he monkeyed with the detecter for a while, listening. Nothing doing, apparently—though he may have been getting the range for New York. The next thing, he disconnected the receiving apparatus, threw the current in through the starting box and primary switch, and began calling the New York office of the Standard Wireless, stopping now and then to listen for their response. Presently that came through, and he told 'em to stand ready to take an important message for Voorhis, the second vice-president: they were to get him on the telephone at once—wake him up and insist on an instant answer. . . . You'll have gathered that I number in the list of my many and varied accomplishments the ability to read Morse by ear; once upon a time I was a regular telegraph operator.

"The message was: 'Power has left without warning, taking boat to row to Vineyard. Absence just discovered. Send trustworthy substitute immediately. When may I expect him? All quiet here; island fog-bound.'

"The reply came through within twenty minutes—which was pretty quick work. Of course I couldn't hear it; I only knew it was being received.

"Just as Black gave the O. K. signal and shut off the motor and dynamo, the door opened again, and his wife spoke to him. She said, almost timidly: 'Douglas . . . is anything the matter?' He said in a rough, surly tone: 'Everything's the matter. That ass, Power, has stolen one of the boats and left the island. I've just asked Voorhis to send some one in his place. He says there's a man on the way; it seems Power sent in his resignation yesterday evening.' Those were his words, in effect—as nearly as I can remember them. He added something offensive about that being the finish of that flirtation and that he'd thank her to leave the next operator alone. She said: 'Oh-h!'—as if he'd hit her with a whip. Then he got up and announced that he was going to the farmhouse to get some breakfast. It was then just getting a little light. He said she needn't hurry, that he would probably be at the beach by the time she came to breakfast—wanted to find out which boat Power had taken. Then he went away, and the woman shut the door again. . . .

"This time I let Black take his road alone; I'd other fish to fry. I could hear his wife moving about in the other part of the building and judged she was dressing; but she took an interminable time to it. . . . In the course of the next century or two, however, she came out, dressed, and took the path to the farmhouse. I let her go, timed myself as close as I could, and dodged into the wireless room. It was taking a chance; I knew that if Black returned my life wouldn't be worth a picayune; but I had to know Voorhis's message. . . .

"I started the motor and called New York. When they answered I gave Black's signal and demanded a repetition of the message. That was taking another chance: the operator at the other end might recognize the difference in our styles of sending and refuse me. But he may have been sleepy; at all events he obliged without comment. Voorhis had wirelessed: 'Power gave notice he was leaving yesterday evening. New man on way, should reach New Bedford this morning, island by evening, conditions favoring. Name, John Handyside. He is in my confidence.' . . . At least that was the substance of it. . . .

The Russian department of agriculture has founded at the Riga Polytechnic a school for specialists in swamp cultivation. The North Pechora expedition worked many years with great success in the deserted region of the northern swamps, and proved that the swamps of the Archangel province are full of wealth, and that millions of peasants, devoured by poverty and hunger in their native places, can find food and shelter in the swampy regions after their cultivation. With small expense the swamps can be turned into land covered with rich grass.

From New England Women

Prove that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Does Restore the Health of Ailing Women.

Boston, Mass.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from hemorrhages (sometimes lasting for weeks), and could get nothing to check them. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) on Tuesday, and the following Saturday morning the hemorrhages stopped. I have taken them regularly ever since and am steadily gaining.

"I certainly think that every one who is troubled as I was should give your Compound Tablets a faithful trial, and they will find relief."—Mrs. George Juby, 802 Fifth Street, South Boston, Mass.

Letter from Mrs. Julia King, Phœnix, R.I.

Phœnix, R.I.—"I worked steady in the mill from the time I was 12 years old until I had been married a year, and I think that caused my bad feelings. I had soreness in my side near my left hip that went around to my back, and sometimes I would have to lie in bed for two or three days. I was not able to do my housework.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped me wonderfully in every way. You may use my letter for the good of others. I am only too glad to do anything within my power to recommend your medicine."—Mrs. Julia King, Box 282, Phœnix, R.I.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.

Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony from female troubles causing backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way.

"I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. So I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. Etta Donovan, 762 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

Letter from Mrs. Winfield Dana, Augusta, Me.

Augusta, Me.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured the backache, headache, and the bad pain I had in my right side, and I am perfectly well."—Mrs. Winfield Dana, R.F.D. No. 2, Augusta, Me.

Letter from Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Newport, Vt.

Newport, Vt.—"I thank you for the great benefit Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I took eight bottles and it did wonders for me, as I was a nervous wreck when I began taking it. I shall always speak a good word for it to my friends."—Mrs. John A. Thompson, Box 3, Newport Center, Vermont.

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.

Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month.

"This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss Gracie B. Dodds, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Rheumatic Pains quickly relieved

Sloan's Liniment is good for pain of any sort. It penetrates, without rubbing, through the muscular tissue right to the bone—relieves the congestion and gives permanent as well as temporary relief.

Here's Proof.

A. W. Lay of Lafayette, Ala., writes:—"I had rheumatism for five years. I tried doctors and several different remedies but they did not help me. I obtained a bottle of Sloan's Liniment which did me so much good that I would not do without it for anything."

Thomas L. Rice of Easton, Pa., writes: "I have used Sloan's Liniment and find it first-class for rheumatic pains."

Mr. G. G. Jones of Baldwins, L.I., writes:—"I have found Sloan's Liniment par excellence. I have used it for broken sinews above the knee cap caused by a fall, and to my great satisfaction I was able to resume my duties in less than three weeks after the accident."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is an excellent remedy for sprains, bruises, sore throat, asthma. No rubbing necessary—you can apply with a brush.

ENDED THE SPELLING LESSON

Bobby's Education, Under Aunt's Tutelage, Afterward Proceeded Under Different Lines.

Miss Thompson, whose form nature has endowed with all-too-ample curves, was giving her little nephew a lesson in spelling the other day. He had spelt b-e, be, and h-e, he, and now she was trying to get him to tell her what m-e, spelt.

"Listen, Bobby," she said earnestly. Then closing her lips she pronounced the sound of a long m, and opening them, the sound of a long e. "What does that spell?"

Bobby looked at her and shook his head. Again she tried, and this time, while pronouncing the sounds, she vigorously tapped her own rotund chest with her plump forefinger.

"Mmum, ee. What letters am I saying and what do they spell?" she asked, still vigorously tapping her chest.

"I don't know what the letters are," replied Bobby, watching the plump forefinger, "but I guess they spell Fat."

No Credit Even for That.

"I am glad to say," remarked Mr. Seekton, "that I never spoke a hasty word to you."

"No, Leonidas," answered his wife, rather gently. "I'm willing to give you credit for not hurrying about anything."—Stray Stories."

GRAND TO LIVE

And the Last Laugh Is Always the Best

"Six months ago I would have laughed at the idea that there could be anything better for a table beverage than coffee," writes an Ohio woman, "now I laugh to know there is.

"Since childhood I drank coffee freely as did the other members of the family. The result was a puny, sickly girl; and as I grew into womanhood I did not gain in health, but was afflicted with heart trouble, a weak and disordered stomach, wrecked nerves and a general breaking down till last winter, at the age of 38, I seemed to be on the verge of consumption.

"My friends greeted me with 'How bad you look! What a terrible color!' and this was not very comforting.

"The doctors and patent medicines did me absolutely no good. I was thoroughly discouraged.

"Then I gave up coffee and commenced Postum. At first I didn't like it, but after a few trials and following the directions exactly, it was grand. It was refreshing and satisfying. In a couple of weeks I noticed a great change.

"I became stronger, my brain grew clearer. I was not troubled with forgetfulness as in coffee times, my power of endurance was more than doubled.

"The heart trouble and indigestion disappeared and my nerves became steady and strong.

"I began to take an interest in things about me. Housework and homemaking became a pleasure. My friends have marveled at the change and when they enquire what brought it about I answer 'Postum, and nothing else in the world.'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SALE DISCUSSED

DAVID N. WINTON SAYS WHITE EARTH BUYERS, "DIDN'T CUT HEADS OFF."

GIVES POSITIVE OPINION

Testifies That He Was Told Agreement Had Been Reached by Some. Other Witnesses at Hearing.

Minneapolis, Minn.—David N. Winter, a wealthy lumberman of Minneapolis, gave it as his opinion at the White Earth reservation hearing that a few buyers of timber at the Crookston sale in November, 1900, "got together and didn't cut each other's heads off."

This opinion was the most startling development of the day's session and marked an advance in the quality of the evidence which is being presented to prove a combination at the sale for the purpose of exclusive bidding opportunities. Mr. Winton was the first witness to express a positive opinion in favor of the theory of the representatives of the department of justice that there was such a combination. He testified also that another had told him that there was an agreement on the part of some of the buyers not to "cut each other's throats." He could, however, neither recall the name of his informant nor suggest the names of those who entered into the understanding.

Another witness, Luther Davies, merchant of Oshkosh, Wis., testified that while the sale was on he bid in some land and entered into an agreement with Hovey C. Clarke to sell it to him at an advance of $5,000, without investing a cent himself. He asserted that he and Clarke had no understanding as to bidding.

A second Minneapolis lumberman of prominence, Richard H. Chute, admitted in an open manner that the company of which he was the head had evaded a state law in its purchase of some land at the sale by bidding for it, through him, in his name. He denied knowledge of any combination among bidders.

A spirited show of feeling marked the hearing and created considerable diversion. The persons responsible were John J. Lynch, a witness, and Gue Beaulieu. The latter's attempt to interrogate Lynch met with a flat refusal which required the diplomacy of Representative Graham to overcome. A declaration of bad feeling between the witness and the man from the reservation was one incident, and the passage of insinuations another, of the quarrel.

Names Puzzle Graham.

Some of the names which designate natural features of the state have proved a source of amusement to Representative Graham of the investigating committee.

Thief River Falls and Rum river have both been named in the investigation. In the case of each the committee chairman has raised his brows.

"Is that the place where all these pillagers come from?" he asked Mr. Burch, when Thief River Falls was mentioned, and when the words Rum river broke from the lips of Richard H. Chute, a witness, Mr. Graham remarked that it was a wonder everybody around here didn't move up there. "Down south, where they are going in for irrigation, that river wouldn't have much show," he said.

MAY STOP SHOE MAKING

Legislator Intimates That Manufacture at Stillwater May Be Stopped.

Minneapolis.—Manufacture of shoes by prison labor at the Stillwater penitentiary will end Sept. 1, 1914, "if no way is found to put an end thereto at an earlier date," according to Representative L. C. Spooner, of Morris. Mr. Spooner was reported to have said to the implement dealers in convention at the West Hotel, Jan. 12, that the state would some day be manufacturing shoes. He says that he is opposed to the state engaging in such manufacture. At present some of the prison labor is sold to the Western Shoe Company, under a contract which expires Sept. 1, 1914, but claims are made that the contract is illegal, and Mr. Spooner's statement intimates that an effort may be made to cancel it.

Fair Association Has Surprise.

Rochester.—The Olmsted County Fair association is $740 richer than it knew and to celebrate the discovery officers paid off an indebtedness which arose after the fair last fall. The officers had calculated that the state aid would amount to only $800, but announcement is made that Olmsted county is entitled to $1,540 because of the large amount of premiums paid.

T. H. Shevlin Will Delayed.

Minneapolis.—The will of Thomas H. Shevlin will not be probated for some time. Announcement to this effect was made by E. A. Macartney of the law firm of Clapp & Macartney. The firm is looking after the legal details of the Shevlin estate.

Block Burns at Thief River Falls.

Thief River Falls, Minn. The Langseth Mercantile company department store burned. The second floor was rented as offices and flats. The stock is a total loss. The entire loss is estimated at $35,000.

BOOSTERS MEET

Prominent Men Address Federated Commercial Clubs.

Bemidji.—A meeting of the Northern Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs was held in this city and was well attended by delegates from Duluth, Thief River Falls, Brainerd and other cities of the northern section of the state. The morning session was given over to a discussion of the agricultural and immigration problems in connection with the proper development of unoccupied lands and the better development of those already under cultivation.

There were three principal addresses, one of which was given by D. Wallace, editor of "The Farmer," of St. Paul, who advised a better organization in the development of the state agricultural lands. W. H. Gemmell, general manager of the Minnesota International railroad, urged a more effective co-operation of the railroads in connection with immigration problems, and Professor D. E. Willard, Soil Expert for the Northern Pacific railroad, spoke on "Soil Resources." In the evening a general round table and smoker was held, at which President Curtis L. Mosher, Minnesota secretary of the National Civic League, was the principal speaker.

Other representative men of Minnesota who were in attendance and took part in the discussions were D. F. Neill of Red Wing, president of the State Federation of Commercial clubs; E. J. Burke, president of the Bemidji Commercial club, who delivered the address of welcome at the opening of the convention, and President Zappfe, of the Brainerd Commercial club, who responded.

TO SOLVE BOY PROBLEM

Mankato Claims Largest Organization of Youths in State.

Mankato.—The Boys' Gospel Regiment of the Y. M. C. A. has reached a membership of over 150, believed to be the largest boy organization in the state. An effort is being made to bring the membership up to 200. The organization is made up of boy members of the Y. M. C. A., who carry on their own meetings and it has all of the officers of a military regiment. Company A consists of boys 12 to 20 years old, and Company B of boys from 8 to 12 years old. The entire routine and formalities of the regular army, salute, codes and military tactics, are in use by the boys. There is only one other organization like it in the United States, and that is at Hamilton, Ohio.

FIRE AT BELLE PLAINE

Loss on Landmark in Minnesota Town Estimated at $13,000.

Belle Plaine.—The old Belle Plaine hotel was almost entirely destroyed by fire. Loss was about $13,000. How the fire originated is unknown. Hampered by the cold weather, the fire department had trouble in checking it, but confined the flames to the upper stories. Damage to the lower story was mostly by water.

"TOOZE" ROGERS DEAD.

Well Known Minneapolis Hotel Man Succumbs to Operation.

Minneapolis.—J. E. Rogers, 42 years of age, known to the traveling public all over the Northwest as "Tooze," proprietor of the Rogers hotel and the Unique theater, interested in many other business ventures and one of the most widely known men in Minneapolis, died at St. Barnabas hospital, following an operation for abdominal trouble.

AWARD CORN SHOW PRIZE

Pine Island Exhibition and Short Course a Success.

Pine Island.—The corn show at Pine Island, Minn., which has been on for a week, ended with an award of prizes valued at $600. Dan Dirby, residing nine miles from Pine Island won the sweepstake prize with an exhibit of 10 ears of corn. This was a silo, valued at $350. Two hundred exhibits of corn constituted the exhibition.

SEEK INSANE CONVICT'S PARDON

St. Paul.—Andrew Tratico's father and mother in sunny Italy want to care for the boy who ran away years ago, came to America, was arrested and sent to state prison for five years and went insane in the prison. They have asked the state board of control to grant a conditional pardon to their son so he may be deported to Italy and cared for by them. Under the name of John Mussolino Tratico was convicted of extortion at Grand Rapids in 1909. The pardon will be considered at the next meeting of the board.

Scarlet Fever in Three Homes

Litchfield.—Three homes in this city are quarantined for scarlet fever. The authorities are making every effort to stamp out the disease.

Slayer Changes His Mind

Jackson.—Martin Johnson, the self-confessed slayer of Ole Sandager at Lakefield last fall, who has all along announced an intention to plead guilty, has changed his mind. The grand jury has returned an indictment, charging him with murder in the first degree, but when arraigned he entered a plea of not guilty and asked for a trial. Judge Quinn appointed E. H. Nichols to defend him and it is thought the defense will be based upon alleged insanity. No date for the trial has yet been fixed.

AS TO HEROISM.

Bronson—A man is never a hero to his valet.

Woodson—No, but considering the chances I have learned to take without flinching, I ought to be one to my chauffeur.

Who the Heathen Be.

Father Bernard Vaughan was condemning a somewhat acrimonious religious argument.

"Disputes of this kind," he said, "remind me forcibly of a little girl.

"'What are the heathen, Jenny?' her Sunday school teacher asked this little girl.

"'The heathen,' the child replied, 'are people who don't quarrel over religion.'"

May Be Plans of Famous Ship.

Great interest has been aroused in Australia by the discovery of some old ships' plans, believed to be those of the barque Endeavor in which Captain Cook discovered Australia, which are now in the possession of the Australasian Pioneers' club. The plans have apparently been in Sydney for a long time. They belonged to Mr. Cummings, a blacksmith, who received them and other charts and diagrams from a Mr. Korff, a naval contractor, said to be descended from a shipwright who sailed with Captain Cook.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

The most perfect remedy ever devised for weak and delicate women is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of woman's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address as above.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Today is ground hog day and the animal's shadow must certainly be visible if he dares to come out of his hole. According to the old superstition we must expect real winter weather for the next six weeks, but nobody expected different anyway.

President Taft's opposition to the recall of judges is strong enough to be classed as prejudice. At present a judge may be impeached, but this should be modified to provide for their recall for any impeachable offence. This would tend to prevent any miscarriage of justice through the red tape, technicalities and loop holes which make impeachment now practically impossible.

The White Earth Indian lands investigation, now in progress at Minneapolis, bids fair to become decidedly sensational. It begins to take the appearance of a political scrap in which the administration tries to bring discredit upon Senator Clapp and Congressman Steenerson as being responsible for the laws under which the Indians were despoiled. The blame should more properly be placed on the Department of the Interior for not enforcing the laws, particularly those relating to the introducing of liquor on reservations.

The Duluth Herald makes the prediction that Roosevelt and Wilson will be the men nominated as the presidential candidates of the two old parties, and gives as its reasons for the prediction the opinion that Roosevelt will be chosen by the Republicans as the man most likely to win, and, Roosevelt being already nominated, the Democrats will pick Wilson as the man most likely to defeat him. The Herald may be correct in its surmise, but we cannot quite figure out just why the republican convention should select Mr. Roosevelt as most likely to win. Recent political history shows that he is not exactly a favorite in New York, and present indications are that Taft would pull a stronger vote in most of the other eastern states. Taft would certainly prove weak in the west, but the west blames Roosevelt for quitting four years ago and giving Taft the job. The politicians in both parties will, of course, do the nominating, but the people will do the voting. At present we doubt if the politicians could figure on Roosevelt carrying the west, but he might regain public confidence by making an early and emphatic declaration of his candidacy and his firm adherence to principles that made him so popular before. As the situation now is Roosevelt would be about as weak as Taft—and that's going some.

Compensation.

A certain young fellow received a government berth, for which he had to undergo a very strict examination.

One day a friend of his who had been noticing how little work he did to earn his salary tackled him.

"I say, Walter, my boy," he began, "you don't perform a great deal of labor, do you?"

"No, I don't have to."

"Aren't you expected to work?"

"Of course not," was the candid reply. "It takes so much hard work to get a job like this that the authorities haven't the nerve to ask a man to do anything more to earn his salary after he gets it."

Malice and Superstition.

In the middle ages malice and superstition found expression in the formation of wax images of hated persons into the bodies of which long pins were stuck. It was confidently believed that in that way deadly injury would be done to the person represented. This belief and practice continued down to the seventeenth century. The superstition indeed still holds its place in the highlands of Scotland, "where," says a well informed writer, "within the last few years a clay model of an enemy was found in a stream, having been placed there in the belief that as the clay washed away so would the health of the hated one decline."

Working an Adage.

"Doctor," said the medical student, "is a blind man apt to be an idiot?"

"Why no! What makes you ask that?"

"The adage says, 'Out of sight, out of mind.'"

Red Tape and a Murderer.

This is a tale of a self confessed murderer who wished to be arrested, as related by a writer in Le Matin, Paris.

Some time ago a man named Berges was stabbed to death at Algiers. Three men were arrested on suspicion, but as they proved their innocence they were released and the matter was shelved. A few days afterward a man called at the office of the local police commissary and said to that official:

"My name is Marius Yvorra. I killed Berges, and this is how I did it."

The commissary listened to the man's confession and said:

"You had better see my secretary."

The secretary also listened to the man's confession and after a little reflection said:

"Now, look here, my good man; this is not the way to get arrested. You must write us a letter confirming the oral statement made to us. Then we shall be able to attend to you. Now, get along."

The man left the office, and perhaps because he was not a good writer he has not been seen since in Algiers.

Wu Ting Fang's Good Cheer.

Among the most intimate of the Chinese friends of the late Sir Robert Hart was a high official, Wu Ting Fang, who prided himself on his alert manner, which made him appear much younger than he was, and boasted that he intended to live 200 years. He once explained how this feat was to be accomplished. "The first thing, naturally, is diet," said he. "The man who would cheat Time should live on nuts like the squirrels. Under no condition should he touch salt, and he should begin and end each meal with a teaspoonful of olive oil. I have hung scrolls in my bedroom," Wu Ting went on to explain, "with these sentences written upon them in English and Chinese, 'I am young, I am healthy, I am cheerful.' Immediately I enter the room my eye falls upon these precepts I say to myself, 'Why, of course I am,' and therefore I am!"—London Chronicle.

One View of the "Terrible Turk."

Speaking of the Turk, an English resident in Turkey writes: "The man I like best is the pure, uncontaminated Turk who has never seen Europe. He is wonderfully hospitable, amazingly kind, essentially a man of peace and a fervent religionist. He is a Moslem, has been reared in Moslemism and believes in his religion. He is honest and straightforward in his business dealings, and his word is his bond. I do not suggest that every Turk possesses all these qualities which I have attributed to the race, nor am I painting him in too rosy a color. I have made many voyages into the interior of Macedonia and Asia Minor; I have entered Turkish villages high up on the snow, stockaded against the bears, where the inhabitants had never seen a European before, and my trust in the kindness and hospitality of these men has never failed me."—London Graphic.

Suspended Animation.

As we descend in the scale of animal life we find that what kills the higher animals does not injure the lower. Cut a polyp in two and you have two living polyps instead of one dead polyp. Break off a lobster's claw and another will grow. You may, it has been said, freeze a fly, but you cannot freeze it to death. There are infusoria called "wheel animalcules." These rotifers have many curious qualities, among which is that of suspending animation for an indefinite period without ceasing to live. Colonies of rotifers may be desiccated and rendered apparently lifeless, and in this condition they may be kept for months and years and possibly centuries. A single drop of water will restore them to life, and the wheel bearers will instantly resume their functional activity precisely at the point where it was broken off.—Harper's.

Bank Checks In Austria.

Banks of Austria are exempt from liability for payment of checks and bills of exchange to parties who may have acquired unlawful possession of the same and forged the indorsements thereon. The banks are not compelled to identify the bearer, and instances occur of such commercial papers being stolen and cashed with forged indorsement, leaving the owner without redress. A check or bill of exchange, therefore, though payable to order and not indorsed is a dangerous form for the remittance of money. Liability for payment on a forged indorsement is incurred by a bank only when it is presumed to have knowledge of the payee's signature, as in the case of well known clients.

Ludvig Monson was defeated by Al Betcher, of McIntosh, at Thief River Falls on Tuesday night. It was the best wrestling match pulled off in Thief River Falls this season, and only the strangle hold was barred. Munson was several pounds heavier than Betcher, and was suffering from a slight cold, but the latter has been at the game for sixteen years and should have sufficient experience to defeat Munson even in perfect condition. The match was won in two straight falls, taking 7 and 27 minutes respectively. We understand that a return match will be arranged between these two for an early date.

Martin T. Strom left last Friday for Reynolds, N. D. where he will visit for a month or so.

J. A. Sorum left on Wednesday for St. Paul and other points where he will spend several days attending to business matters.

Christ Strom returned home to Thief River Falls on Friday last after several days spent visiting with his relatives near here.

While doing a wrestling stunt last Saturday evening Willis Waring, of Excel had a kink put in his neck by Nick Baker. No serious results are anticipated.

On account of the stormy weather no services were held in the Holt church last Sunday. The pastor, Rev. M. B. Ordahl, will be here and hold the services next Sunday' the 11th inst, at 11 o'clock.

Willie Rux and Frank Heiser were out rabbit chasing Tuesday evening and forgot to get home until early morning. They didn't get anything on the [illegible] but hope to have their luck changed by next time.

Holt School Notes.

By Peter Kolden.

Hilma Nyberg was absent from school on Wednesday.

Reinhart Reierson was absent on Monday.

The Mickelson girls started school again on Wednesday.

Otto Olson was absent Monday and Tuesday.

The Werner children commenced school again Monday after a short absence on account of sickness.

Quite a few of the children were absent Monday on account of the big snow drifts.

The children who will take part in the drama, "The Miller's Daughter," are practising every night after school.

Selmer and Ida Reierson were absent the first part of the week.

The eighth grade has begun reading "The Courtship of Miles Standish."

The Rux children have been absent the past week on account of Bill getting the chicken pox.

The Hoel children have not attended school much since Christmas on account of the deep snow.

The eighth and sixth grades all received letters from Myrtle Thomas, who is now at McHenry, N. D., but used to attend school here last fall.

The children had a spell-down on Friday afternoon in place of the program which is supposed to be given every Friday afternoon by the Holt Literary Club. Signe Heinze spelled the most words without missing.

Essence of Good Cooking.

The essence of good cooking lies in four things—the ability to preserve, develop, improve and vary the flavor of foods. The French excel particularly in the art of varying the flavor. A small piece of meat suffices them to make a whole pot of vegetables redolent of it. Conversely, they use all sorts of vegetables to impart their unique flavor to meats—in soups, stews, sauces and the water in which meat or fish is boiled. The combinations and variations are endless. An English epicure declares that the secret of the excellence of French cookery lies in the lavish use made of vegetables. "Where we use one kind French cooks use twenty."—Century.

Two parties seem to have sent in news this week from Rural Route No. 1. Tee parties forgot to attach their names, however, so we cannot publish the correspondence. We are always glad to get the news and publish it provided we have the writer's name attached, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Unsigned communications will not be published.

Stonehenge.

Stonehenge, like "Hamlet," remains a mystery so far as its actual builders are concerned or the actual purpose for which it was erected. The famous stones that stand on Salisbury plains, in England, are the remnants of some sort of structure supposed to have been built about the year 440 or 450 in memory of the Britons who were murdered by Hengist the Saxon. They are probably the remains of a Druid temple or inclosure. About the Druids we know very little except that they were the priests of the Celtic peoples of Great Britain and France in the early pre-Roman times.—New York American.

LOYALTY TO TRUTH.

The truth which in our calm and sober hours we have accepted we ought not to let go because in hours of trial and darkness we cannot see it. Cling to it still and you will see it again by and by. There is such a thing as loyalty to truth, which is noble. It is good to trust in God, in goodness, in eternal right, in the triumph of truth over evil, when we do not see how or understand why.
—James Freeman Clarke.

A Tudor Gallant.

A gallant's toilet was no easy business, and a slow or clumsy servant no doubt got many an oath and blow if he failed to tie up the points of the hose, lace the doublet or arrange the stomacher and frilled shirt to his master's satisfaction. A gentleman's dress had so many fastenings, with so much tying and lacing of his garments together, that it was impossible that he should ever get costumed (sic) without assistance. The long hose had to be securely tied by a number of latchets to the doublet: the doublet itself was laced up the front, and the sleeves, being slashed to show the shirt sleeves, had also to be laced sometimes.—"History of English Dress."

The Wisdom of Fools.

Folly, in the abstract, has been denounced alike by Scripture and ancient heathen sages. "If I wish to look at a fool," says Seneca, "I have not far to look. I have only to look in a mirror." The Emperor Maximilian distinguished the dullest of his counselors by the title of the king of fools. Once when he addressed a prosy adviser by this title the gentleman neatly enough replied: "I wish with all my heart I were king of fools. I should have a glorious kingdom and your imperial majesty would be among my subjects."

Slow Smoking.

Six members of a Parisian club took six cigars out of the same box, lit them simultaneously and tried to make them last as long as possible. The winner smoked his for two hours and seventeen minutes.

More Than Petit.

Madge—He stole a kiss from me. Mabel—Well, that was only petit larceny. Madge—It wasn't; it was grand.

THE FOUNDATION of future financial independence is a growing Bank Account. Place your earning and watch it grow. We pay a liberal rate of interest on time deposits.

Why you should bank with HOLT STATE BANK:—

We can with pleasure assure you of the entire safety of your funds under our care. Our Cash is protected against any possible loss thru burglary or hold-up robbery by ample insurance and any loss thereby would be promptly replaced. We are organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota which now require two examinations yearly by the Examining Committee, four printed reports, two examinations yearly by a capable Bank Examiner. Also the bye-laws, require that the active officers be bonded and be personally responsible for all moneys or valuables left under their care which assures a straight and honest administration of its affairs. And further, our loans are so drawn that payment is assured at maturity either by the pledging of personal property or real estate, or by some responsible party of good financial standing acting as guarantor.

Our cash resources have increased $25,000.00 during the season 1911 and we want a like amount of increase during 1912. Affording our patrons absolute protection and safety and conducting our affairs in a business-like way are factors which lead to our success, and under these conditions we feel entitled to a generous share of your business during 1912.

P&O

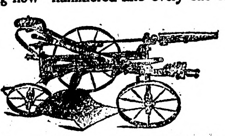
The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.



It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

NIAGARA ICE BRIDGE BREAKS

MAN, WOMAN AND BOY LOSE THRILLING BATTLE FOR LIFE IN RAGING TORRENT.

THREE PERSONS PERISH

Four Others on Jam Reach Shore Safely.—Thousands Witness Tragedy from Banks and Bridges.

Niagara Falls, Feb. 6.—The great ice bridge that has choked the river channel between the cataract and the upper bridge below the falls for the last three weeks broke and went down the river, taking with it to their death, a man and woman, Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Stanton of Toronto, and Burrell Heacock, 17 years old, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Four other persons were on the ice at the time, but managed to get ashore in safety.

The bridge was considered perfectly safe. For weeks the great fields of ice had been coming down the river, piling up against the barrier until it was from 60 to 80 feet thick and under the influence of zero weather the great mass had become firmly anchored to the shore. The jam in some places was a quarter of a mile in breadth. For two weeks it had offered safe passage to the hardy and an immense crowd of excursionists came to view the winter wonder of the river.

Man and Boy Scorn Rescue.

Somewhere deep in the great whirl pool sleeps the man, identified as Mr. Stanton, who twice put aside chances of rescue in order to remain with his terror-stricken wife, and who, in the shadow of death—just at the break in the rapids—spurned assistance for himself and attempted to bind about the woman's body a rope dangling from the lower steel arch bridge. The lad, Burrell Heacock, was cast in the same mould. Had he not turned back on the ice to give assistance to the man he, too, might have made the shore.

Word that the ice bridge had gone out flashed through the city like wildfire and within a short time the American shore of the river was lined by thousands of people who witnessed the tragedy being enacted in the deep ravine below them.

MANCHU THRONE SUBMIT

Empress Dowager Instructs Premier Yuan to Establish Republic.

Pekin, Feb. 6.—The empress dowager has issued an edict instructing Premier Yuan Shi Kai to establish a republic in co-operation with the southern republicans.

The edict has not yet been published and it is expected that it will be kept more or less secret so far as the public is concerned until arrangements in the south have been completed.

Yuan Shi Kai is now endeavoring to persuade the Nanking government to hand over the control of affairs to enable him to carry on the administration of the whole empire until the national convention appoints a permanent government and adopts a constitution.

It is doubted here that the republicans in Nanking will consent to this. It is believed that the only solution possible is the creation of two provisional governments and the continuance of temporary control.

MURDER IN KENTUCKY

Crime Committed Because of Acquaintance With Daughters of Accused.

Monticello, Ky., Feb. 6.—John E. Worley was shot and killed and his nephew, Cater Worley, was fatally wounded on the streets here. Dr. John Clark and his son, James Clark, and his son, James Clark, have been arrested, charged with the shooting. It was said Clark became incensed when he learned his daughters were acquainted with the Worleys. Both families are well known.

PEACE IS RESTORED

Hondurans Greet With Enthusiasm Elevation of General Bonilla.

Tegucigalpa, Feb. 6.—The assumption of office as chief executive by General Bonilla is greeted throughout the country with great enthusiasm. CONFERENCE OF WOODMEN

TO BE HELD IN MINNEAPOLIS FEB. 22.

Dissatisfied Members Urged to Retain Their Charters Pending Discussion.

Minneapolis, Feb. 6.—A wagon load of mail was sent out by the Modern Woodmen assembly, organized Jan. 31, to fight against the adoption of the insurance rates provided for in the Mobile bill. The mass of mail was addressed to leading Woodmen officials and leaders throughout the country, and contained 45,000 circulars calling upon them to send delegates to the national convention to be held in Minneapolis on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22.

The document sent out is voluminous, printed in the form of a three-column, four-page paper, and bears the heading, "The Veto." It gives the table of insurance rates established by the Mobile bill and contains a denunciation of the proceedings of the Chicago convention. It appeals to members not to allow their insurance to lapse, and contains a statement by A. L. Sundean, leader of the opposition to the rate increase at Chicago, discouraging secession.

The call aims to organize every state by legislative districts to fight the adoption of the Mobile bill by different legislatures.

Charles W. Crosby Passes.

Duluth, Feb. 6.—Charles W. Crosby of Duluth, aged 83 years, died yesterday. He was a pioneer of Minnesota, having come from Nassau, N. H., to St. Paul in 1850, to practice law. Later he resided in Minneapolis, and came to Duluth eighteen years ago. George H. Crosby, a Duluth mining man, is a son, and Mrs. J. W. Willis of Minneapolis is a daughter. M. F. Crosby of Crosby, Minn., and W. H. and C. J. Crosby of Duluth are other sons of the deceased. He is also survived by his wife.

5,000 Troops to Belfast.

Belfast, Feb. 6.—The lord mayor of Belfast notified the parks commission to prepare accommodations for 5,000 troops on Feb. 8, the date of the home rule demonstration.

HAZZARD JURY IS FOR MANSLAUGHTER

PRINCIPAL IN STARVATION CASE FOUND GUILTY OF CAUSING WOMAN'S DEMISE.

BY "STARVATION CURE"

Means an Indeterminate Sentence—Prisoner's Attorney Gives Notice of Appeal and Asks Bond.

Seattle, Feb. 6.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Linda Burfield Hazzard, accused of having starved to death Miss Claire Williamson, a wealthy English patient at the Hazzard "starvation sanitarium," returned a verdict of manslaughter. The jury was out more than 20 hours.

At the conclusion of the reading, E. D. Kerr, of counsel for Mrs. Hazzard, gave notice of appeal and asked that bond be fixed at $5,000.

$10,000 Bonds Ordered.

The state objected and bonds of $10,000 were ordered. Mrs. Hazzard was remanded to the custody of the sheriff. The verdict carries an indeterminate penitentiary sentence of from one to twenty years. As she left, Mrs. Hazzard raged at what she declared to be persecution on the part of the medical profession.

Mrs. Hazzard was arrested on Aug. 5, 1911, on a charge of murder in the first degree on complaint of Miss Dorothy Williamson, aged 37, who alleged that her sister, Claire Williamson, aged 33, was starved to death by Mrs. Hazzard.

The Williamsons were English women of means who were on a tour around the world and who consulted Mrs. Hazzard concerning their health. Mrs. Hazzard soon had both women in her starvation sanitarium at Olalla, where, on a diet of orange juice and asparagus, Claire Williamson died, May 19, 1911, and Dorothea was wasted to a skeleton.

After Claire's death, Mrs. Hazzard obtained the appointment of herself as guardian of Dorothea by alleging that the latter was of infirm mind. She also applied for appointment of herself as administratrix of the estate of Claire Williamson.

British Vice Consul Notified.

The plight of Dorothea came to the knowledge of the British vice consul, C. E. L. Agassiz, at Tacoma, with the result that Dorothea was called of a sound mind and her guardian removed. Mrs. Hazzard's application for letters of administration of Claire's estate was refused and Agassiz was appointed administrator instead. Dorothea was nursed back to health. Each of the Williamson sisters inherited $250,000.

As Linda Burfield, Mrs. Hazzard a few years ago was prominent in Minneapolis. Before the arrest in the Williamson case, Mrs. Hazzard had been in frequent trouble on account of the death of her patients, eight having succumbed to her starvation treatment.

WILL IS CONTESTED

Heirs Make Objection to Eccentric Clause About Marriage.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 6.—Because the will of their grandfather, Francis L. Drake, provides that they must each marry and become parents before they can share in the estate, Hazel and Elmer Yeager, children of a wealthy Vigo county family, brought suit here to set aside the will. In support of their plea they allege that their grandfather was of unsound mind.

Steamer Sinks; Crew Is Saved.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 6.—The British steamer Consols, cotton laden from Galveston for Hamburg, flame-swept in a long, futile race for port, sank 40 miles south of Cape Henry. Her crew of 34 men, refugees on the British steamer Castle Eden, were landed at Newport News.

BOMB MYSTERY IN NEW YORK

CIGARETTE BOX EXPLODES IN APARTMENTS.

Westerner Present When Tragedy Occurred Held for Examination.

New York, Feb. 6.—Definite clues to the identity of the person who sent the bomb which caused the death of Helen Taylor, known also as Mrs. Grace Walker, in the apartments on West Seventy-seventh street failed to materialize, although a score of the city's best detectives employed all their ingenuity toward unravelling the mystery.

Chas. M. Dickinson, the employe of a motor company and formerly of Portland, Ore., who was present in the apartment when Miss Taylor opened the fatal package that contained the bomb, will be given a hearing by Coroner Feinberg, on a technical charge of homicide, but the police seem inclined to accept his statement that he knew nothing of the bomb until the explosion occurred.

Efforts either to establish a motive for the crime or to find the messenger who delivered the innocent looking cigarette box with its death dealing contents thus far have proved unavailing.

The police developed the fact, however, that there was another man in the apartment just previous to the explosion, a fact they learned, they say from Miss Edna Lamarre who occupied the apartment with Miss Taylor. Miss Lamarre admitted, according to the police, that when Dickinson arrived at the apartment she left by a rear door accompanied by the man, who was not, however, seen by Dickinson.

About ten minutes later she called up Miss Taylor on the telephone, according to the police, to carry out a pre-arranged plan to induce Dickinson to leave the house on the ground that Miss Taylor's brother-in-law was coming. Dickinson and Miss Taylor had quarreled, she explained, and the latter was anxious to get him out of the house.

Miss Lamarre got no answer to her message, she said, the explosion already having occurred, she believes. The police say they have the name of her companion, but will not make it public until they have interrogated him.

Each of Us Has $34.61.

Washington, Feb. 6.—An equal division of all the money in the United States would result in each person possessing $34.61. With a population of 94,958,000 on Feb. 1, 1912, there was $3,624,572,121 in the United States.

Troops Resume Rioting.

El Paso, Feb. 6.—Advices from Chihuahua state that rioting among the troops was resumed. It is reported that General Pascual Orozco is to be made governor of the state.

Official Reporter Dropped.

Washington, Feb. 6. — The Lorimer senatorial investigating committee summarily dismissed Milton Bluemenberg, its official reporter, because of his conduct at the hearing.

Victoria Heads Santo Domingo.

San Domingo, Feb. 6.—Senator Eladio Victoria, who has filled the office of provisional president since the assassination of President Caceres on Nov. 19, was elected president of the Republic of Santo Domingo.

Lumbermen Accused of Peonage.

London, Ky., Feb. 6.—A special term of the United States district court began here to try the cases of ten prominent and wealthy lumbermen who have been indicted on peonage charges.

INSTITUTE AT LA FAYETT

More Than 300 Entries Are Made In Prize Show of Products.

Lafayette.—Last Saturday was a big day for business men, farmers and farmers' wives. It was a one-day farmers' institute, and proved unusually successful. More than four hundred farmers turned out.

Practical lectures were given by the institute corps. The institute was in charge of A. Bracket of Excelsior, who discussed "Horticulture and Poultry." He was assisted by such men as L. E. Potter of Springfield, who spoke on "Live Stock and Farm Conveniences;" Otto Messenbrink of Cologue, who discussed "Silos and Dairying;" M. P. Somes of the State School of Agriculture, who gave an interesting talk on "Grasshoppers."

The business men of Lafayette had subscribed more than $100 worth of premiums for the best farm products to be exhibited in connection with the institute, and this proved such a drawing card that more than three hundred exhibits were entered in competition. Of corn there were 59 entries, of wheat 90 entries, oats 51 entries, barley 31 entries, 22 of flax and 53 of potatoes. Those who captured the first prize were: Malmburg Bros., corn; P. O. Swenson, wheat; J. Arlanson, oats; Louis Hacker, barley; J. Arlanson, flax, and Hiram High, potatoes.

CRUSADE AT MANKATO

Men and Religion Forward Movement Thought to be Behind It.

Mankato.—A number of arrests, and warrants out for more people, is the result of activity during the last few days of two Minneapolis detectives, Frank Maloy and Lund, who have been gathering evidence in the city for some organization, believed by some to be the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which has a strong organization in the city. It is announced that a cleanup is in process, in order to afford better protection to the boys and young men of the city.

Four warrants have been sworn out for alleged violators of the liquor laws, several for alleged violations of the cigaret, pool and billiard laws, eight charging dealers with having cigarets in stock, and several for maintaining or frequenting resorts.

SKIPS ON WEDDING EVE

Fiancee Shy $25 and St. Cloud Police Want Prospective Groom.

St. Cloud. — Leaving mysteriously the day before his wedding, presumably with $25, the property of his fiancee, Wm. Lee, an employe of the Great Northern car shops, is wanted by the local police. Lee was to have been married to Miss Mary Schumacher, who has been running a boarding house at Waite Park at which Lee was staying. The courtship has been in progress for but six weeks and had not met with favor on the part of the parents. The disappearance of the young man was discovered when the father went to his room. The money was missing from the young lady's pocketbook. Nothing is known of the history of Lee.

DEALERS PLEAD GUILTY

Only Two Caught in Mankato Combat Cigarette Law Charge.

Mankato. — All of the dealers arrested on complaint of outside detectives, charged with carrying cigarettes in their stock, have pleaded guilty, except two, and will be sentenced Monday. No new warrants have been issued but more is expected in a few days. Frank Malloy, one of the detectives engaged in the cleaning up work, says that, generally speaking, moral conditions in Mankato are much better than those which are permitted to exist in other towns that have been investigated by him.

GOOD PROFIT MADE

Co-operative Creamery Has Had Successful Year.

Little Falls.—The annual statement of the Clover Leaf Creamery association of this county shows that the creamery had a total income of $24,815.92, and received in the year an average price of 25.2 cents per pound for its butter. The total amount paid for butter fat to the farmers was $21,713.63. The creamery is co-operative, and officers' wages amounted to only $87.25.

Contract Let for Big Power Dam.

Brainerd.—The Cuyuna Range Power company has let the contract for the building of a large dam on the Crow Wing river to the Grant Smith company. Rock is now being hauled to the dam, which will require a year to complete. The power company is laying out its pole line from the Crow Wing river to Deerwood, where is stationed its steam plant, which at the present time is supplying current to Deerwood, Cuyuna, Crosby and Ironton, and some of the mines on the north range.

STREET CAR COLLISION.

In St. Paul, Results in the Injury of Twenty Persons.

St. Paul. — One passenger was killed and more than a score bruised when a street car ran away on the grade below the Selby hill tunnel in St. Paul and crashed into a Selby-Lake car at Seven Corners. Those seriously injured were:

Motorman Swanson, left leg cut off.

J. H. Johnson, head badly cut.

George D. Heatherington, was killed.

Twenty others were thrown from their seats in the cars, their faces cut by the broken glass and generally bruised. The runaway car telescoped the Selby-Lake car. The stove in the vestibule of the runaway car was knocked over and the woodwork immediately caught fire.

Motorman Swanson said that the air brakes refused to work. The only other serious collision the local system ever had occurred at the same spot 24 years ago this month.

ROADS HOARD COAL

Railways Fear Coal Strike, So Are Laying in Big Stock of Fuel.

Duluth. — Northwestern railroads, anticipating the possibility of labor trouble in the spring, are hoarding steam coal. The docks controlled by the various railroads entering this district are being piled high with the commodity, and coal is arriving daily.

Illinois coal supplies are being drawn upon, and it is predicted that the supply of railroad coal at the head of the lakes will have increased to immense proportions before April 1.

It is predicted that the commercial supply will be greatly lessened by spring. A vice president of a coal company is authority for the statement that "between a cold winter and the possibilities of a coal strike, it looks as if the Northwestern coal docks would be swept clean before new coal arrives from down the lakes."

FOR FIRE PREVENTION

State and Railway Officials Will Confer at Brainerd Next Week.

Brainerd. — A convention for the purpose of discussing fire prevention as it applies to a railway right of way, and other railway property, the proper method of fighting fires generated along tracks, and other topics of interest, will be discussed in a helpful way by Chief Foster W. T. Cox of St. Paul, his assistant, Mr. Tierney, the state forest rangers, and prominent officials of the Soo line, Canadian Northern, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Minnesota & International and Cuyuna & Northern railways, at Brainerd, Saturday, February 10. The Commercial club has offered its rooms for the holding of the convention.

WANTS ANDERSON'S SEAT

John J. McCaughey Willing to Be Congressman from First District.

St. Paul. — John J. McCaughey of Kassan, Dodge county, filed for the Republican nomination for congress in the First congressional district to contest with Sidney M. Anderson, the incumbent. Mr. McCaughey's announcement follows closely the resolution of protest passed at a recent meeting of First district editors in which Congressman Anderson's record was assailed.

Homesteaders Who Have Proved Up Say Department Is Too Lenient.

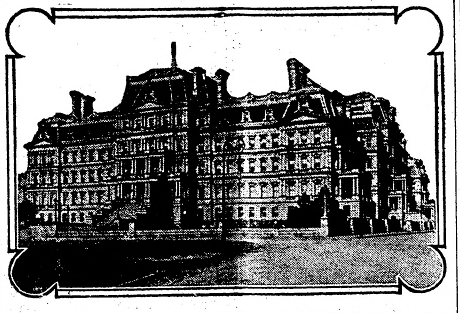
Thief River Falls.—The settlers in the eleven towns constituting that portion of the Red Lake Indian reservation which was opened to settlement in 1904 have been more than fortunate in the matter of having the dates of their annual payments postponed from time to time. Recently the department of the interior extended the time of final proof for one year. A like extension was granted the settlers a year ago, and though they were expected to make final proof and payment in five years from 1904, the date of sale, they will not have to prove up until 1913.

Settlers who have proved up are complaining that the delinquents take advantage of a lenient department at Washington, and thus they avoid the local, county and state taxation to which they would be subject were they to make final proof. At the end of the present extension public sentiment will compel the making of all final proofs, and thus the whole reservation, which seven years ago was a broad prairie, bare of any improvements, will be well settled.

Mankato to Have New Bridge.

Mankato.—George W. Cooley, engineer of the state highway commission, and C. E. Nagel, deputy engineer and an expert on bridge matters, were in Mankato, having been invited to look over the situation between this city and North Mankato and to report upon the location and kind of bridge that ought to be built. There is one bridge now, but it is becoming inadequate and is not strong or wide enough to permit the electric railway to cross. The visit was made upon request of Governor Eberhart.

State Department Building



Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation

CAREFULLY guarded in a secluded room on the top floor of the State Department building at Washington, the United States government preserves a large number of the most significant papers and documents which have played a part in the history of the nation. Conspicuous among these relics is the Emancipation Proclamation issued by Abraham Lincoln. Indeed, for that matter, all of the presidential proclamations issued during the past century and a quarter by our more than two dozen chief magistrates are carefully filed away in this storeroom, but it is not too much to say that Lincoln's emancipation proclamation is the most interesting of all these autograph documents of our presidents.

Persons who do not realize how carefully Uncle Sam now guards and preserves his precious documents have occasionally expressed fear lest the future hold for the emancipation proclamation the unlucky fate that threatens our other momentous manuscript,—the Declaration of Independence. The latter, be it explained, is in regrettable condition. Indeed, the ink has so faded that, as the only means of staying the ravages of time, the secretary of state has had the document sealed in an air-tight, light-tight safe that may not be opened except upon his written order. However, the condition of the Declaration of Independence is due largely to lack of proper care earlier in its existence and there is little danger that the experiences which the Declaration has undergone will find a sequel in the case of the emancipation proclamation.

Showing the Proclamation.

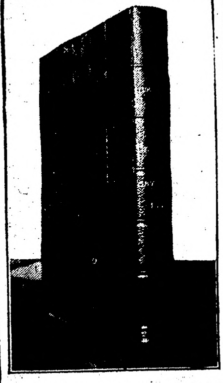
For one thing the emancipation proclamation is almost never publicly exhibited and it is never exposed for long intervals to a strong light as some of our other precious documents have been when displayed at expositions, etc. On the contrary the emancipation edict is bound, together with other proclamations by Lincoln in a specially designed volume which is just about the best imaginable way to preserve it.

The book in which this epoch-making document has place is one of the most sumptuous volumes which Uncle Sam has ever produced. This de luxe volume is fourteen and one half by seventeen and one-half inches in size so as to accommodate the proclamation without folding and is luxuriously bound in the richest red leather. This gold-edged volume was not prepared, it may be added, in Uncle Sam's regular book bindery attached to the U. S. government printing office but was bound by hand by the expert bookbinders that are kept regularly in the employ of the state department for just such work as this,—that is, the preparation of volumes too elegant to be produced in the routine of a commercial plant.

There was another consideration that prompted the officials of the department of state to have the Lincoln proclamations, including the supremely important one on emancipation, bound by their own experts in their own building. This was the fear lest something should happen to the valuable documents if they were allowed to pass out of the state department. There is always a chance of accidental loss when official papers have to pass through many hands, as would be the case were the precious sheets to go to the big bindery, and then, too, it is impossible to ignore an element of danger of theft by a chance dishonest person, for an autograph of Lincoln always commands a big enough price to prove tempting, and the autograph of Lincoln's signature attached to his emancipation proclamation is particularly clear and characteristic.

The issuance of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation was, of course, one of the most important events of his entire administration and the circumstances of the submission of this document for the approval of his cabinet are, as history relates them, among the most dramatic of the entire war period. As the story goes, Lincoln, on this occasion, sent word to the members of his cabinet that he wished to see them. Secretary Chase, the first member to arrive at the White House, found Lincoln reading a book. "Chase, did you ever read this book?" inquired the president. "What book is it?" asked Chase. "Artemus Ward," rejoined Lincoln, "and just let me read you this chapter on Wax Wurx in Albany." He launched into the amusing volume and read on and on as one after another of the cabinet members joined the circle. Finally, as there appeared to be no prospect of the president concluding, several of the members began to fidget and finally Mr. Stanton intimated rather testily that he had work to do and that if the object in calling the meeting had been to transact any business he would like to have the business presented at once so that he could return to his office. Thereupon Lincoln laid down the open book, opened a drawer, took out a paper that proved to be the emancipation proclamation and prepared to read it to his official family. But before beginning on the contents he looked up for a moment and said: "Gentlemen, I have called you together to notify you what I have determined to do. I want no advice. Nothing can change my mind." After the reading the members filed out in silence, but one, looking back, saw that Lincoln had resumed the perusal of Artemus Ward.

For all that Lincoln seemed thus to take so lightly the significance of this history-making edict there is abundant evidence that in reality not only the consequences but the act itself held large place in his mind, both then and later. The artist, Carpenter, who in 1864 executed for the United States government a large painting representing the reading of the emancipation to the cabinet, found Lincoln greatly interested in every detail of the work.



Emancipation Proclamation Bound Volume.

In communities where there is a large colored population each recurring anniversary of the issuance of the emancipation proclamation is made the occasion of a celebration of one kind or another, but it is expected that such commemorative exercises will be much more elaborate than usual this year, owing to the fact that the year 1912 holds the fiftieth anniversary of this event which has been so far-reaching in its consequences. Government officials expect requests that the original emancipation proclamation be loaned for exhibition in connection with some of these semicentenary programs; but the present intention is not to grant any such requests.

Man's Appeal to Himself

By Rev. J. H. Ralston, Secretary Correspondence Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from Him.—Ps. 62: 5.

These were the words of a man of affairs, one who had attained the highest position within reach, and that not by heredity or chance, but by the force of his qualities; yet withal a man very human, a man who knew the depths of sin as well as the heights of intimate communion with God — and this man called on his soul to wait upon God.

The psalmist recognized within himself something to which many are very indifferent—a soul that related him to God, and differentiated him from the brute creation. Whether that which he recognized was in itself immortal or only contained the possibility of immortality need not interest us now, but it was another self, an alter ego, what some might call the subliminal self, and which has in those who have lived a life of purposeful sin, been stifled, and yet cries out constantly for recognition, and nourishment, and ultimate perfection.

It is not the imbecile who thinks of his soul, but it is the man who recognizes his true humanity, if you please; as in this case, oftentimes the man of affairs, of parts, of high ambitions. And this man is frequently quite out of patience with those who profess to be physicians of the soul and yet prescribe little or nothing that benefits the soul.

Great statesmen, financiers, railroad magnates, inventors, artists, manufacturers, etc., when they go to church, want soul food, something to which the soul responds. A leading lawyer recently said with reference to the message that should be given from the pulpit: "It should come from God, and should relate to the inner life, it should be food for the soul."

The call was not to something indefinite: "Wait thou only upon God." Here is the recognition of the correlative to the soul, the spiritual God. This recognition was not of an abstract idea, but of a personality—it gave no opportunity for quibbling and doubting. There was no suggestion in any little "if." This man of affairs and great parts was not the only historical character who has thus thought and acted. Some men may be like Job and ask where they may find God, but many others have had direct and constant intercourse with the spiritual God, they have seen him who is invisible.

Can this not be said of our three martyr presidents? Of Gladstone, of Bismarck, of William of Germany, of Justice Harlan? And as we glance back over the past do we not have Chinese Gordon, Stonewall Jackson, Oliver Cromwell, Gustavus Adolphus, Savonarola, Paul, David, Moses, Abraham and a host of others? Granting that these men waited on God, for so they all professed, their achievements are not an enigma.

What is it to wait on God? Is it not keeping silence before him? "Let all the earth keep silence before him." And such silence before God is an essential element of prayer. One has recently said that prayer is not the claiming a hearing, it is giving a hearing; it is not speaking to God, it is listening to God. It is true that

"Whatever is best for me, my God will bring to me,
If I do only wait, and trust, and pray,
What'er seems dark to me, shall end in light for me;
'Tis but the gloaming, which fore-runs the day."

This waiting before God, too, suggests a readiness to respond to the call of God as the old retainers would respond to the call of their liege lords. And was there ever a period of the history of the race when the likelihood of a call was as great? The world is open to men spirit-filled to go to the thousand million human beings who as yet do not know the true God.

Another suggestion is that of tarrying. How impatient we are! A man must make his first millions in ten years of business. Ten more millions must be made in the next five years. Who now toils for the slow increase on an investment, except the man who lacks the speed of action of today's trading? And this is largely true of christian work—we will not work to the limit and be patient as long as the fruits do not fall into our laps in great quantities. And how impatient we are in trial! We will not wait until God gets through his process of realizing for us our best, until the purifying fire has burned out our dross. And this waiting on God would not be honoring to him unless our waiting was with confident expectation. The soul of David would never have received a blessing if he had waited before God indulging a perhaps.

Doctors Said Health Gone

Suffered with Throat Trouble

Mr. B. W. D. Barnes, ex-Sheriff of Warren County, Tennessee, in a letter from McMinnville, Tennessee, writes:

"I had throat trouble and had three doctors treating me. All failed to do me any good, and pronounced my health gone. I concluded to try Peruna, and after using four bottles can say I was entirely cured."

Mr. B. W. D. Barnes.

Unable to Work.

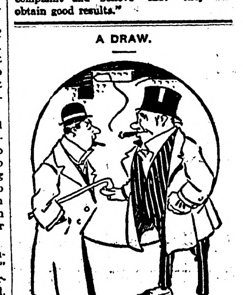
Mr. Gustav Himmelreich, Hochheim, Texas, writes:

"For a number of years I suffered whenever I took cold, with severe attacks of asthma, which usually yielded to the common home remedies.

"Last year, however, I suffered for eight months without interruption so that I could not do any work at all. The various medicines that were prescribed brought me no relief.

"After taking six bottles of Peruna, two of Lacupia and two of Manalin, I am free of my trouble so that I can do all my farm work again. I can heartily recommend this medicine to any one who suffers with this annoying complaint and believe that they will obtain good results."

A DRAW.



Old Grouch—So you had a fight with Clarence. He claims he licked you.

Cholly—Oh! the boastah! It's twue he wumpled my cwavat dweadfully, but when it was all ovah his collah was fwightfully wilted.

An Interruption.

Young America's Reply.

"Why did Shylock want a pound of flesh?"

"I suppose he knew that the price of meat was going up."

It is very apt to make a young widow indignant if a man doesn't pretend to use force the first time he attempts to kiss her.

THE CARELESS GROCER

Blundered, and Great Good Came of It.

A careless grocer left the wrong package at a Michigan home one day and thereby brought a great blessing to the household.

"Two years ago I was a sufferer from stomach troubles, so acute that the effort to digest ordinary food gave me great pain, and brought on a condition of such extreme nervousness that I could not be left alone. I thought I should certainly become insane. I was so reduced in flesh that I was little better than a living skeleton. The doctors failed to give me relief and I despaired of recovery.

"One day our groceryman left a package of Grape-Nuts food by mistake, so I tried some for dinner. I was surprised to find that it satisfied my appetite and gave me no distress whatever. The next meal I ate of it again, and to be brief, I have lived for the past year almost exclusively on Grape-Nuts. It has proved to be a most healthful and appetizing food, perfectly adapted to the requirements of my system.

"Grape-Nuts is not only easily digested and assimilated, but I find that since I have been using it I am able to eat anything else my appetite fancies, without trouble from indigestion. The stomach trouble and nervousness have left me, I have regained my plumpness and my views of life are no longer despondent and gloomy.

"Other members of my family, especially my husband, (whose old enemy, the 'heart-burn,' has been vanquished) have also derived great benefit from the use of Grape-Nuts food and we think no morning meal complete without it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE AEROPLANE IN WAR

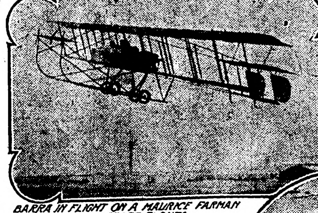
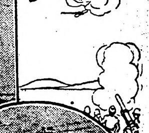
THE SAVARY BIPLANE, SHOWING THE TWIN PROPELLERS AND "ZABOR" MOTOR IN FRONT



BARRA IN FLIGHT ON A MAURICE FARMAN BIPLANE WITH OFFSET PLANES



WEYMANN ON HIS NIEUPORT MONOPLANE READY TO LAND

NO country has spent so much money and time in attempting to perfect an aeroplane which under all the circumstances that might occur would prove of valuable assistance in time of war, as has France. Our sister republic was one of the first to recognize the possibilities of this great invention as a possible aid to her army and navy.

Military aeroplane tests just completed in that country have shown remarkable progress in the perfection of the flying machine. The most prominent French aviators participated in this event and the machines represented were the very last word in aeroplane construction.

The most conspicuous success of the meet was a monoplane driven by Weymann, who, with a dead load of 660 pounds and one passenger, ascended from a ploughed field and attained a speed of 67.72 miles an hour. The Deperdussin monoplane showed good results also, two of this type participating in the tests. One was piloted by Prevost and the other by Vedrines. Prevost's machine was fitted with a 100-horsepower Gnome motor. Vedrines had only 60 horsepower, but made a better record than did Prevost with his fourteen cylinder revolving motor. The latter ascended to 1,640 feet in 9 minutes and 12 seconds, whereas Vedrines needed less than 9 minutes to attain the same altitude.

Weymann had no difficulty in completing the first day's tests. He started from Rheims at 10 a. m. and landed at Montcornet. His machine was taken apart and returned to Rheims, reassembled, and at 4 p. m. he started again. After landing on a ploughed field, he rose from the spot and showed that his machine did not need any help to rise, except that of the passenger he carried along. It is claimed that his machine was the only one that was able to leave the ploughed field without any other assistance.

The Hanriot monoplane, said to be one of the leading French flying machines, was fitted with a four-cylinder 70-horsepower water-cooled motor, carrying the propeller at the front end of the crankshaft. Twin wheels were used with double skids. The spread of this machine is 44.6 feet, the total supporting surface being 344 square feet. Of the successful biplanes were those of the Breguet type, three of which participated in the contest. One was provided with a 100-horsepower Gnome, another with a 140-horsepower Gnome and the third with a 110-horsepower Canton Unne motor.

The Savary biplane was a novel type, somewhat similar to the Breguet with the motor placed in front of the lower plane, in about the same position as the aviator's seat in a Curtiss biplane. Two propellers in front of the planes are driven by chains from the motor in the same way as on the Wright biplane. The aviator is placed in the rear of the lower plane. There is a central skid below the lower plane and twin wheels placed apart on each side. The motor used is a 70-horsepower 4-cylinder water-cooled engine.

The Breguet biplane is of the old type, but the undercarriage has been changed and now carries three wheels. The Breguet is notable in that it has only three or four uprights connecting the main planes at the front. It is quickly dismounted, and for this reason is excellent for military use.

The Goupy biplane which participated in this test was the first in Europe to use offset planes. Two of these machines were entered in the competition, but neither was classed in the final event. This machine is built along the standard lines, except for the offset planes. The motor is an 8-cylinder air-cooled Renault, and is placed at the rear of the lower plane with the propeller on the extremity of the cam shaft. It was on a machine of this construction that Reneaux won the $20,000 Michelin prize, flying from Paris to the Puy de Dome mountain with a passenger on board. The Henry Farman biplane did not prove to be very successful, as only one machine of this type was classed in the final competition.

The machines which completed all the tests were entitled to compete in the final race and were classed as follows:

Monoplanes—First, Nieuport (Weymann); second, Deperdussin (Prevost); third, Deperdussin (Vedrines).

Biplanes—First, Breguet (Moineau); second, Breguet (Moineau); third, Breguet (Bregi); fourth, M. Farman (Reneaux); fifth, M. Farman (Barra); sixth, H. Farman (Fisher); seventh, Savary (Franz).

Only ten machines out of 31 finished all the tests successfully and were therefore admitted to the final race. A speed of 60 miles an hour was the required average with a full load, and an altitude of 1,640 feet had to be attained in the shortest time possible, not exceeding 15 minutes. The final cross-country race was won by Weymann, who covered a distance of 186 miles in two hours and 34 minutes, an average speed of 72.47 miles an hour. Prevost was second with an average of 56.6 miles an hour.

One result of the race was to prove conclusively that the biplane cannot compete with the monoplane where speed is the test.

FISH COULD READ

Tale Told by Friend of Publicity Promoter.

Sturgeon Didn't Mind Being Swimming Billboard, but Balked at Advertising Good Fishing at Summer Resort.

New York.—"I am well acquainted with a man who ran a summer hotel on the banks of a stream about an aeronaut's fly from the city," said the man who writes the vacation guidebook of a certain railroad and who is noted for his chivalry in assisting truth to rise after she has been crushed to earth.

"Along early in the summer this gentleman was attracted by a large sturgeon which breakfasted every moning on the refuse which floated away from the hostelry. Noting the ample proportions of this fish, my friend was struck with a certain idea, which he proceeded to enlarge upon. He saw to it personally that a dainty morsel was set out for the big sturgeon every day. Naturally, the large fish had friendly feelings toward the vicinity where he obtained his largess every day, and it was but a short while before mine host was almost on speaking terms with the sturgeon. It was just a step further then to go out in a boat and pace the sturgeon over a course of about a mile, all the while keeping him near the surface of the river. At the end of each workout the big sturgeon was rewarded by something to eat.

"The next step in the process of education was to rig up a large sign setting forth the virtue of my friend's summer retreat. This was attached to a light but stout framework made to fit the back of the sturgeon. Obviously, the big fish, being so well found by the hotel proprietor, was not averse to taking a few turns up and down the river, the sign showing up in great shape above the edge of the water, no portion of its propelling power being visible.

"First along the sign read: 'Mummer's Summer Retreat—Fine Cuisine, Boating, and Bathing.' But my grasping friend was not satisfied with this.

"One day in early summer I chanced to drop into the workshop of the hotel and found a painter fixing up a new sign reading as follows: 'Mummer's Summer Retreat—Fine Cuisine, Boating, Bathing and Fishing.'

"Immediately, if not sooner than this sign was moored on to the big fish, startling results followed. His nibs commenced to sulk on the job. Instead of taking the beaten path up and down the shore, in plain view of the passing trains, the sturgeon sulked over to one side, found a secluded spot among the bushes and stayed there until dark. This went on for several days.

"Again I chanced to stop at the hotel and my friend spoke to me about the strange sulkiness of his sturgeon publicity bureau. 'I can tell you what's the matter,' I said, right off the reel. 'It's that amended sign calling attention to the fishing. Naturally a fish as intelligent as your sturgeon has shown himself to be is not going to be around any signs which invite the destruction of his brother fish. I admire him all the more for his sturdiness and fealty to his brethren. He sees his duty and is not found wanting.'

"The hotelkeeper saw the light which I set before him and the next day the old sign was hooked on to the sturgeon and he was back on the advertising job with all his old time strenuosity, continuing untiringly all summer.

"Now, if I didn't know about this incident personally and vouch for it myself, I wouldn't blame you for doubting the remarkable intelligence of a fish that could distinguish the difference between a sign that meant harm to members of his tribe and one that did not advertise the fishing. But it's jest as true as I stand here."

At this juncture the speaker walked away.

Makes Daring Rescue.

New York.—Owen Gallagher, a boiler-maker of Bayonne, N. J., was rescued in the Hudson river by Sergeant Henry W. Miller of the United States marine corps after Gallagher had jumped from the rear deck of a Pennsylvania ferry-boat, 100 yards off the Cortland street slip.

An Airship in Africa.

Paris.—Mr. Latham, the aviator, has been commissioned by the minister for the colonies to visit the Congo region. He has embarked at Bordeaux, taking with him a monoplane, which will doubtless be the first aerial machine to fly over Equatorial Africa.

RANK OF OFFICERS' WIVES

It Was Observed When the Women Journeyed to the Fleet—Were Divided Into Sets.

San Francisco.—Rank was observed among the wives of the officers of the Pacific fleet on their recent journey aboard the Wilhelmina to Honolulu to join their husbands, according to the officers of the Matson liner. The better halves of some had their own little whist parties, while the spouses of officers of lower grade were just as exclusive at their afternoon teas.

The party of navy women was headed by the wife of Rear Admiral Chauncey M. Thomas, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, who showed her graciousness in a little incident observed by the other travelers on board the Wilhelmina.

Among the passengers was a slip of a girl, the bride of a water tender of one of the big war ships. She hailed from the middle west and it was her first experience at sea. She looked upon the big world with open-eyed awe and joyful anticipation of a country girl on her first trip from the old farm "down home."

Therefore she knew nothing of the formalities observed in circles where gold braid prevails. Learning that Mrs. Thomas, like herself, had a husband on board one of the vessels in the far-away waters, she rushed up to the spouse of the rear admiral and gushed happily:

"I'm awfully glad to meet you. My husband is an officer on the boats, too."

"Yes, he's a water tender," she continued proudly. "And what is your husband?"

"He is the commander of the fleet," Mrs. Thomas smiled kindly.

"Oh, that is very nice. I hope they're friends," said the water tender's wife.

Mrs. Thomas and the bride were friends on the voyage to the islands, say the Wilhelmina's officers.

Dog Saves Man in Drift.

Allentown, Pa.—Allentown has a police dog, a fox terrier owned by Patrolman David, that saved the life of a man who, but for the dog, would have been frozen to death one morning recently. About midnight the officer was induced by the actions of the dog to investigate what appeared to be a snowdrift. He was surprised to find a man, who upon being taken to the police station, proved to be Owen Smith, a railroader, who had been overcome on his way home and found a bed in the snow.

Cultivation of a "Hobby"

Point Wherein, in the Opinion of College Man, Englishmen Have Advantage Over Americans.

The word is fast losing in this country the absurd significance which a people given to getting on in life have attached to it. Our English friends have made "hobbies" a fetich for generations, so that a well bred Englishman who doesn't return from his office to some special week-end interest of his own which is quite foreign to his daily occupation is as much of an anomaly in his country as an American is in this country if he does. The conception of such a collateral intellectual existence goes back, of course, to the basic difference between our own and the English view of the personal life, and, in large measure, where it affects the university classes, to the public sentiment of the university community. Americans have been intellectual paupers in this respect, and we hazard the statement that, so far as the American college-bred man has suffered from the condition, his college life public sentiment has been in large part responsible for it. Few and far between have been the college educated men in this country who have hit upon "hobbies" for themselves when undergraduates, and carried out their special interest to some purpose in after life. It has been a notion of ours for a long time that a college curriculum ought to foster the cultivation of "hobbies" by some method that would let the student find for himself what apparently useless thing he was most interested in outside of his daily work, and not permit him to graduate until he knew more about that particular useless thing than any one else in his generation. The cultivation of a "hobby" out to be recognized by the universities as a legitimate, if not a vital, educational method. When that time comes the result to the universities themselves will be of some importance. There will return upon the universities, for permanent enrichment, the results, in many cases, of the life accumulations of men who have gone out of college with a special intellectual interest. Yale is today being reminded from time to time of the important possibilities of this attitude. Her recent two extraordinary gifts of rare books, for instance, are in point.—Yale Alumni Weekly.

Lacking in Sympathy

No foreigner can help admiring the completeness and thoroughness of German institutions for the care of the sick and the poor, and if completeness and thoroughness could make people well and happy German patients and the German poor would have nothing to complain of. But something else is needed, and that is sympathy. The German doctor approaches his patient as though he were about to solve a proposition in Euclid. Science, skill, precautionary care, are all in evidence, but in a large majority of cases the warmth, the feeling of lively human interest in the patient and his feelings are wanting. In the case of children such warmth and sympathy are particularly necessary, and the poor German parent knows that he cannot expect it from a public institution.

Curious Relic.

Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin has presented to the Smithsonian institution a curious relic of the early days of exploration and discovery in the region of the Great Lakes. It is a steel ax of quaint shape, entirely unlike any in use at present.

The finding of this old ax was more peculiar than the implement itself. While a lumberman was cutting a huge log into planks several teeth were suddenly ripped from the circular saw by some foreign substance. On investigation the ancient ax, still bright and keen-edged, was found firmly imbedded in the log five inches beneath the bark.

It is easy to imagine that the ax was struck into a sapling by some early French voyageur and forgotten, and that the young tree grew around it, hiding it from sight. The ax, with a cross section of the embracing log, now finds a resting place in the Smithsonian.

Deceit.

She turned away and shivered.

"Deceit," he repeated in consternation; "where is the deceit, prithee?"

"Right in your face," she answered. "I see it."

In horror he shrank from her.

"Curse him," he hissed. "Curse the man who guaranteed that no one could tell the glass eye he sold me from the genuine"

With livid lips and haggard cheeks he staggered from the place.

When They Wore Pigtails in England

The edict sanctioning the abolition of the pigtail reminds us that it is not so very long since the pigtail disappeared not merely from the army and navy but even from everyday civilized life in England. Waistlong pigtails were the fashionable wear in England about 1740 and before that the bag wig had been adorned with a pigtail looped up in a black silk bag. As late as 1858 an old gentleman was seen on Cheapside with his gray hair tied behind in a short queue, and even today we can find a relic of the pigtail, for the three pieces of black velvet on the dress tunics of officers in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers are remains of the ribbon with which the queue was tied.—London Chronicle.

Not Enough Head.

Two Philadelphians were discussing a young man of their acquaintance, whose father had been a distinguished member of the bar, and a useful member of society.

"For my part," said one, "I think Henry is a very bright and capable fellow, and I am confident he will succeed."

"Yes," replied the other, "he is undoubtedly a worthy young man, but I don't think he has head enough to fill his father's shoes."

MINER'S 30-YEAR REWARD

Congressman Lewis of Maryland, Whom He Befriended as a Boy, Opens New Vista.

Scranton, Pa.—Edward Donnelly, track layer in the Taylor mine, who lives in Minooka, is firmly convinced that it pays to befriend homeless boys, for his kind actions toward a friendless orphan thirty years ago have borne fruit, and the chances are that he will in a few days retire from the mines forever.

Thirty years ago there appeared in Minooka a young Welsh boy by the name of Lewis. He secured employment in the Carr's Patch mine, but, being the only Welsh boy in the community, his life was made miserable by his companions until Edward Donnelly came to his rescue. Donnelly constituted himself the champion of the youth and frequently fought his battles.

Lewis drifted away from this section of the country, and that was the last heard from him until last week, when Congressman D. J. Lewis of Maryland reached the city to attend the meeting of the State Grange. After addressing the grangers Congressmen Lewis hurried out to Minooka and hunted up Donnelly. The meeting was fraught with reminiscences of the past, for Lewis the orphan boy and Lewis the congressman proved to be one and the same.

Before leaving Congressman Lewis informed his erstwhile champion that he should prepare to give up the mines, as he meant to find a more remunerative as well as a pleasanter berth for him in the government service.

WOMAN PRAYS; SHIP SAVED

Brig Stripped of Canvas Blown Through Florida Keys to Safety in Bahamas.

New York.—While a hurricane whistled through the sails of the little brig Motley in the Gulf of Mexico till the last shred of canvas was stripped from her and she drove onward seemingly to destruction, Mrs. Addie Edwards, the young wife of the master of the vessel, went among the members of the crew to cheer them up.

"I prayed every day," said she, as she stepped from the liner Allemania. "I did not believe we would go down. My little son and I have sailed for six years on the Motley and we had weathered all kinds of storms. I had faith, even if the sailors had little, and we came through all right."

Mrs. Edwards, whose home is Elmhurst, L. I., was on her way to visit with relatives in Brooklyn.

"My little boy was born on the water," she continued. "He has been on the Motley more than he has been on dry land, and I have sailed into many ports on the Atlantic ocean, even to Africa. When the storm came the child was calm, possibly calmer than he would have been at our home in Elmhurst with such a wind blowing.

"We had loaded with lumber at Mobile and were bound for Mayaguez in Porto Rico. Within a short time afterward the wind rose to a hurricane. The sailors—there were two mates and six seamen, besides my husband, my boy and myself—did not like it. The gale increased, and pieces of canvas began to rip off till it was apparent that our sails would go if the wind continued.

"By the time we reached the Florida keys we were moving along under bare poles. Then it was dangerous, for there was no telling when we might be driven on one of the distant keys and wrecked. Luckily we escaped that fate and luckily, too, the wind blew us almost in the direction we wanted to go.

"It was almost 21 days and nights that I was without sufficient sleep and I was worn out. When hope had almost gone the gale blew us into Middle Innaguez in the Bahamas. We were a sorry looking crowd, when we arrived, and I was glad the voyage was over so far as I was concerned."

More Chance for Heroes.

Washington.—All large cities and railroad systems in the United States will unite to form an organization to confer medals for bravery, if a plan proposed by the American Cross of Honor is carried out. President Herndon of the society says support for the movement already has been promised by some of the largest cities and by heads of several of the most important railway systetms. The idea is to have hero medals awarded at annual conventions held in this city.

PANAMA CANAL NEAR COMPLETION

BREAKING every great engineering record of the world's history and surpassing its own most sanguine expectations, the canal digging army at Panama, which has marched from one victory to another under the leadership of Col. George W. Goethals, is now preparing for the final assault on the heights of proud Culebra mountain.

Against what odds this canal army has fought, few, even of its admirers, fully appreciate. When the plans for its construction were prepared, it was estimated that nine years would be required to remove the 103,000,000 cubic yards of material it was then proposed to excavate. Since that time one difficulty and another has arisen and has forced up, notch by notch, the total amount of material to be removed, until today it is estimated that the entire task will represent the excavation of 195,000,000 cubic yards. Slides in Culebra cut have been responsible for a part of this increase, while the widening of that part of the big ditch by one-half has added much more. Then the ocean currents in the Pacific and the work of the Chagres river on the Atlantic side have deposited large quantities of silt in the line of the canal and all of this must be removed, writes Frederick J. Haskin in the Indianapolis News.

Yet in spite of this tremendous increase in the amount of material to be removed, the last shovelful will come out in a little more than six years after the work began in earnest. Thus it will be seen that while the amount of work to be done has increased by more than seven-eighths, the time in which it was estimated it could be done has been cut down by approximately one-third. Furthermore, so magnificently has the canal army responded to the demands of its leader for efficiency that the vast amount of additional work is being done with money saved by economical operations on the work originally planned. When one stops to consider that all of this additional work is being done on savings effected elsewhere, and that it has not added one penny to the original estimates of cost, the marvelous results of the efficiency campaign on the isthmus become apparent.

Culebra cut always has been the backbone of the canal problem. Once it was thought Gatun dam would be the most knotty feature of the work, but this great dam has proved so much less of a problem than was anticipated that the canal officials long ago ceased to worry about it. They felt, four years ago, when they were beginning to plan the foundations of this great structure, that there would be many difficulties to overcome, and yet they were prepared to meet them. The actual work has not been nearly so difficult of accomplishment as they had expected, very much to the discomfiture of those people who insisted that the dam could never be built.

On the other hand, Coulebra cut has proved to be a much greater task than was anticipated. When President Roosevelt ordered that its bottom width should be increased from 200 to 300 feet, he added a considerable element to the difficulties of the problem. The great masses of material that have been sliding into the canal from the adjacent banks, one slide alone having a surface area of 47 acres, have added immensely to the seriousness of the problem at Culebra, and yet, one by one, these difficulties and obstacles have been overcome, so that there now remains to be removed less than 16,000,000 cubic yards out of a total of more than 88,000,000. So rapidly has the work progressed that it is expected that within four months the big cut practically will be completed, except the three miles through the heart of Culebra mountain. There will remain on that date, in that three-mile stretch, 11,000,000 cubic yards of material. It is expected that 30 steam shovels can be operated advantageously in this contracted area, as against 42 now in operation. Assuming that the 30 can do as well in proportion as the 42 now are doing, the last shovelful of dirt will come out in less than 18 months from the present date.

The canal authorities always are prepared for any emergency that may arise. They take nothing for granted, and accept no risks. Every step must be proved as well as human instrumentalities may prove it before it is taken. They prepare for every imaginable contingency. Recently they had a government geologist from Washington make an on-the-ground study of the geological formations of the Culebra region, and they are assured from these investigations that they have made all necessary allowances for further possible slides. Yet they are preparing to meet any new ones which may develop. Should there be any additional slides after June 1, 1913, the canal authorities will meet them by moving the great dredges of the Pacific division into the cut and dredging out the incoming material at the rate of millions of yards a month. By that time the locks and dams of the canal will have been completed and the water can be turned into Culebra cut. But this is a contingency that is practically certain not to arise.

Taking a journey through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific, one may see everywhere evidences of the rapidity with which the canal is being completed. The seven-mile sea level section between deep water and the Gatun locks is already opened to navigation. It can now be used by craft of moderate draft, and will be completed to its full width of 500 feet and its full depth of 41 feet before Thanksgiving day next year. At Gatun one finds additional evidence of remarkable progress. The locks at that place are now within a year of completion except for the installation of the gates and other lock machinery. By the first of April the Gatun dam will be ready to hold 55 out of the final 25 feet of water in Gatun lake. That part of the dam between the locks and the spillway is already practically completed, and the other section is being pushed to completion rapidly. The whole structure will be completed nearly two years before the official opening day of the canal.

After passing through Gatun locks, one finds the finishing touches being applied to the next 26 miles of channel. The completion of the relocation of the Panama railroad along the high ground to the east of the canal has taken the road out of the Chagres valley. This permits that entire portion of the old Panama railroad to be done away with, and by May 1 the 26 miles of the canal between Gatun and Las Cascades will be entirely completed.

Cold Storage Lady Bugs.

Lady bugs of Nevada origin are imported into California to destroy many of the insect pests of vines and orchards. They are found in moss under the snow; but at that season they cannot be pressed into service, because the worms on which they feed have not yet appeared, while the lady bugs are still hibernating.

Accordingly the little Nevadans are placed in refrigerating wagons and thus conveyed to California, to remain in cold storage until their services on vines and trees are required. During all this time they take no food. With spring come the destroying worms, and then the lady bug is taken from her prison and dispersed where she appears most likely to do her work well. As she is ravenously hungry, the work is begun and continued until the worms are destroyed. —Harper's Weekly.

Attaining Correct Carriage.

To attain correct carriage one must walk erect and to achieve this end there is nothing better than trying to walk with a book or similar article, such as a box of writing paper or several music books. This is sure to keep one from developing the swaying of the body more to the one side than the other. Stays that force the opposite of this rule should be discarded and destroyed, for they are not fit for the individual to wear, for if they work against erectness of carriage they are really a menace to the health. Throw out your chest; better to have commenters say that you are so straight that you appear to be falling over backwards than to be round-shouldered and moreover phthisical in appearance in looks, if not in fact.

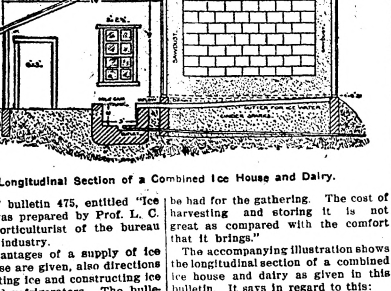
Truths Undisguised.

When a 30-year-old bachelor begins suddenly to receive bunches of violets from the pink haired maiden lady of uncertain age across the way, he will do well to take out a policy in the first company that comes along insuring people against matrimonial accidents.

No really wise young man will go anywhere with a maiden seven years his senior these days without taking care to have a chaperon along, a married uncle, perhaps, or some other suitable male creature — to protect him from sudden questions.

ECONOMIC IMPORTANCE OF SUFFICIENT SUPPLY OF ICE

City People Can Purchase Perishable Goods as Needed, but Remoteness of Country Homes from Market Renders It Necessary to Use Canned or Smoked Meats.



Longitudinal Section of a Combined Ice House and Dairy.

Farmers' bulletin 475, entitled "Ice Houses" was prepared by Prof. L. C. Corbett, horticulturist of the bureau of animal industry.

The advantages of a supply of ice for farm use are given, also directions for harvesting ice and constructing ice houses and refrigerators. The bulletin does not treat with the ice crop as a source of direct revenue, but with ice as a factor in the economies and comforts of the country home. In introducing this bulletin, the author says in part as follows:

"An ample supply of ice is of greater economic importance in the country home than in the city residence. City people can purchase perishable supplies as needed, but the remoteness of country homes from markets often renders it necessary to use canned, corned or smoked meat products during the season of the year when the table should be supplied with fresh meats. Not only is ice appreciated because of its use in the preservation of fresh meats, butter and other table supplies, but the production of high grade domestic dairy products is almost impossible without it. Many markets to which milk is now shipped demand that it be cooled before shipment to a degree not attainable without the use of ice.

"Ice is one of those luxuries, which, in many sections of the country, can be had for the gathering. The cost of harvesting and storing it is not great as compared with the comfort that it brings."

The accompanying illustration shows the longitudinal section of a combined ice house and dairy as given in this bulletin. It says in regard to this:

"Even where for convenience and economy it is desirable to have the dairy under the same roof as the ice house, it is not satisfactory to attempt to combine the ice storage with a cold store. When it is necessary to use ice for chilling milk or other dairy products it is better to remove the ice house or compartment and place it in a specially constructed ice box or refrigerator, rather than to attempt to maintain a cold room by storing the ice about and in contact with it. The chief argument against the combined arrangement is that it prevents the storage of ice in a solid mass. As a result, the waste is much greater. Again, the requirements of the storage room and the refrigerator vary from time to time. Advantage can be taken of these fluctuations to husband the ice supply when the two are separate. There are decided advantages in having the ice supply convenient to the dairy house or refrigerator, but it is poor economy to build the refrigerator or cold store inside the ice storage."

WHY IS FARM HELP SCARCE?

Conditions Surrounding Country Laborer Almost Reverse of Those Employed in the City.

(By S. C. MILLER.)

Regularity and system of employment in the city are such, that the employe knows exactly what is required of him: that he begins to work at a certain hour and stops at a regular hour. If he labor before or after his regular working hours he is allowed overtime, usually at double wages, by the hour.

Furthermore, as the workman in the city grows more proficient in his line of labor, promotion almost invariably pushes him up a notch higher, in both position and salary.

Again, certainty of employment the year around holds many a man in the city.

The conditions surrounding the country laborer are almost entirely the reverse of those just mentioned in the city. While most farmers have regular hours for beginning work and another for stopping, there are so many interruptions and unlooked for contingencies arising in crop or weather conditions, that the hired man frequently works two or three hours overtime and this grows to be such a common occurrence that all he gets for his extra labor is perhaps a half-hour's longer rest at noon, which is really for the sake of the teams, a formal word of thanks, or—nothing!

As for winning promotion, the farm hand rarely ever expects it. Sometimes he demands better wages, but as for promotion, in its real sense, it is little thought of, either by the farmer or the hired man, and right here a double loss is sustained—one for the employer and one for the employe, since the hand has no incentive to spur him on to greater effort and consequently, is not as efficient in his work as he otherwise would be. He thereby does not increase his earnings nor do the best that is in him, which would raise the profits of his employer.

Closely linked with the above drawback is that of employing a hand for only a portion of the year—many times for only two or three months. By such method he scarcely becomes accustomed to his position before he leaves, which is a decided detriment to all concerned.

The farmer cannot possibly obtain the amount of efficient help that he could if the hand were retained long enough to get settled "in the harness," so to speak; while the hand is placed at a disadvantage by having to adjust himself to the environments peculiar to every place at which he begins to work. Then, too, he loses considerable time in going from one place to another, searching for work.

We are thoroughly convinced that the farmer must adopt, to a certain extent, the methods of the city employer. If the hired man works overtime, he is earning his employer money and should receive extra pay for his labor. If, for any reason, he loses time, he returns his employer nothing for that time and consequently should have an hour's wages deducted from his pay. This standard would insure absolute fairness to both.

Then, let the farmer retain the same hand the year around, even though there be a small part of the time that he could be dispensed with. The work of the busiest season will be handled all the easier when it does come on. And as the seasons pass the really wise farmer will see ample cause for promoting the competent hand and raising his salary accordingly.

CEMENT WALKS ARE SLIPPERY

Accidents May be Prevented by Sticking Prepared Roofing on Treads of Steps and on Surface.

Cement walks and steps are of excellent value upon all residences and buildings, but when wet they are positive to be dangerous to the unwary, as they are very slippery. This is very easily remedied by taking pieces of the prepared felt roofing and sticking it to the treads of steps, and also to the surface of walk, with the cement or paint used to join the laps of this roofing together, says the Homestead. It will adhere very strongly and even under heavy wear will last for several years, preventing many ugly falls upon the steps and also giving a sure foothold upon tread of step even when coated with sleet.

Spring Bonnets

WHILE Indian summer days are beguiling us toward winter, the thrifty manufacturers must begin to get ready for far off spring. Since the demand comes with a great rush about Easter, thousands of hats must be in readiness for it, therefore, directly after the holidays things get very busy in the world of millinery. Those designs which have found favor with the wholesaler are placed in work rooms to be copied and to help inspire new designs.

Children's millinery is not so subject to the caprices of fashion as that for grown women. Soft and pretty bonnet shapes are always worn, therefore the manufacturer takes fewer risks in beginning to make them early. It is by little novel touches, rather than by departures from types with which we are familiar, that the first hats depend upon, to make them salable.

Two little bonnets are shown here which cannot fail to please. One is made of a soft plaque of hair braid in light pink. A fine wire frame supports it and it is lined about the brim with Val. lace. The edge is finished with side-plaited ruffles of lace. A collar of pink ribbon and a fascinating little bunch of rose buds make up the simple but effective trimming.

A bonnet of light blue satin straw is faced with shirred chiffon. It is trimmed with a wide, soft messaline ribbon placed in a ruffle about the crown and a bunch of light blue forget-me-not ties of ribbon finish it.

JEALOUSY TO BE OVERCOME

Unpleasant Temperament That Is Certain in the End to Destroy Friendship and Love.

Jealousy spoils pleasures and destroys friendships, therefore it is most necessary to overcome a jealous temperament. One frequently hears how to overcome sensitiveness, but how to fight against jealousy is seldom told us.

It can manifest itself in numerous ugly ways and it is not an easy thing to fight. Who has not felt its painful prodding? But one must remember that neither friendship nor love can stand jealousy's eternal friction, so the sooner one eliminates it from one's character the more certain one is of keeping both love and friendship.

Take what is yours and do not worry over what is given some one else. If there is to be any comfort in social life or in the life of those who must work, every twinge of jealousy must be crushed out. The personal element must be done away with at all times and we must all learn to make ourselves as efficient as possible in our various walks in life. To live for and think of others is always a help; and added to this we must forget ourselves except in our efforts to improve our minds and our lives.

UTILIZING ODD BITS OF LACE

Beautiful Table Cover May Be Evolved From Scraps That Otherwise Would Be Thrown Away.

A lovely, if somewhat costly, table cover recently seen in one of the shops suggested one of the numerous ingenious ways now in vogue of employing satisfactorily any scrap of lace or needlework one happens to have in the house.

This table cover or tea cloth, about sixty inches square, in ecru linen, was cut out round the edges into four blunt corners, livided by four vandykes. Between each peak was inserted, point upward, a three-cornered specimen of filet lace, while larger ones, peak downward, were sewn along the base of the blunt corners.

A lace insertion framed the center, filled at the corners with a motif of broderie anglaise, crossed with bars and connected with powderings of the open work. Each of the four sides of the frame was tipped with a diamond medallion in filet lace, and round the outside edges of the linen square was a white linen fringe with spaced tassels.

Spanish Lace Revived.

With the return to favor of the many old-time materials, such as broche velvets and golden woven tissues, there is the return to favor of Spanish lace. Many afternoon and evening toilettes, now being designed for the Casino on the Cote d'Azur, are showing graceful trimmings of heavily designed silk Spanish lace.

Many Dalmatiques and clerical stoles are composed of the most beautiful lace. These long stoles fall in straight panel fashion down the front and back of the most gracefully draped robes.

Colored Handkerchief.

The latest method of introducing a bright note of color is to be found in the handkerchief of the moment. A little square of lawn, with a border in some bright tint, is tucked into the fastening of the tailormade. Great care is necessary, however, to strike the correct note. The little accessary must match some part of the toilette. If the hat is trimmed with one of the new shaded dahlias in fuchsia tints, the handkerchief will be ornamented with French knots in the two shades. The shades of a green plume would be repeated tone for tone.

MAKES PRETTY TABLE COVER

Monk's Cloth Appliqued With Linen Figures Is One of the Best Forms Yet Devised.

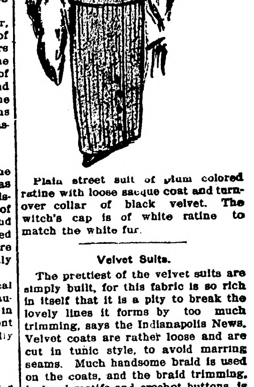
The woman who is interested in needlework as employment for the long winter evenings will enjoy making a table cover or scarf of monk's cloth appliqued with linen figures.

Cut the cloth the size you desire of a very dark green shade and baste in a two-inch hem all around for a square cover—and at each end on a scarf—then cut out fancy figures from natural colored linen, using either flowers simple in design, leaves like the clover and oak, hearts, circles or small triangles.

Baste these on the cloth just above the hem and sew them fast by buttonholing around with rope floss in a burnt-orange shade. One clever girl made a table scarf, cushion cover and window curtain to correspond for her room at college of monk's cloth appliqued with figures representing books, dumbbells, Indian clubs and various things associated with college life.

One advantage of the work is that it is quickly done and when finished is very attractive.

NEAT STREET SUIT



Plain street suit of plum colored ratine with loose sacque coat and turnover collar of black velvet. The witch's cap is of white ratine to match the white fur.

Velvet Suits.

The prettiest of the velvet suits are simply built, for this fabric is so rich in itself that it is a pity to break the lovely lines it forms by too much trimming, says the Indianapolis News. Velvet coats are rather loose and are cut in tunic style, to avoid marring seams. Much handsome braid is used on the coats, and the braid trimming, in band motifs and crochet buttons, is repeated on the skirts.

Fairy Jewelry.

The gems look airy.

They seem to have no support.

They are lacy and supple in effect.

Jewels need not be wholly expensive.

Some semi-precious ones are lovely set this way.

It's the thin dainty silver or platinum setting which does the work.

The foregoing has this 12th day of July, 1909, been subscribed and sworn to before me a Notary Public in and for Montcalm County, Michigan.

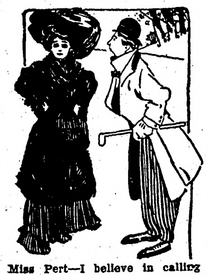
FRED A. GLEASON,
Notary Public.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co. Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention this paper. Regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

ACCORDING TO HOYLE.



Miss Pert—I believe in calling a spade a spade.

Chappeigh—Sure. It would be widiculous, you know, to call it a heart, a club or a diamond.

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

Women are beginning to realize more fully that good health is not to be found in the use of cosmetics and face powders. The appearance of health may follow facial treatment, but health itself lies much deeper than the surface.

Most important to the health of every woman is regularity of the bowels and digestive organs. The weary eyes, bad breath, frequent headaches, pimples and general air of lassitude, is in most every case due to constipation or indigestion, or both. There are various remedies prescribed for this condition, but the easiest, most pleasant and certainly effective, is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This simple remedy is far preferable to harsh salts and cathartics and violent purgative waters that disturb the whole system without affording more than temporary relief.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a tonic laxative, mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in its effect, strengthening the muscles of stomach and bowels so that after a short time these organs regain the power to perform their natural functions without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it, write for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.; he will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals.

"You can bet I shut off and skinned out of there in a jiffy; I'd been in a told sweat all the while. The racket my sending raised had sounded as loud as the Trump of Doom; I couldn't to save my neck understand how Black failed to hear it, even if he were at the other end of the island, and come back and exterminate me. So I beat it on the dead jump.

"The farm-house was in my way, however, and I pulled up there to reconnoitre. There was a sound of voices out front, and I went in the back way—the premises being empty—and snooped to the front windows and eavesdropped. To that instant I'd had never a thought that you might be mixed up in the mess; but I recognized your voice, and overheard just enough to open my eyes to the complexity of the situation.

"I didn't linger long enough to hear much; my position being somewhat delicate—from more than one point of view. So I sneaked out by the rear again, and laid for you on the path to the beach. Then that shower came up and I lost touch with the path. By the time I'd re-found it and traced my way back to the farm-house, you were gone. I set sail in pursuit, but by the time I sighted the deserted village, you were invisible, and Blackstock (by this time I knew his right name) was superintending the planting of Power. Seeing nothing of you I concluded—and hoped—you'd sloped for the boat, and dodged round after you. Those shots stopped me right by the boat on the beach; I saw you coming and . . .

"I've talked myself hoarse—for once in my life. Never dreamed I'd have such a taste of Heaven . . . !"

Coast was about to speak when Appleyard stopped him with a lifted hand. "Look," he said, with a wide gesture, "and if you're superstitious at all—that is to say, human—hug comfort to your heart. For my part I'm going to take this for an omen. You may please yourself."

Overborne by the freshing easterly wind, which blew down the Sound as through a funnel, the fog was rolling back like a scroll. The little man laughed gently. "Haven't we won out to light and freedom, while back there"—he indicated the looming headland astern that shut off No Man's Land from their vision—"still they walk in darkness, bound upon the wheel of their own naughtiness?"

"Wel-l," conceded Coast a little dubiously. "But on the other hand . . . here's this wind brewing. Doesn't it smell like an easter to you?"

Appleyard sniffed contemptuously. "It do, it sure do," he admitted. "We'll have a bit of a blow by night-fall, certainly."

"And that means trouble, doesn't it?"

"Why?"

"Because I, for one, am going back to No Man's Land tonight. And the more wind, the tougher the job of working back . . ."

Appleyard grimaced his disgust. "Who's afraid?" he demanded, truculent. "A pessimist," he misquoted with a large if inconclusive air of philosophical contemplation, "is a fellow who has to live with optimists. Not only that, but you make me tired."

CHAPTER XII.

Within another hour (and the morning was still young) the Echo rode at anchor in Quick's Hole, on the edge of the navigable channel, near the Nashawena shore, about midway of the passage between Vineyard Sound and Buzzard's Bay; and within ten minutes of the time her anchor splashed over her bows, Mr. Appleyard, his plans formulated and communicated to Mr. Coast, was noisily asleep in the cabin—enjoying a rest which Coast, for all his own weariness of body and mind, could not begrudge him.

For six hours the younger man stood a lonely watch, companioned only by the melancholy voice of the bell buoy off the southern entrance, a sound, the most forlorn and dreary known to man, which came fitfully to his earns in the occasional lulling of the wind.

As six bells sounded Appleyard hopped on deck, yawning and rubbing his eyes, but with a light in the latter, as soon as he permitted them to be seen, and a springiness in his movements which testified to the refreshing soundness of his slumbers.

"Howdy?" he chirruped. "Nothing alarming turned up, eh?"

"Not a thing," said Coast.

"Good enough. Don't look for 'em till evening. When'd this lull set in?" Coast informed him. "That's all right; fit in with their plans; they'd rather make a landing in the dark, anyway."

"What difference would that make—?"

"Not much; only the fewer boats touching at No Man's Land, the less attention attracted. I s'pose you know there's a life saving station on Gay Head? Sure; and part of its job is to keep a list of everything that passes by, from a rowboat to a coastwise liner."

"Of course: but—look here, Appleyard." Coast paused, doubt tinting his tone.

"Sir, to you?"

"There's one thing been troubling me. It seems to me we're taking a lot for granted. Of course, to begin with, I was only too keen to believe the worst of Blackstock. But, seriously, what warrant have you for believing he's mixed up with this smuggling game?"

Appleyard rubbed his nose reflectively. "Wel-l," he drawled, grinning, "I haven't got any sure-'nough good excuse, I admit. I just know it's so. That's all."

"But—"

"What's Blackstock sticking out there for? Not because he likes it, you can bet; not solely because he's afraid of getting caught—for he settled on No Man's Land before Dundas come through with his confession; not because he would be safer in some corner of the world across the water—"

"I told you his wife said—"

"She said precisely what he told her. Naturally. Probably believes it. Rot!! . . . The real reason is the reason why he dropped his remittances to Dundas; because he's broke, and down, and desperate—ready to turn his hand to anything to earn a dishonest dollar. And this job's ideal for his purposes," Appleyard wound up triumphantly.

"But," Coast argued, "she has money."

"How do you know?"

"At least, her aunt had, and it was to go to her."

"But did it? I'll lay you a handsome wager that either she never got it or it wasn't much anyway and Blackstock managed to run through it with the customary facility of scoundrels of his class. . . . Don't talk to me: I tell you, I know a lot of things for certain that I don't know for sure; and this is one of 'em. . . . And now if you'll just kindly quit finding fault with my unimpeachable management of this affair, and duck below and pound your ear for a couple of hours, or until I call you, you'll be in much better shape for what's before you this night."

Coast, soothed by the swash of waves and the softly modulated tolling of the distant buoy, presently dozed off; nor did he wake until Appleyard shook his shoulder several hours later.

He started up in some perturbation—with that singular flutter of the heart that men sometimes waken to face a crucial hour.

"Well—?" he asked, half dazed.

"Time," returned Appleyard coolly. "They're just about to stand in round Lone Rock. Come on deck."

His small head and narrow shoulders were momentarily silhouetted against a violet-shaded square of sky that filled the companion opening, then disappeared. Coast, realizing from the twilight within and without that the hour was late, followed with expedition.

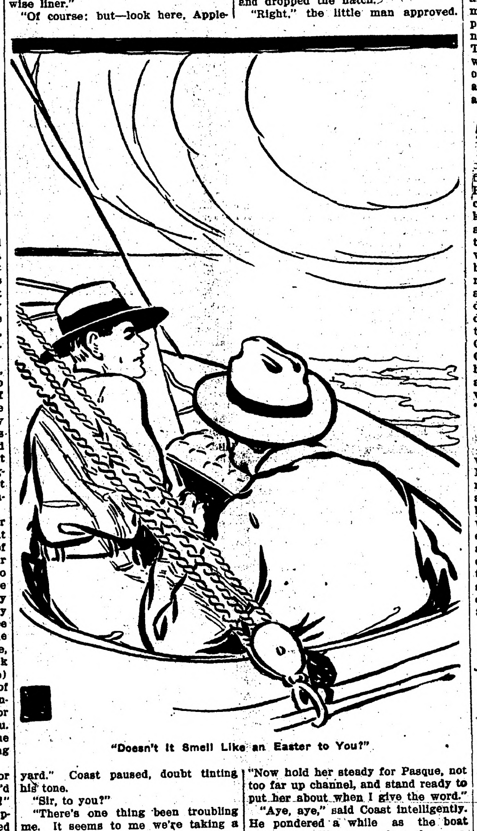
"What's o'clock?" he asked as he stepped on deck.

"About seven. Take the wheel."

Appleyard dropped lightly into the engine-pit as Coast obediently moved to the stern and grasped the spokes. His first glance was comprehensive, summing up the situation in a single cast; he was now fully awake and very alert.

With a muffled cough the motor began to throb and drum. The Echo gathered way. Coast swung her gently to starboard as Appleyard, throttling the speed to half, climbed out and dropped the hatch.

"Right," the little man approved.



"Doesn't It Smell Like an Easter to You?"

"Now hold her steady for Pasque, not too far up channel, and stand ready to put her about when I give the word."

"Aye, aye," said Coast intelligently. He pondered a while as the boat forged sturdily up against the seas. "Suppose," he said abruptly, "this isn't the right boat?"

Appleyard grunted unpleasantly. "It's got to be," he affirmed with conviction. "What else could it be? . . . You'd make a shine gambler, if you want to know," he added, bustling about busily.

Coast subsided, although he continued to eye the oncoming boat with unmitigated mistrust.

Appleyard, having cast off all but one of the stops securing the gaff to the boom, first lighted and set out the starboard lamp, which was of course invisible to the approaching boat, then lighted and placed the other beneath the seat.

"I got an eye-full of her with the glasses as she came across the bay," he said, pausing beside Coast and balancing himself lightly against the motion of the boat. "She's a stepper all right; a cabin cruiser about thirty-four over all with a good, stiff engine in her—twenty-five H.P., I'd guess. She moves when she moves!"

"That argues a crew of two?" Coast surmised.

"Just about—aside from our friend the passenger, Mr. Handyside—who's in such a sweat to get on his job that he has to risk the passage in the teeth of an easter," said the little man. "You can bet your boots no one else would run the chance—nor he, unless it was on urgent business. . . . Now go about and stand across again, a bit further up the channel," he advised as the Echo drew under the shadow of Pasque. "So-o: that's it."

JUST A LITTLE TOO HASTY

Mr. Newlywed Resented What He Considered Impertinence, but the Joke Was on Him.

They were on their wedding tour, and imagined that every civility given them related to their new condition of servitude.

Having stopped at a way station, the bridegroom was approached by the station agent, who asked:

"Are you going to take the next train?"

"It's none of your business," retorted the bridegroom, indignantly, as he guided the bride up the platform, where they condoled with each other over the impertinence of some of the natives.

Onward came the train, its vapor curling from afar. It was the last to their destination that day—an express. Nearer and nearer it came at full speed; then in a moment it whizzed past and was gone.

"Why in thunder didn't that train stop!" yelled the bridegroom.

"Cos you said 'twarn't none of my bizness. I has to signal if that train's to stop."

PIMPLES COVERED HIS BACK

"My troubles began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood.

"I tried various remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Corbin, Kan., May 26, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

How Mrs. Bethune was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I had cramps, backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband's told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do all my own housework, work in the garden and entertain company and enjoy them, and can walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the week. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl, and tell them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

AFTER THE GRIP PURIFY THE BLOOD

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are the Best Blood Builder and Will Cure You as They Cured This Woman.

It is of the utmost importance to your health, if you have suffered from the grip, that you cleanse the blood of the lingering germs and put it in condition to resist disease.

After the acute attack the sufferer is left with a debilitated system, is short of breath upon the slightest exertion and is affected by every change of weather. The system is in such a weakened condition that it is powerless to resist the attack of such diseases as pneumonia and bronchitis.

This is a condition which emphatically calls for a tonic for the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for this purpose for they act directly on the blood which they cleanse of all impurities. They tone up the nerves and give health and strength to the debilitated system.

The debility which follows an attack of the grip can only be cured by making the blood rich and red. This Dr. Williams' Pink Pills never fail to do promptly and it explains how they cured Mrs. F. R. Boyd, of No. 607 South Ninth street, Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"I was never well after an attack of the grip a few years ago until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before this I had found nothing that helped me. I was all run down, pale and thin. My appetite was poor and my head ached continually. I didn't feel like myself at all.

"Someone finally recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to me and I found them just the medicine for my case. They gave me a hearty appetite and a good, clear color. I got back my vitality and was soon a well woman. I can safely say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them. I heartily recommend them."

If you are suffering from after-effects of the grip or other wasting disease, try the remedy that has cured so many stubborn cases, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A copy of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," is free on request.

DIDN'T THINK SHE WAS TIRED

Mr. Jinks' Mean Insinuation When Young Lady Dispossessed Him of His Seat.

"That was adding insult to injury," said Representative Mann, the minority leader of the house, apropos of a political squabble. 'It reminds me of young Jinks.

"Late one night young Jinks sat in a crowded trolley car, and, when a girl he knew got aboard and stood directly in front of him, he made no sign. His face hidden by his newspaper, he pretended that he didn't know the girl would like to have his seat.

"After a while she spoke.

"'Good evening, Mr. Jinks.'

"'Why, good evening.'

"'I've been to the Primrose social dance.'

"'Indeed.'

"Then, after a pause, she added:

"'It's a wonder, Mr. Jinks, you wouldn't offer me your seat!'

"Jinks then got up. He was very angry. He said, as he hooked himself to a strap:

"'I thought you wouldn't want it; for as you said you'd been to a dance, I knew you must have been sitting all the evening.'"

He Ought to Get It.

"On what grounds do you seek a divorce from your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Simply because of a pun," replied the long suffering husband. "You see, she's a sculptress, and it gets on my nerves to hear her remark twenty times a day, 'Will you love me when I mold?'"

SUICIDE ENDS N. Y. SCANDAL

FORMER WIFE OF WEALTHY NEW YORKER AND NEW HUSBAND TAKE OWN LIVES.

LOVED A PLUMBER'S SON

For Whom She Left Her Husband—Millionaire So Unnerved That When Driving Auto He Runs Down a Man.

New York, Feb. 6.—Double suicide ended the sensational romance of the former wife of Walter L. Suydam and Frederick Noble, the young plumber for the love of whom Mrs. Suydam ran away from her millionaire husband and married. The bodies of Noble and his bride of a month were found in their New York apartment. The couple had been asphyxiated by gas.

The discovery was made by Mrs. John J. White of Washington, D. C., mother of Mrs. Noble. The daughter had been a visitor at Mrs. White's apartment.

When Mrs. White awoke she found that her daughter had left the house. The mother hurried immediately in her automobile to the daughter's apartment. She became alarmed when there was no answer to her repeated knocks, and summoned two policemen, who forced an entrance.

Doors Locked and Barricaded.

The door had been barricaded with chairs and tables and the doors of all the rooms of the large apartment also were locked and barricaded.

The party found Noble and his wife lying dead on the kitchen floor. A great volume of gas was escaping from five burners of the range and the oven jets were also turned on. Every window in the apartment was closed and bolted. Mrs. White, who was the first to see the bodies, shrieked and fainted. She was carried to a physician's office and resuscitated with difficulty.

Employes at the apartment house said that Suydam frequently had visited his divorced wife since her marriage to the young plumber.

Former Husband Unnerved.

Suydam was so unnerved by the tragedy that later when driving his automobile on Fifth avenue he ran down Edward Rappold, a mail carrier. He took the injured man to a hospital, leaving orders that no expense be spared in treating him.

In the absence of explanatory notes the motive for the suicides will probably never be known. Mrs. Noble was still in her twenties.

Early last fall sensational reports developed regarding Mrs. Suydam's mysterious disappearance. It turned out that she had deserted her wealthy husband and magnificent home for Noble, the son of a Brooklyn plumber. Noble was learning the plumbing trade. Suydam instituted proceedings and obtained a divorce.

The divorced wife afterward married the plumber's son. The wedding took place in Jersey City just a month ago and the couple established a home where their suicide terminated the romance yesterday.

Joseph W. Folk, former governor of Missouri, launched his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president at Joplin Friday night.

TO WITHDRAW LA FOLLETTE

ILL HEALTH GIVEN AS GROUND FOR THE ACTION.

Senator Clapp Among Framers of Announcement Which Has Been Withheld.

Washington, Feb. 6.—It has developed here that, following a conference of republican progressive leaders, a statement has been prepared by friends of Senator La Follette proposing his withdrawal from the race for the republican presidential nomination on the ground that his health made such action necessary. This statement was not submitted to the senator, and for the present has been withheld. His friends took the action upon their belief that his physical condition did not warrant his assuming the responsibility at this time of such a decision. They thought it best to take the matter into their own hands.

At the La Follette headquarters, it was asserted that no official statement could be made at this time, but it was made known that Senator La Follette had been personally consulted regarding the situation, and that he might yet veto the action of his friends. Senators Clapp and Bristow with Walter L. Houser, La Follette's personal manager, and other advisers drafted the announcement, which they are withholding.

A lengthy conference of the La Follette supporters was held here. John Fackler, who has been in charge of the Ohio campaign for La Follette, met the progressive leaders and they went over the situation in detail. La Follette was not present. He was represented in the conference by Colonel John Hannan, Walter L. Houser and Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, his personal friends.

Senators Clapp, Bristow and Bourne, and Medill McCormick attended.

Mines to Shut Down.

Duluth, Feb. 6.—The Hull rust and Burt Sellers iron mines at Hibbing will be shut down pending an adjustment as to how far the mines may encroach on the village.

Mault Plant Burned.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The plant of the Northern Malting company, consisting of a six-story elevator and seven-story malt house, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Liberal selling wiped out a wheat advance due to bullish cables. The disposition to unload was the result chiefly of unexpectedly big receipts at points northwest of Chicago. Labor troubles in Argentina delaying exports had much to do with the strength of European markets and indirectly with the initial firmness here. World shipments as a whole, however, were in excess of what had been looked for. The opening was unchanged to ⅛c higher. May started at $1.04⅛ to $1.04⅜, a gain of ⅛c to ¼c, fell back to $1.03⅝ and rallied to $1.04⅛.

Absence of export demand with poorness of flour trade tended further to depress the market. Closing figures were weak, with May ⅜c net lower at $1.03⅝.

Warmer weather made the corn market weak. Moreover, foreign dispatches were disappointing to the bulls. May opened the same as Saturday night to ⅛c down at 69c to 69⅛c, sagged to 68⅝@68¾c and recovered to 68⅞@69c.

Slowness of cash demand led to a new setback. The close was weak, with May ¾c net lower at 68⅛c.

Oats took a down turn with corn. There was just a fair trade. May started at Saturday night's level to ⅛c up at 52⅝c to 53c and descended to 52⅛c.

Higher prices for hogs gave provisions a lift. Packers, though, were credited with being on the selling side. First transactions were unchanged to 5c dearer, with May delivery $16.25 to $16.40 for pork, $9.40 for lard and $8.85 for ribs.

HOUSEWORK IS A HEAVY BURDEN

The woman who "keeps house" has enough to do when she is in good, sound health, but if she is weak, tired all the time, and suffering from morn to night with an aching back, house-work becomes a heavy burden.

Many women who were afflicted in this way say that Doan's Kidney Pills have made life easier for them.

Women are subject to kidney disease. The clothing they wear, the work they do, the worry and strain of bearing and rearing children, the lack of proper exercise; all tend to it.

Backache, bearing-down pains, headache, dizzy spells, faintness, fits of "blues," and other troubles often thought to be peculiar to the sex, are found frequently in kidney disease. When any one of these ills appears, together with a discolored condition of the kidney secretions, with passages too frequent, scanty or burning, just make up your mind that your kidneys are weak, and be quick to help them.

Doan's Kidney Pills have helped a great many weak women through the trying times when kidney disease means so much added misery. They do not disturb the stomach or bowels and contain no poisonous, dangerous nor habit-forming drugs. Doan's are harmless for children too.

When Kidney Troubles Keep You in Misery Day and Night

"Every Picture Tells A Story"

"I just can't get up!"

The following case is typical of the cures effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is the best evidence.

DRIVEN ALMOST CRAZY.

A Terrible Tale of Kidney Suffering.

Mrs. H. W. Heagy, 1515 L St., Bakersfield, Cal., says: "My kidney trouble began in the fall of 1907. I used remedy after remedy prescribed by physicians but no relief came and I was in despair. On account of the numbness and grating sensation I could not lie down comfortably and some nights I was not in bed half an hour. I became so nervous and restless I hardly knew what to do. Hot waves came over me like a flash and I became so dizzy that I staggered. I had a feeling as if there was gravel in my bladder, the kidney secretions acting too freely at times, while again they were very scant and accompanied by terrible pain. I cannot describe the suffering I endured for over two years. Finally I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and while I did not notice much relief for a week or so, I continued persistently and when I had taken eight boxes I was feeling fine. The numbness and smarting finally left, the kidney secretions became clear and natural and my health improved one hundred percent. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me at a time when it seemed that I would go crazy and I never can express my gratitude."

Both Wrong.

A ludicrous story is told on an Edinburgh bailie, whose studies in natural history seem to have been limited. The following case came before him one day:

A man who kept a ferret having to go into the country, left the cage with the ferret in charge of a neighbor till he should return. The neighbor incautiously opened the cage door, and the ferret escaped. The owner was very angry, and brought a claim against him for damages.

The following was the decision of the learned bailie: "Nae doot," he said to the neighbor; "nae doot ye was wrang to open the cage door; "but," he added, turning to the owner, "ye was wrang, too. What for did ye no clip the brute's wings?"

Brewer's Rule.

It was common knowledge that at twelve o'clock noon the wealthy brewer called in all the poor men in the neighborhood who warmed themselves over store and factory gratings and made them small presents of food, clothing or money. The brewery gratings alone possessed no occupants.

"We don't dare stand there on account of the fumes," said one unfortunate who had been requested to vacate the trunkmaker's grating. "He won't give to anybody who smells beery."

Child's Reasoning.

"I can't tell you anything about my grandpa," said solemn little Eustace, questioned by a happier comrade as to his more recent ancestor, "because I never had any. All my grandparents died before I was born."

"But you had grandparents, just the same, dear," interpolated a listening adult. "The fact that they died before you was born doesn't alter the fact that they were your grandparents."

"But if our father and mothers had died before we were born they wouldn't have been our fathers and mothers, would they?" the wondering child questioned. "So I don't see how what you say can be true."

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Now's the Time—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

John Lind is being talked of as a possible democratic candidate for U. S. Senator to succeed Knut Nelson. Neither John nor Knut have given approval to the motion yet, however.

The Roseau Region is correct in stating that there 's little Taft sentiment in this district. If a Taft delegation should be sent from Minnesota to the republican national convention, aud Taft be nominated, we shall not be surprised to see the voters deliver substantiol proof of their having been misrepresented.

Senator LaFollette's health has broken down and 'tis said that it may be necessary for him to spend several months travelling abroad in order to recuperate. His withdrawal as a candidate for the presidency is now expected at almost any moment. In his place the progressive republicans will try for Roosevelt's nomination. It is stated that an agreement has been effected and that Roosevelt is ready and willing.

The republicans of North Dakota are making a great effort to show that they want the party to nominate Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency. It is, of course, the progressive element that is making all the noise, and the stand-patters in that state, and the other states, are quietly preparing to vote for the democratic nominee in case anyone but Taft is nominated by the republican convention. It is the stand-pat element that will defeat Roosevelt at any stage of the game.

BUNCOED AND STUNG? SURE, YES!

IT was all because he didn't read the papers. Everybody has heard of old Hiram Gink, who went to the big city and bought a gold brick. That was twenty years ago, but he is still the same old Hi. His boast then was that he didn't read the papers, and he makes the same brag now.

IF HE HAD INVESTED $1 A YEAR WITH THE NEAREST EDITOR IT WOULD HAVE SAVED HIM $200.

But he said his old dad had never paid out good money for "any of them measly sheets, and, by gum, I won't nuther!"

So he has been EASY MONEY FOR THE CON. MEN. It is the men who do not read the papers on whom this gentry live. TAKE THE HOME PAPER.

A Curious Oath.

The following curious oath was until recently administered in the courts of the Isle of Man: "By this book and by the holy contents thereof and by the wonderful works that God has miraculously wrought in heaven above and in the earth beneath in six days and seven nights I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, love or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, execute the laws of this isle justly between our sovereign lord the king and his subjects within this isle and between party and party as indifferently as the herring's backbone doth lie in the middle of the fish."—London Standard.

Lanterns in China.

There has long existed among the Chinese a passion for fireworks and lanterns. Travelers have called China the land of lanterns, and the term is apposite. In every city, at every port and on every river and canal as soon as night comes on lanterns make their appearance. They are hung at the door of every dwelling; they swing as pendants from the angles of pagodas; they form the fiery crown of every shop front; they cluster round the houses of the rich and light up the hovels of the poor; they are borne with the carriages of travelers, and they swing from the yards and the masts of vessels.

They Sink Backward.

"Hippopotamuses are the only water animals that sink backward when going under the surface of the water," said a keeper in the Central park menagerie to a group of visitors in front of the animals' tank.

"Aquatic animals, as a rule, dive into the water head first and make more or less splashing. But the hippo goes down so quietly that if a hunter were standing near the edge of an African pool the big river horse would disappear without attracting attention. They keep up the custom in captivity, where there is no necessity of guarding against enemies. As they go down they throw up their noses and fill their lungs. I have timed this specimen and found that she can stay under water for five minutes. She then comes up with a snort and takes a fresh supply of air. Perhaps she could stay down longer if she was trying to avoid danger."—New York Sun.

Believed In Closed Windows.

An old Yale man, giving his reminiscences of President Noah Porter, recalled a talk the kindly gentleman gave to his freshman class. "Young gentlemen," said the president, "the air of New Haven is especially heavy and damp at night, owing to the proximity of the city to the sea, and I wish to advise you always to keep your windows closed at night; otherwise your health will be likely to suffer." That was the advice of the president of the institution. It is significant of the extent to which ideas change with the years. Now everybody is for out of doors air, and the person who followed the advice of President Porter would be condemned out of hand; and yet, if we are not mistaken, that gentleman managed to live out his threescore years and ten and do them about eleven better. He was born in 1811 and died in 1892. He believed in closed windows.—Hartford Courant.

Whistler Was a Dandy.

If taking infinite pains with his appearance means dandyism, then Whistler was a dandy. The very word pleased him, and he used it often, in American fashion, to express perfection or charm or beauty. Never was any man more particular about his person and his dress. He was as careful of his hair as a woman, though there was no need of the curling tongs with which he has been reproached; the difficulty was to restrain his curls and keep them in order. The white lock gave just the right touch. However fashion changed, he always wore the mustache and little imperial which other West Point men of his generation retained through life. Even his thick, bushy eyebrows were trained, and they added to the humorous or sardonic expression of the deep blue eyes from which many shrank.—Pennell's "Life of Whistler."

Welsh Bulls.

Ireland's position as the country in which "bulls" blossom best is being seriously challenged. It was a Welsh member of parliament who crushingly remarked to an opposition member: "The honorable member has attempted to throw a bombshell at the government, but in the hands of the chancellor of the exchequer it was turned into a cocked hat long before it was thrown."

It was also a Welsh member, though not the same one, who, speaking against a proposal to fortify London, began earnestly with: "Our navy is our only defense. If our navy temporarily left the seas"— And then he had to stop. Delighted members, with visions of battleships swooping over green fields or climbing over house tops, were in a roar, and it was some minutes before business could proceed.—London Answers.

Ions Are Very Small.

The smallest piece of matter is called the ion. It is so small that a person could not imagine that anything could be smaller. It is so small that its identity is lost in its effect. It is the point where solid matter resolves itself into a form of electricity. Now, think how small that is from this experiment: If the ions in a toy balloon, full of gas, were counted out at the rate of a hundred per minute it would take 100,000,000 persons 4,000,000 years to count them. The fact that the human intellect can discover this fact is quite as startling as the fact itself. This seems to be getting on the edge of material creation, and if the ion could be further divided we would have to get over into the spirit world to do it, for there possibly its last analysis only can be reached.—Ohio State Journal.

Over the Phone.

"He hasn't slept all night, doctor," said Mrs. Blinks over the phone, describing her husband's symptoms, "and this morning he complains of aches in his bones and a general headachy feeling. Is there anything I can do?"

Just then the wires crossed with the phone connection of the dog fancier.

"Sure!" came the response. "Bring him in this afternoon and I'll cut his ears for you."—Pittsburgh Press.

Two Evils.

There are two things in life that a sage must preserve at every sacrifice—the coats of his stomach and the enamel of his teeth. Some evils admit of consolations; there are no comforters for dyspepsia and the toothache.—Bulwer-Lytton.

More Like It.

"Do you wish to call your husband up on the phone?"

"No, I don't. I want to call him down."—Exchange.

Despair alone makes guilty men be bold.—Coleridge.

The Island of St. Helena.

St. Helena has been an island of tragedies—tragedies that have been lost sight of wailing over the Corsican. On the second day of my visit the governor took me by carriage road through the turns over the island. At one point of our journey the road, in winding around spurs and ravines, formed a perfect W within the distance of a few rods. The roads, though tortuous and steep, were fairly good, and I was struck with the amount of labor it must have cost to build them. The air on the heights was cool and bracing. It is said that since hanging for trivial offenses went out of fashion no one has died there, except from falling over the cliffs in old age or from being crushed by stones rolling on them from the steep mountains! Witches at one time were persistent at St. Helena, as with us in America in the days of Cotton Mather. At the present day crime is rare in the island.

The Ancient Dragon.

The pterodactyl, whose fossil remains have been found in the chalk at Cambridge, England, and elsewhere, with a very varied spread of wings, which in the largest specimens must have reached twenty-five feet, is almost identical with the dragon of fable. A batlike creature, with an elevated body and long neck ending in an absurdly small head with a portentous beak, it could run very swiftly, was a fish eater and could swim, or it flew by means of huge membranous wings, which connected its long fore quarters with its hind legs. The pterodactyl evidently existed down to a comparatively recent geological period, and it is not at all improbable that the traditional dragon is described from the last living specimens as met with by primitive man.

Simplified Spelling Effects.

"We find in the letters we receive," said the correspondence clerk, "some marvelous examples of simplified spelling, some of these unconsciously phonetic, some evidently deliberately intended, some that, though they serve their purpose wonderfully, verge on the comic. For instance, we received yesterday a letter from a man who starts off in this way:

"'What fx would follow'— and so on.

"Of course the meaning of that was perfectly plain, but the bookkeeper and I had to smile over it for a moment, and when we showed it to the stenographer he said that the man who could write words like that ought not to stop at simplified spelling—he ought to go right ahead and invent a new shorthand system."—New York Sun.

Chinese Idioms.

When a Chinese writer wishes to express that the wealthy parent of the heroine has set his affairs in order in her favor before dying his idiom is: "He has settled his plums." "To have plucked the kwei (cassia) flower" signifies gaining the master's degree at the triennial examinations. Their idiom for "Let there be no backsliding" is, "Let there be no absorption of sweat." A runaway wife is said by Liu Chin Chu to "carry her guitar to another door." When you wish to say that you have secured a vindication, you express it, "My adversary has been forced to paint my front door." When a great man dies they say, "A corner of the city wall has fallen."—J. S. Thompson's "The Chinese."

Green Turtles.

The green turtle finds its home in the coral reefs lying to the north of Jamaica, though it is found in other parts of the West Indies. The creature is caught by the employment of extremely strong nets, which are interlaced between the rocks. Once caught the turtle is taken to Kingston, where it is kept in special sea water pens on the seashore. When in the pens the turtle is provided with a peculiar kind of sea grass, which it likes very much. Curiously enough, when it is taken away from the West Indies it refuses to eat this grass. Indeed, it will die of starvation sooner than touch the grass, however carefully preserved. It takes eight pounds of flesh to make a single quart of soup.

Timely Answers.

"Do you remember how hungry I was at seven-thirty last night?"

"I should say I do."

"Do you know how I appeased my hunger in a half hour?"

"No; what did you do?"

"Eight a clock."

"That's nothing. Do you remember how unlucky I was at the raffle at twelve-thirty?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, I wasn't so unlucky a half hour later."

"No? I'm glad to know that. What did you win?"

"One a clock."—Lippincott's.

Lacking In Official Zeal.

"I see," remarked the traveler, "you have an anti-horse thief association here. What's the matter? Can't you leave the punishment of horse thieves to the constituted authorities?"

"Not by a darn sight!" said Grizzly Pete. "They ain't anti enough."—Chicago Tribune.

Paraphrase.

"I thought she exhibited verve and aplomb," said Mrs. Oldcastle. "Did you?" replied her hostess. "Josiah said she had nerve, but was a peach."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Touching.

Jennie—Everything he touches seems to turn to gold. Jim—Yes; he touched me today for a sovereign.—London Opinion.

Mrs. Sam Mickelson went down to Thief River Falls yesterday for an overnight visit.

A. Stenseth was here from Albert Lea last Friday looking after his real estate interests in this vicinity.

Miss Edna Risberg came up from Thief River Falls on Friday for an over Sunday visit with her parents.

D. B. Bakke is here today from Thief River Falls on one of his regular trips to look over the business of the Holt State Bank.

Otto Lee, of Grygla, is here at present in his capacity as contractor for the hauling of the coal supply for the Forrestal & Feyen dredges on ditch 83.

S. S. Kolden and John A. Sorum returned from the twin cities early this week and brought with them 10 head of good horses which they are selling at very reasonable figures.

S. M. Sivertson, general manager of the Red Lake Falls Milling Co., was a business visitor here monday and set his seal of approval on business conditions at their agency here.

The dance and basket party given for the benefit of the baseball club at the Woodman hall last Saturday evening was one of the pleasantest social events of the season. There was quite a large attendance and the baskets brought were decidedly attractive. The net proceeds of the affair will be sufficient to wipe out the indebtedness of the ball club and start the team right for 1912.

Cement Talk No. 1

Portland cement does not come from Portland, Maine, or Portland, Oregon, and it was not first made at either of these places. It is called Portland because it was given this name by the Englishman who first made it. He called it Portland because he thought it resembled certain natural deposits on the Isle of Portland in England. Portland cement is the fine powder produced by pulverizing the clinker resulting from the burning together of various materials of proper chemical composition. In the case of Universal Portland Cement, these raw materials are blast furnace slag and pure limestone. There are many brands of Portland cement on the market, produced by different manufacturers. Universal is one of the best known and highest grade Portland cements. You can always tell it by the name Universal and the blue trade mark printed on each sack. Forty million sacks of Universal are made and used yearly in this country. If you have any concrete work to do, you will make no mistake by using Universal Portland Cement.

DIAMOND RIDING PLOWS

The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.

It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

COST OF GRAIN GROWING IN CENTRAL CANADA

A careful canvass made of a number of men farming in a large way indicates that even with the extreme expense of harvesting the crop, which has been caused by the bad weather and difficulty in threshing, wheat has been produced and put on the market for less than 55 cents a bushel. The average freight rate is not over 13 cents per bushel. This would make the cost of production and freight 68 cents and would leave the farmer an actual margin on his low-grade wheat of 17½ cents and for his high-grade wheat of 19½ cents; and though this is not as large a profit as the farmer has every right to expect, it is a profit not to be despised, and which should leave a very fair amount of money to his credit when all the expenses of the year have been paid, unless the value of low-grade wheat sinks very much below its present level. A matter of importance to the prospective settler is that of the cost of production. The following table has been prepared after careful investigation:

Interest on 320 acres, value $30 per acre, 3 years at 6 per cent interest	$1,720.00
Interest on horses, machinery, wagons, ploughs, harrows, etc., to operate 320 acres—say $2,500 for 3 years	450.00
Getting 320 acres ready for crop first year, doing one's own work, with hired help, about $3.50 per acre	1,120.00
Getting 320 acres ready for crop, second and third year, about $1.25 per acre per year, or $2.50 per acre 2 years one's own work and hired help	800.00
Seed per year, wheat, per acre $1.25, 3 years	1,200.00
Seeding, 320 acres, 25 cents per acre, 3 years	240.00
Twine, 320 acres, 30 cents per acre, 3 years	288.00
Harvesting, 320 acres, 30 cents per acre, 3 years	288.00
Marketing, 320 acres, estimate 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, 3 cents per bushel, or 9 cents per bushel for 3 years	576.00
Threshing 320 acres, estimate 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, 6 cents per bushel per year or 18 cents for 3 years	1,152.00
Total	$7,834.00
Cr.
By wheat crop farm 320 acres for 3 years, average 20 bushels per acre per year for 3 years, or a total of 60 bushels, = 19,200 bushels at 80 cents per bushel	$15,360.00
Balance to credit of farm after 3 years operation, $2,563.00 per year	7,526.00

"To operate 480 acres would cost less in proportion, as the plant required for 320 acres would do for the larger farm, and the interest on plant for the extra 160 acres would be saved."

The figures given may be open to criticism, but they will be found to be reasonably accurate, with a fairness given to the expense columns. There are those who profess to do the work at a much less cost than those given.

BATTLESHIP MAINE IS AGVIN AFLOAT

WATER IS FORCED INTO COFFER-DAM, FREEING THE MUD-ENCRUSED HULL.

BIG JOB ABOUT FINISHED

Hundreds of Sightseers From City Viewing Engineering Feat.—Will Soon Be Floated Out to Sea.

Havana, Feb. 12.—The wreck of the Maine floated free of the mud when water was turned nto the dam surrounding the wreck. The water within the dam is about 14 feet below the harbor at low tide. It is the intention to admit more water more rapidly, so that the wreck will be raised to the harbor level, leaving nothing more to be done except to break the dam and float off the ship.

Water was forced into the dam through a system of pipes fixed at the bottom of the dam, the power being supplied by a pump which had been recovered from the wreck. The ship began to rise almost immediately. The midship section, which had been furnished with a bulkhead, rose more rapidly on account of superior buoyancy, than the heavily-weighted, sharp-pointed stern, so that the Maine is somewhat down by the stern.

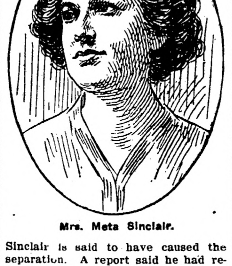
Many hundreds of visitors thronged the dam all day, watching the refloating of the Maine. None of them was admitted aboard the ship, however, for fear of accident. Major Ferguson, who has had charge of the work, has received many congratulations on his success. The ship will remain secured within the dam until orders are received from Washington to float her out, which can be done within a fortnight.

HER AFFINITY SKIPS.

Mrs. Sinclair and Harry Kemp, Kansas Poet, Have Parted.

New York, Feb. 13.—Another bubble of "true love" has burst, Harry Kemp, the Kansas poet, and Mrs. Meta Sinclair, former wife of Upton Sinclair, the author, have come to the parting of the ways.

Just where the poet is nobody seems to know. Inability to support Mrs. Sinclair is said to have caused the separation. A report said he had returned to his beloved Kansas, but another rumor is extant that he still was in New York, waiting and yearning.



Mrs. Meta Sinclair.

Mrs. Sinclair has returned to the home of her father, William Fuller, clerk of the court of special sessions on West Eighty-seventh street.

Upton Sinclair has gone to Germany, taking his 10-year-old son, David. The purpose of the trip is to put the boy in school.

ICY DIP FOR CONVERTS.

Twenty-Seven Negroes of Both Sexes Baptized in Monongahela.

Pittsburg, Feb. 13.—With the thermometer registering four degrees above zero, 27 negro men and women, recent converts to the Mt. Zion African Methodist Episcopal church of Brownville, near here, were baptized in the icy waters of the Monongahela river.

The immersions were witnessed by several thousand persons who shivered on the river bank and huddled close to fires built by small boys.

In order to get the ceremony under way it was necessary to cut a hole in the ice. Carriages were in waiting and as fast as the baptized came out of the water they were wrapped in blankets and driven to their homes.

Being anxious as to his prospects in one of the early attempts to enter parliament, Herbert Samuel consulted his agent, who said the chances were not rosy, because he was a "carpetbagger."

Mr. Samuel thereupon promised to live in the division if he were successful, and bills were immediately posted that "if Herbert Samuel is returned next Tuesday he will come to live here."

Some of the other side, however, posted one of these bills on a pigsty.

A TROUBLE MAKER
Coffee Poison Breeds Variety of Ills.

A California woman who didn't know for twenty years what kept her ill, writes to tell how she won back her health by quitting coffee:

"I am 54 years old," she says, "have used coffee all my life, and for 20 years suffered from indigestion and insomnia. Life was a burden and a drag to me all the time, and about once a year my ailments got such hold upon me that I was regularly 'sick in bed' for several weeks each time.

"I was reluctant to conclude that coffee was the cause of my trouble, but I am thankful that I found out the truth.

"Then I determined to use Postum exclusively—for a week at first—for I doubted my ability to do without coffee for any length of time. I made the Postum carefully, as directed, and before the week expired had my reward in a perceptible increase in strength and spirits.

"Seeing the good that my short experiment had accomplished, I resolved to continue the use of Postum, cutting out the coffee entirely. This I did for nine months, finding, daily, increased cause for gratification at my steadily improving health. My indigestion gradually left me, my sleep returned, I gained 26 pounds in weight, my color changed from sallow to a fresh, rosy hue and life became a blessing.

"Then I thought I would try coffee again, and did so for a few weeks. The punishment for deserting my good friend, Postum, was a return of my old troubles.

"That taught me wisdom, and I am now and shall be all my life hereafter using Postum exclusively and enjoying the benefits it brings me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

DAM BRKAKS, SEVEN ARE DEAD

WALL AT SMALL LAKE, B. C., GOES OUT, DESTROYING 4 HOUSES.

Residents Perched on Housetops, Carried Along by Flood—Damage $30,000,000.

Vancouver, Feb. 13.—The bursting of a dam at Small Lake, near Union Bay, let loose a flood of water which swept down the valley, destroying 45 dwellings with a property loss estimated at $30,000. Seven persons, all of whom are believed to be Chinese, are missing.

A huge wall of water swept down the valley. The residents of the district known as Chinatown, had but five minutes' warning of the impending disaster. Many of them fled to the surrounding high land, while others sought refuge in the tops of their houses. When the flood reached the settlement its depth was estimated at 15 feet. The dwellings, which were mostly shacks, were broken up like matchwood and carried along on the crest of the wave, being hurled aside in the ruins as the valley broadened and the tide of water emptied itself into the bay.

The Chinese and Japanese sections in the district were reported entirely destroyed. Other buildings which shared in the ruin, were the co-operative store, the man business house of the district, and the government telegraph station. A large number of residents had narrow escapes from drowning.

Those who took refuge on tops of the shacks were carried along by the swirling tide, many of them only escaping when the broadening expanse of water hurled their shacks to dry land on either side of the flood as it made its way to Union Bay. The dam was used by the Canadian collieries in generating power for their plants.

Powder Magazine Explodes.

New York, Feb. 13.—A powder magazine on the government proving ground at Fort Hancock, Sandy Hook, exploded with a report that was heard for ten miles. So far as could be ascertained no one was harmed. This miraculous escape was due mostly to the fact that only a small part of the stored powder ignited.

FINAL RESULT OF IMPURE BLOOD

The System Is Left Weak, Run Down and Helpless Against the Attacks of Disease.

If you need strength, if your blood is thin, your digestion disordered, it will pay you to investigate the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the remedy that has transformed so many weak, anæmic, dyspeptic, ambitionless people into strong, healthy, hungry men and women.

Mrs. Lena May Roberts, whose address is R. F. D. No. 3, Aberdeen, So. Dakota after several months of suffering finally found the right tonic in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:

"For months after the birth of my baby, I suffered terribly from a general breakdown in health. I was in bed for three months and after that was able to be up only part of the time. I was sick all over, being pale, weak and thin. My appetite was gone and my head ached most of the time. Oftentimes there seemed to be a rush of blood to my head and I would faint away. I was very nervous and was not strong enough to do any work.

"As the treatment I was taking did not help me, I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which a friend said had helped her. After taking a few boxes, I began to get well rapidly. I continued using them for a time and am now as well and strong as ever in my life."

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in general debility lies in their direct response to the needs of the blood. Their work is to make new blood. That they do this well is shown by the gradual disappearance of the symptoms and the return of color and health. They lay the foundation for permanent health in the future.

For the same reason these pills have cured anæmia, after-effects of the grip and fevers, rheumatism, indigestion, and nervousness, dizziness, neuralgia and St. Vitus' dance, and are recommended wherever a tonic for the blood and nerves is needed.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing fuller information about rheumatism and other diseases of the blood will be sent free upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Booth Tarkington, the American playwright and novelist, is a very early riser, and, when the English playwright and novelist, Arnold Bennett, visited him at his charming residence in Indianapolis, Mr. Tarkington said, the first evening at dinner:

"I believe in the simple life. I get up with the sun. Will you take a ten-mile walk with me at six o'clock tomorrow morning?"

"Thank you, Mr. Tarkington," the Englishman answered, "but I don't walk in my sleep."

SURELY HARD MAN TO PLEASE

Artist Did His Best, but Somehow Managing Editor Would Not Be Satisfied.

An artist was drawing a cartoon wherein the flag of our nation played a large part. He drew the flag, first time, with five stars in the blue field and took it to the managing editor, who promptly let out a yelp.

"Wadye think this country is," said the managing editor, "a trust?"

"What's the trouble?" asked the artist.

"Trouble," bellowed the managing editor, "why, we need more stars, stars, stars!"

So the artist brought the picture back and this time he had 117 stars in it by actual count.

The managing editor felt his head and choked slightly.

"What do you think you're drawing?" he asked at last.

"You're the hardest man to please I ever met in my life," said the artist indignantly; "first it's too few and then it's too many. How many stars do you want, anyway?"

What the Copy Boy Wrote.

Representative Dan Anthony of Kansas, publisher of the Leavenworth Times, once had an office boy who yearned to know how to use a typewriter—which accomplishment, the boy figured, would make him a regular reporter.

Anthony turned an old broken-down machine over to him, says the Washington Herald, and bade him learn to run it.

"What'll I write?" the boy asked.

"Oh, just take some sentence, any sentence at all," Anthony told him, "and see how long it will take you to fill a page with it."

The boy set to work. An hour or two later Anthony chanced to notice the page on which the lad had been working. From top to bottom of the sheet, and from margin to margin, the boy had written one sentence over and over again until there was scarcely a white spot visible on the paper. The sentence the boy had selected to practice with was: "Who the —— invented school?"

Relieves Backache Instantly

Sloan's Liniment is a great remedy for backache. It penetrates and relieves the pain instantly—no rubbing necessary—just lay it on lightly.

Here's Proof.

"I had my back hurt in the Boer War and in San Francisco two years ago I was hit by a street car in the same place. I tried all kinds of dope without success. Two weeks ago I saw your liniment in a drug store and got a bottle to try. The first application caused instant relief, and now except for a little stiffness, I am almost well."
FLETCHER NORMAN, Whittier, Calif.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT is the best remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat and sprains.

Miss E. Rim of Brooklyn, N.Y., writes: "Sloan's Liniment is the best for rheumatism. I have used six bottles of it and it is grand."

CONDEMNS LAND POLICY

Former Senator Says School Sections Should Be Held For Rise.

Minneapolis.—Minnesota is following a short-sighted policy in the present method of disposing of its public lands, in the opinion of former Senator E. J. Meilicke, now a bonanza farmer. He suggests that the state hold its school lands until the surrounding lands are cultivated and have attained a substantial value, when the school sections could be sold to much greater advantage.

"When I went into the Saskatchewan country ten years ago," said Mr. Meilicke to a group of statehouse officials, "land cost from $3 to $4 an acre and school lands naturally were worth no more. But the government has adopted the policy of holding the school lands until the residents in the locality petition to have them placed on the market.

"Just before I came down the government had an auction on a school section near my farm. What was the result? Everybody wanted some of it and the bidding was so strong that every acre went about $40 and the choicest forty was bid up nearly to $50. Had this piece been sold when the rush began or even before, the government, instead of receiving nearly $30,000, would have obtained only about $3,000, possibly less.

"I don't know much about the land department in Minnesota, but I am informed that land in the school sections frequently is sold for $10 an acre or less, even down to $5. There may be a good reason for it, but if it is possible the state should withdraw from the market enough of its lands so that it may reap the benefit of the rise in values."

Mr. Meilicke is no longer a citizen of the United States, but a subject of King George V, and is contemplating a political career for himself in Saskatchewan.

INDICTMENTS AT HIBBING

Two Held for Murder and One for Grand Larcency.

Duluth. — The range grand jury sitting at Hibbing brought in 22 indictments and three of them were for first degree murder. Only six indictments were made public. Jack Dexler who shot and killed Axel Pakkala, a wealthy Virginia saloon keeper Christmas morning, and who fatally wounded John Koski was indicted for first degree murder on two counts. Koski lived for about two weeks after he was shot.

Indictment for first degree murder was found against Micheal Angelo Gentilcore, a miner who is charged with killing another miner named Gregory Pillage at Virginia in December. Pillage accused Gentilcore of stealing $70 from him. The latter claims self-defense.

W. Brown, an actor at the Grand in Virginia, was indicted for grand larcency in the first degree.

LOWER GRAIN RATES

Representative Miller Promised Relief by I. C. C.

Washington, D. of C. — The interstate commerce commission informed Representative Miller that it had granted permission to the Canadian Northern and other Northwestern railroads to effect an immediate reduction in rates on flax and barley between Canadian points and Duluth and Minneapolis.

These roads desire to haul this traffic into Minnesota at reduced rates so as to relieve the unusual condition in Western Canada where all sorts of crops remain unmoved because of a lack of elevators and milling facilities. The order of the commerce commission will result in a large increase in the business of the Minneapolis grain millers. A similar permit affecting wheat was issued a few weeks ago.

Collins, Moorhead; vice president, Superintendent Williams of Traverse county; secretary-treasurer, Superintendent Sherrats of Detroit. The fifth annual meeting closed with a session devoted to a round table on rural school work. A banquet was served in Comstock hall at the normal in honor of President Vincent and was attended by 200 invited guests. Dr. Vincent delivered an address.

COW VALUES FOUND

Testing Associations In Freeborn County Makes Records of Every Herd

Albert Lea.—Four flourishing cow-testing associations are in operation in this county, one in connection with the Albert Lea state creamery, one with the Clark's Grove creamery, one with the Alden creamery and a fourth with the Freeborn creamery. Preliminary work is now being done by Prof. Sexauer, director of the agricultural and dairy department of the city schools, and his assistant, Prof. Cathcart, toward organizing associations in connection with the Hayward and Glenville creameries. The four organized in this county were the first in the state, and a late report showed there were but eighty in the entire United States.

The method pursued is to have a man visit one of twenty-six herds each day, that being the number of herds under his care. This gives him one day each month with each herd. The milk is weighed and tested for butter fat, feed weighed and the general condition of the herd examined. In this manner the dairyman knows at the end of the year what cows are making him money and also those that return less than the expense of feed.

The association in connection with the state creamery has begun its second year. The first year showed a range from 315 to 96 pounds of butter fat for the average of herds. Thus the cows in the best herd averaged 378 pounds of butter a year, while the poorest averaged only 115 pounds. The aim of it the dairymen in Freeborn county is to double the average butter production of the 25,000 cows in the county, which would mean more than 10,000,000 pounds of butter a year.

HASTINGS INSTITUTE

Men and Women From the Farms Hear Instructive Talks.

Hastings.—A state farmers' institute was held at the court house, with an attendance of more than 300 farmers from Dakota and Washington counties. The corps of instructors include Forest Henry of Dover, conductor; C. W. Hale of Stewartville, and F. L. Marsh of Champlin.

In addition to the regular exercises Miss Martha Wilson of St. Paul, supervisor of school libraries for the department of public instruction, gave a talk upon books before the Economics club at the rooms of the Commercial club, explaining how the public library could be extended into the country. Mrs. Estelle W. Wilcox of the state agricultural college discussed the progress of the farm home, food and health. Mrs. Wilcox answered questions along the line of domestic science.

Miss Gertrude A. Norrish of this city presided at the session, at the close of which the club women, with Mrs. Irving Todd, Jr., who is president of the club, served refreshments.

COUNTY DIVISION IS UP

Pine River Citizens' Visit to Cass Lake Reviews Issue.

Cass Lake.—County division in Cass county begins to loom up large. It may have been by chance and it may have been premeditated that Cass Lake was visited by ten of Pine River's representative citizens. It may have been that the talk of county division, which has been going on for the last two weeks, has interested these men and that they are trying to get a line on the situation. At any rate the Commercial club entertained the Pine River visitors, and county division is much nearer than it would have been had they not visited Cass Lake. Plans for the new county have not fully matured and it has not yet been decided where the division line will be drawn.

One thing is certain, the majority of politicians at the county seat, Walker, are not showing an affirmative interest in the division issue.

BRAINERD BOOSTING

Commercial Club Advertises Attractions for Settlers.

Brainerd. — The directors of the Commercial club plan an advertising campaign and 10,000 pamphlets will be issued describing the agricultural, mineral and other resources of the county. A fund will be raised to pay for advertising in farm papers of the northwest. President Vincent, of the University of Minnesota, will speak at the clubrooms on the evening of April 12

HE WAS SOMEWHAT PEEVED

Attendant at Spiritualistic Seance Considered Himself Aggrieved and Said So.

Charles M. Cross of Indianapolis thinks variety adds spice to life, so he went to a spiritualistic service.

It was a lively affair with sepulchral voices sounding through trumpets, tambourines playing mysteriously in mid air, and cold, clammy hands of partially materialized men and women making free in the dusky room with those who were in the flesh. In the midst of it something dealt Mr. Cross a vicious whack on the nose and he called for lights in a tone not to be disobeyed. With the light the circle as disclosed was all natural and human again. The most human member of it was Mr. Cross, with a bloody nose, spoiling for a fight and all the "madder" because he did not know whom to fight.

"Who did that?" he demanded of the medium.

The medium said the gay spirit was that of St. Peter.

But even this explanation did not satisfy Mr. Cross.

"Well, all I ask of St. Peter," he said, "is to materialize for just one minute and if I don't make a vacancy for a new gatekeeper I won't ask to get in."—Indianapolis News.

Air Laws.

Wilbur Wright, at a tea in Dayton, said with a laugh:

"Already there are air laws, stringent as road laws. Without them we should soon be seeing advertisements like this:

"'Two dollars reward will be paid by Mrs. John Doe for information leading to the identification of the aviator on a Wright roadster who, while flying over my house yesterday afternoon, dropped a can of oil down my chimney and completely ruined a plum pudding I was cooking.'"

Dental Operation on Pony.

A remarkable operation has been performed by a Wanstead (Eng.) veterinary surgeon on a pony which had a bad fracture of the lower jaw. After injecting cocaine and wiring the teeth together, the surgeon drilled a hole through the jawbone, and the broken parts were then firmly drawn together by strong silver wire. The pony is expected to make a complete recovery.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience —a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Dean Woods, of the state agricultural college, points out that the soil offers great inducements to college bred men. He might very properly add that the great Mud Lake district offers special inducements to any man, college bred or otherwise.

On Wednesday President Taft affixed his signature to the proclamation admitting Arizona to statehood. This was one of the measures which he refused to sign last summer. Before the present congress adjourns he will undoubtedly sign up most of the bills that he vetoed last session. It isn't just pleasant, but necessray.

The Minneapolis Journal invited Minnesota voters to send in letters expressing their choice for President. Thousands answered and recorded their votes. The time allowed expired a few days ago, the votes were footed up and the result published. Of the republican votes Roosevelt received a handsome plurality, La Follette took second place and Taft third. The Journal claims that the result shows a decided tendency of the people to do their own thinking and an inclination to forsake party, looking for results to individuals instead of political machines. The principal point indicated, however, is that Minnesota cannot be counted as a Taft state, even if the machine controlled daily newspapers in the cities claim it is.

The Hennepin County Progressive Republican League a few days ago passed resolutions denouncing the present administration and the republican machine which controls it. The resolution endorses the candidacy of Wm. E. Lee for governor as "the only one" of the three avowed candidates who can and will administer the affairs of the state in the interests of the people instead of the Special Interests. Coming from the county stated, this last statement inclines us to be slightly suspicious of Mr. Lee. As lieutenant governor Sam Y. Gordon proved himself free from any alliance with the Interests and fairly and fearlessly on the side of the people, with the necessary backbone and brains to carry out his plans for the right. The people are not going to turn Gordon down for Lee until they have better proof that the latter is the better man.

Preventing Railroad Accidents.

Prevention is not only better than cure, but is also better than denunciation. As more and more of our people travel yearly, their safety becomes of increasing concern to us all. Yet recent government reports indicate that the number of railroad accidents is growing. From the same sources we are informed of two causes for at least a portion of the disasters. One is the tendency to run past signals. The other is rail breakage due, in part at least, to heavier engines and trains. It is notorious that on many railroads engineers are rewarded for making time and that, while no specific orders are given to disregard signals, such disregard is winked at if no accident ensues. The public itself is in part responsible for this condition. We demand ever greater speed and are willing to take the risk. Under such circumstances disasters are well nigh certain.

The heavier equipment is due to a desire for increased capacity, which in its last analysis means the movement of more goods or people, hence more speed. Efforts for improvement are laudable, provided they do not jeopardize life or property. Evidence goes to show that the limit has probably been reached in the matter of heavy rolling stock, as the pounding of these great loads weakens the rails and breakages result.

In most European countries the rule is "safety first." It is likewise true that in these countries there are fewer accidents than with us. Have we not also reached the stage where we must adopt the rule of "safety first?" Even American hurry must pause when it endangers life.

People have more trouble in pronouncing the name of Senator La Follette than they used to have even with that of Roosevelt. Many make the mistake of accenting the last syllable, as though they were in France. The writer heard one man call it La Folletty, with the accent on the "let." The right way to pronounce it is as though it were spelled La Follet, with the accent on the "fol." At least that is the way it is done in Wisconsin.

A man in a Los Angeles hotel shaved with champagne and bathed in milk. We are not told what he drank, but from his antipathy to water it is safe to bet he never went fishing, sailing or swimming.

Russia not only refuses to admit American citizens into her own territory, but objects to them in Persia.

Canal Not a Charitable Enterprise.

One of the duties facing congress is that of fixing the tolls for the Panama canal. One of the proposals concerning these is that the same charges be made to all vessels, whether American or foreign, but that the United States government make it up to our own ships by paying the tolls itself. This it would do to encourage the American merchant marine.

Now comes John Barrett, head of the Pan-American union, with the proposal that there shall be no tolls at all, but that all ships shall go through the canal free of charge. He argues that the big ditch is partly a naval venture anyway, and therefore our enormous expenditure on it is justified as a defense measure. Moreover, he thinks that such immense benefits will accrue to our west coast and to our trade generally that we shall be more than repaid and therefore will not need to charge anything to make up our outlay. One other argument against tolls is that they are advocated by the transcontinental railroads, who think a free canal would create unfair competition.

This is on a par with the argument that the United States should not fortify the canal, but should throw it open to the navies of the world, even though some of these navies were bent on our own destruction. It suggests a question: Is the Panama canal a charitable institution? We have built it with our own money, at the risk of the lives of our own men. What sort of equity or justice is there in the proposal that we bear all the burden and let other nations have the benefits without return?

A laborer in Orange, N. J., picked up a pearl necklace worth $5,000 that had been dropped by a society woman. He took the string home to his wife, who contemptuously dropped it into her apron pocket, saying that she could get the same kind of a necklace at the 5 and 10 cent store. Neither the laborer nor his wife had any notion of the value of their find until the police accidentally discovered the whereabouts of the pearls. Query: If all people had the same estimate of pearls as this humble couple what would pearls be worth? Value is an idea.

The census reports that there are nearly 3,000,000 more males than females in the United States. Even if the women do get the ballot we can outvote them.

The Standard Oil company and the tobacco trust at least have the physical aspects of having been "busted."

Whistler's Tart Comment.

Whistler one afternoon called on a young painter of his acquaintance who did the pretty little sort of things that are popular. In the course of the conversation that followed the young artist turned to a little head he was painting and, daintily balancing a square palette by one corner between two finger tips, took a fine sable brush and as daintily began to tickle a piece of bad drawing into a "sweet expression," saying:

"A pleasant art, ours, isn't it, Jimmy?"

"Yes," was Whistler's response, "but what are you doing, Frank?"

"Oh," said the young artist, "I am painting a replica of a little thing some one liked because, you know, I can always sell two or three of the same subject, if it's a taking one."

"Ah!" commented Whistler, "you must be a genius, Frank, and I, alas, am like the simple minded hen who, when asked to do so, protested that she could not lay the same egg twice!"

A Grave Discussion.

The late Joseph Jefferson and his sister, Mrs. Cornelia Jackson, famous as Tilly Slowboy in "The Cricket on the Hearth," were standing at a studio window on Beacon street, Boston, overlooking the Old Granary burying ground. They had been discussing the famous persons whose graves were spread below them, when, breaking a short interval of silence, Jefferson said in the most mournful of tones, "Connie, my dear, that is the best place for me, after all."

With a horrified expression on her face, as her brother always avoided grewsome subjects, she asked, "What do you mean, Joe?"

With the twinkle in his eye that three generations of the world have known, the actor remarked blandly, "I said 'after all,' Connie."

In a flash his sister retorted, "No, Joe, dear, that's no place for you. There are too many deadheads there."—Boston Post.

What Hichens Heard.

While still a student of music Robert Hichens wrote many short stories, verses and songs. In one year, he says, he earned over $500 by writing scores and lyrics for music. One song, "A Kiss and Goodby," was sung by Mme. Patti in Albert hall, London.

"In the natural pride of my heart," Mr. Hichens said with reference to this occasion, "I took a seat in the stalls and waited in a fever of excitement to hear how it would go off. It was received with so much enthusiastic applause that I was lifted into a delicious heaven of delight, but was suddenly tumbled headlong by hearing two voices from the seats immediately behind me.

"'What a lovely song that was,' one exclaimed rapturously.

"'Yes,' the other grudgingly agreed, 'but what awful rot the words of these songs always are.'"—Exchange.

Cleaning an Ocean Liner.

Probably few people are aware that during the few hours a great ocean liner remains in dock she is cleaned thoroughly inside and out. The hull is repainted, the funnels scraped and cleaned and every piece of exposed metal polished. Meanwhile all carpets are taken up and beaten, the floors scrubbed and repainted and tables repolished, chairs regilded and stained, in every part of the ship. On the great boats there are more than 30,000 pieces of linen to be counted, sorted, prepared and laundered. Then there are 15,000 pieces of silverware, 25,000 pieces of glassware, some 60,000 dishes, plates, cups, saucers, etc. As soon as a piece shows signs of wear it is discarded and replaced, and all this work has to be done in a few hours.—Pearson's Weekly.

Vegetables and Character.

A Paris contemporary states that a well known doctor read a paper before a meeting of medical men on the influence of vegetables upon the character, the brain and the senses. According to the doctor, the potato develops an evenness of temper and calmness of thought. The carrot acts as a stimulant to the character and is recommended for biliousness and to peevish or jealous persons. Spinach develops ambitious dreams and energy. Sorrel, despite its acidity, induces sadness and provokes nightmare. All workers should eat white haricots.—London Globe.

A Thrifty Spouse.

A man whose illness threatened to develop into typhoid was taken to the hospital. Instead of growing worse he improved, and at the end of the fourth day, when his wife visited him, he asked to be taken home.

"But you have paid for a week," replied his thrifty spouse. "They won't refund the money. You had better stay your week out."—New York Herald.

Proving His Own Medicine.

"That man Biffers was neatly punished the other day."

"How was that?"

"Why, when he gets mad he always kicks something, and when he got mad the other day he kicked the revolving door and nearly knocked his head off."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hard Lines.

"In financial trouble? What is it?"

"Oh, I promised to pay Brown $10 today, and I've got it, and he knows I've got it, and he knows I know he knows I've got it!"—Puck.

Health.

Health is so necessary to all the duties as well as pleasures of life that the crime of squandering it is equal to the folly.—Johnson.

A Long Range Shooter.

A local young man who is going to spend part of the winter in the south and who expects to do some shooting while there went into a hardware store one day last week to buy a gun.

"I am going after big game," he told the salesman, "wildcats, deer and bear."

"Then you want a good gun," said the clerk, "and I have just the thing. Here's one that we will guarantee to kill a bear at three miles."

Taking the gun in his hands and turning it over and over in a gingerly manner, the young man stammered:

"B-b-but isn't three miles pretty close to get to a bear?"—Youngstown Telegram.

The Potomac Guards.

At a recent meeting of some Washington veterans a white haired old man referred laughingly to the Potomac guards and explained that when the war broke out a body of prospective soldiers, believing that they would never have to see real service in the field, formed themselves into an organization in what was then Georgetown and adopted the name "Potomac guards." Later, however, when the fighting got pretty hot, a great number of them faded into obscurity.

As the story ended another old war dog rose to his feet and gave this toast. "To the Potomac guards—invincible in peace, invisible in war."—Washington Star.

Hundreds of guests attended the reception and supper at the Woodman hall, and Ole reports having had the best time of his adventurous career.

CONTROL OF THOUGHT.

In the firm control of our thoughts lies the secret of the most wonderful possession of which we can boast—character. It is as much a matter of habit as of will, this being honorable, truthful, just. Having formed our principles of right living, conscience invariably points to a whole hearted loyalty to them. And when baser motives plead, why, here is just where your will power may profit by exercise.

Primitive Man and Exercise.

Exercise in primitive times was the price of life. It was only after we had learned to live by our wits and exercise became a luxury that it began to run into fads. If primitive man neglected his al fresco Delsartean exercises and let his muscles soften he simply provided a tender tidbit for some of his confreres, carnivore or cannibal. It was a case of eat or be eaten, and his motto was, "Do it first." The gorgeous possibilities of power through repose had not yet dawned on him. In those days man didn't exercise. He just "humped." He had to.—From "Exercise and Health," by Woods Hutchinson.

It Was Doing Duty.

An Irish soldier while on furlough lost his left eye; but, not wishing to leave the service, he got a glass one in its place before returning to his regiment. Being somewhat absentminded, however, he appeared on parade one day without it. "Pat," said the sergeant major, "you are improperly dressed. You have come on parade with only one eye." Pat was in no way nonplused, however. With characteristic Irish readiness he answered, "I left it in my quarters, sorr, to keep an eye on my kit."

St. Peter's In Rome.

In Rome fifteen architects succeeded one another in the construction of St. Peter's during the pontificates of twenty-eight popes and during a period of 176 years. According to the calculation of Carlo Fontana, the cost of the building, exclusive of the bronze used, was over $60,000,000. It takes $50,000 a year to keep the edifice in repair.

THE FOUNDATION of future financial independence is a growing Bank Account. Place your earning and watch it grow. We pay a liberal rate of interest on time deposits.

Why you should bank with HOLT STATE BANK:—

We can with pleasure assure you of the entire safety of your funds under our care. Our Cash is protected against any possible loss thru burglary or hold-up robbery by ample insurance and any loss thereby would be promptly replaced. We are organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota which now require two examinations yearly by the Examining Committee, four printed reports, two examinations yearly by a capable Bank Examiner. Also the bye-laws, require that the active officers be bonded and be personally responsible for all moneys or valuables left under their care which assures a straight and honest administration of its affairs. And further, our loans are so drawn that payment is assured at maturity either by the pledging of personal property or real estate, or by some responsible party of good financial standing acting as guarantor.

Our cash resources have increased $25,000.00 during the season 1911 and we want a like amount of increase during 1912. Affording our patrons absolute protection and safety and conducting our affairs in a business-like way are factors which lead to our success, and under these conditions we feel entitled to a generous share of your business during 1912.

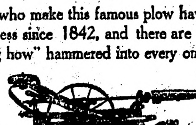
The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.



It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

DIPLOMATIC ROW WITH COLUMBIA

MINISTER FROM THAT COUNTRY SUGGESTED KNOX' VISIT IS "INOPPORTUNE."

ECHO OF PANAMA REVOLT

Criticises U. S. for Not Arbitrating Canal Zone Acquisition Differences. State Department Takes the Letter Insult.

Washington, Feb. 20.—A grave diplomatic situation between the United States and Colombia has been precipitated by the publication of a letter which Senor Pedro del Ospina, the Colombian minister, has written to Acting Secretary Huntington Wilson of the state department suggesting that it might be "inopportune" for Secretary Knox to visit Colombia during his projected tour of Central America.

The Colombian minister, first drawing attention to the fact that the views are his own and not officially those of his government, seriously criticises the United States for not submitting to arbitration the differences with Colombia growing out of this government's acquisition of the Panama canal zone.

Inasmuch as the letter admittedly is the personal expression of the minister, written without having communicated with his government, it was received at the state department in the nature of a personal insult to this government.

No action has been taken and no official would comment on it but the incident is known to have stirred officials of the United States to such an extent that the recall of the Colombian minister is expected as a matter of course.

At present, however, the United States is disposed to wait until Senor Ospina receives the instructions he has asked for. In diplomatic circles it was believed that Colombia, smarting under eight years of ineffectual attempts to secure arbitration of the canal zone differences, would confirm the unofficial views of her accredited representative.

Profound Sensation Expected.

A more profound sensation is looked for as it is believed that a termination of diplomatic relations between this country and Colombia is in prospect.

Acting Secretary Wilson had advised Senor Ospina of the probable itinerary of Secretary Knox. What is said to have particularly aroused the Colombian minister was a reference to the republic of Panama in the itinerary, a country the independence of which Colombia never has recognized.

Senor Ospina makes veiled reference to the long delay of the United States in answering several notes addressed to it, seeking arbitration, and charges that this government has discriminated against Colombia in failing to give to her arbitration which the United States is now offering to other members of the family of the nations.

A tentative itinerary of Secretary Knox makes provision for a stop at Cartagena, Colombia, on March 25.

Program Subject to Change.

The program for the cruise is tentative and subject to change at the direction of the secretary. As now arranged, the cruiser Washington with Secretary Knox, will leave Palm Beach on the afternoon of Feb. 22, arriving at Port Antonia, Jamacia, on the morning of Feb. 25. Here the Secretary Knox, will leave Palm across the island to Kingston, returning the same day to Port Antonio, sailing later for Colon, where the secretary is due on Feb. 27. The party will proceed by rail across the isthmus and returning again board the Washington, proceed to Port Limon, Costa Rica, on March 2, arriving the same day.

Here the secretary's party will leave the Washington and crossing to Punta Arenas, board the cruiser Maryland about March 5. They will visit ports on the west coast of Central America, later crossing Guatemala from San Jose to Puerto Barrios, where the Washington will be waiting for them.

The Washington will sail from Puerto Barrios about March 21.

Kauke suffered a concussion of the brain and internal injuries. Kauke and Miss Lowden were to have been married next Saturday.

TO PROBE WAR DEPARTMENT

INQUIRY IS OUTGROWTH OF DIFFERENCES IN ARMY CLIQUE.

Conduct of Affairs in Philippines and Porto Rico Is Also to Be Investigated.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Investigation of the war department as an outgrowth of the difference between the secretary of war and General Wood and former Adjutant General Ainsworth, which culminated in the latter's retirement after a threatened courtmartial, is now practically assured.

General Ainsworth was subpoenaed to appear before the house committee of expenditure in the war department. He was directed to produce papers of the department relating to the charges against Major B. Ray, but members of the committee, including Chairman Helm, admitted General Ainsworth would be asked about many other things and that the entire administration of the war department would be probed.

In addition to this phase of the inquiry, the house committee on military affairs, of which Representative Hay is chairman, will act on a resolution introduced by Representative Watkins of Louisiana, calling upon the secretary of war to produce all papers, correspondence and orders having any bearing on the letter of Secretary of War Stimson to General Ainsworth setting forth the charges of insulting language which led to his retirement.

In the expenditures committee, the inquiry is to extend into affairs of the war department affecting insular possessions.

Though Chairman Helm has not indicated how far the committee would go, it was reported that General Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs, would be summoned as a witness. Conduct of affairs in the Philippines and Porto Rico is a matter which the committee wishes to probe, and they believe that General Ainsworth can be of service in this matter.

YUAN TIRED OF HIS JOB

Ambition to Be President Is Soon Satisfied.

Shanghai, Feb. 20.—President Yuan Shi Kai telegraphed to Nankin, requesting Huang Shing, the war minister in the Republican cabinet, to dispatch troops to assist in quelling disturbances in Manchuria. President Yuan also telegraphed to Wu Ting Fang, the Republican minister of justice, and to Tang Shao Yi, his representative, urging them to endeavor to secure the re-election of former President Sun Yat Sen as president of the republic. His dispatch said:

"I am unable to control the involved situation in China as I am suffering from impaired health. Now that the aims of the republicans have been attained, I have accomplished my duty. The post of president of the republic would only serve to lead to my ruin. I ask your kind offices and interest with the people of the country to reelect former President Sun Yat Sen, to whom credit should be given. I will wait here until I am relieved. Then I will return to my home and resume my work as a husbandman."

Georgia Bank Safe Robbed.

Atlanta, Feb. 20.—Robbers blew open and rifled the safe of the Austel bank at Austel, Ga., and escaped with booty of about $2,500.

Count's Body Lies in State.

Vienna, Feb. 20.—The body of the late Count von Aehrenthal, Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, lay in state in the great hall of the foreign ministry. The funeral will be held on Thursday by the emperor's order, and will be made the occasion for elabbrate ceremonies. Countess von Aehrenthal has received an autograph letter of condolence from Emperor Francis Joseph and telegrams from the German emperor and many other notable personages throughout the world.

DICTOGRAPH A DETECTIVE

APPARATUS FOUND IN OFFICE OF BRIDGE AND STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS.

ON J. McNAMARA'S DESK

Federal Stenographers on Floor Below Noted Down Everything Said in the Office—Indicted Officials Amazed.

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—The government has learned through a phonographic device whatever Frank M. Ryan and other indicted union officials have said in their office about the dynamite conspiracy since last October. The device was discovered in the headquarters of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

The instrument hidden under a drawer in a desk about which Ryan, the president; Herbert S. Hockin, the secretary-treasurer, and John T. Butler, first vice president, and other officials conferred concerning their defense and pleas, is said to have enabled two government stenographers in a room below to take daily reports of the conversation.

The use of this apparatus was disclosed when the government decided it was no longer of value, because a woman clerk in Ryan's office has been heard to say, "Well, I suppose they are hearing now whatever we say." That, with statements by Ryan, convinced Clarence Nicholas, assistant district attorney, that the device was no longer useful.

The instrument had been hidden in the desk once used by J. J. McNamara, the dynamiter, upon which he arranged his alarm clock scheme for regulating the time at which bombs were to be set off.

The discovery of the apparatus followed soon after the government had received intimations that some of the defendants were ready "to tell all they knew." About the office of Charles W. Miller, district attorney, it was said "something had been expected," but Mr. Miller declined to say what it was.

Mr. Miller said the device had worked satisfactorily for months and many volumes of stenographic notes had been taken and would be used at the trials.

Ryan was told there was a phonographic device in his office. He consented to have his informant search the office.

A quick examination of Ryan's desk exposed the annunciator of the apparatus, hanging by its wires against the back wall of the desk directly beneath the top. Disconnected, the annunciator was shown to Ryan and then carried away.

How It Was Done.

The wires from the annunciator ran from the back of Ryan's desk through the floor and into a room below rented by the government. Here sat every day two stenographers under the direction of Rowland Evans, official stenographer of the federal court, with the receiving apparatus at their ears. The stenographers worked in relays except at such times when it was desired to take a double record for corroboration.

The arrest of J. W. Irwin in Chicago puts the government into possession of all but two of the 54 men indicted. The defendants who had not been apprehended are John J. McCray, formerly an ironworker at Wheeling, W. Va., and Patrick Ryan, formerly a business agent in Chicago.

Irwin is named in his indictment as having been recording secretary and treasurer of a local union at Peoria, Ill., in 1908 and 1909. McManigal confessed he blew up several places in and near Peoria after that time. One of these was an explosion in September, 1910, when six buildings were damaged and a night watchman was injured.

MOTHER LOVE KILLS BABE

Smothers Child With Hugs While Sympathizing With Relative.

Columbus, O., Feb. 20.—In an agony of sympathizing grief for her relative, Mrs. John T. Smith, whose little son had been drowned and his body just recovered from the Scioto river, Mrs. Clinton Law clasped her own infant child so tightly that it was smothered to death. Following the recovery of the body of their son, John T. Smith and his wife were reunited after an estrangement of two years.

Pedro W. Ospina, minister from the United States of Columbia, has created a big stir in Washington diplomatic circles by notifying the state department that Secretary Knox will not find Columbia "at home" when he makes his proposed call March 25, at Cartagena. He says Columbia is still dissatisfied with the part the United States played in the "revolution" which occurred in Panama during the second Roosevelt administration.

CHICAGO GIRL WEDS JAIL BIRD

COMING EAST AS BRIDE OF DR. MILTON ABRAHAMS.

Husband Well Known as Bigamist, Burglar, Forger and Possibly Slayer.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Believing herself to be the bride of "Dr. Milton Abrahams," millionaire physician of Oakland, Cal., Anna Milbrath has gayly announced by telegraph that she and her husband are on their way to visit her old friends in South Chicago, her former home. Her announcements have created a furore in South Chicago social circles. Functions are being arranged for the entertainment of the couple on their arrival.

"Dr. Abrahams" is the notorious jail bird, "Sir" Henry Westwood Cooper. He has served penitentiary terms for burglary, forgery and fraud, and has been arrested for bigamy, counterfeiting, cashing worthless drafts and other swindling operations. After graduating from San Quentin prison he engaged in financial transactions that resulted in his being sent back for a post-graduate course. He is known to have married several women. He says seven. The police of San Francisco are hunting for him in the belief that he murdered Mrs. Belva Strawbridge Chadwick, wife No. 6, to create a vacancy for Miss Milbrath.

Anna Milbrath possesses rare beauty and the news of her marriage was a shock to many impressionable youths in South Chicago.

Anna Milbrath was born in South Chicago. Three years ago her father, Herman Milbrath, moved to California, and a few weeks later Anna followed him.

Cooper, whose latest matrimonial ventures had been made under the name of Chadwick, was in San Quentin prison. Sept. 1, 1911, he was paroled and returned to "Mrs. Chadwick." He opened an office in Oakland under the name of "Dr. Milton Abrahams." He met Miss Milbrath and wooed and won her. After borrowing $1,000 from her parents a week ago, Cooper married Miss Milbrath. If Dr. Abrahams and his bride visit Chicago her friends in that city will see an interesting character.

Even under the eyes of the guards in the penitentiary, where he was a prisoner, Cooper succeeded in marrying two women. In 1893, he was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment in New South Wales for fraud. In January, 1897, he occupied the pulpit in the Toronto Presbyterian church. In August, 1897, he was arrested at the Langham hotel as a forger and counterfeiter. In June, 1898, he was sentenced to three years in San Quentin prison for forgery. Here he incited a conspiracy to kill the warden and make a jail delivery. When the plan had matured he notified the warden, claiming that the conspirators had asked him to join them. Spies were set and the plotters were trapped. Cooper almost succeeded in obtaining a pardon for his supposed loyalty to the warden. In October, 1901, he was sentenced to 10 years in San Quentin for forgery of a telegram from the British consul. In 1905 he twice forged the signature of Gov. Troutt to orders for his release.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business.

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued.)

The other vessel was entering the mouth of the channel, at the moment that Coast put the helm over and brought the Echo's green starboard eye into view. A mile or so lay between them. Appleyard lifted the hatch and opened the throttle full, before setting out the port light.

A shower of spray swept over the Echo's counter as she bucked the tide.

"That's the stuff," said the little man. "Now they're wondering what particular variety of darn fools we are. Hold her as she stands—steady."

Two throaty blasts from an automatic whistle floated down the wind.

"What'd I tell you?" chuckled Appleyard. "She's slowed down already," he announced, although Coast was unable to discern any change in the speed of the nearing craft. "It hurts to do this." The little man jerked the whistle lever and educed a single, prolonged, derisive blast. "Lord! they must be cussin' a blue streak!"

By this time the Echo had worked well up into the channel, the other vessel being about midway through. To a second signal, a solitary blast, Appleyard replied with two, in utter defiance of every rule and regulation for the prevention of collisions at sea. A husky shout of wrath answered this manifestation of landlubberly foolishness. Appleyard responded with three short barks of the whistle, the same signifying what was obviously untrue—that he had reversed his engine and was running full-speed astern; for at the same moment, in obedience to his low-toned command—"Sta'board, starboard your helm!"—Coast again put the wheel over and the Echo swung smartly on her heel, showing her port light and making as if to cut across the other's bows at a moment when they were but a few lengths apart.

There was an instant of suspense as the boats drew swiftly together. Coast held his breath and prepared to jump should the threatened happen; it seemed certain that the sharp stem of the motor cruiser would crash into the catboat's side. Even Appleyard lost something of his customary aplomb and betrayed the strain upon his nerves.

"Sit tight—sit tight!" he whispered between his closed teeth. "Don't give an inch—they've got to—they don't dare—ah-h!"

The last was a sigh of relief as the cruiser swerved sharply in toward Pasque, shot forward a couple of lengths and brought up suddenly with a churning screw—hard and fast aground.

A moment later the Echo rounded gracefully to port within two yards of her stern; and simultaneously Appleyard, leaning far out over the combing, made an exceedingly cunning cast with a coil of line which Coast had laid in against the possibility of a broken halyard. The flying loops settled accurately into the water, just above the foam kicked up by the cruiser's propeller, and in another instant its motor stopped with a strangulated gasp.

Out of the cloud of profanity that smoked up from the cruiser's cockpit flew first one heavy spanner, then another. Both splashed heavily alongside the Echo. Not until they had drawn well out of range did Coast and Appleyard rise from the shelter of the combings.

"So far, splendid," commented Appleyard soberly, staring astern. "I reckon that, between the furrow they ploughed in that shoal and several yards of good hempen rope gumming up the shaft and screw, they'll bide where they are a wee. Till the storm blows over any way. It ought to take a good diver or a marine railway to free that shaft. . . . Now, if you'll give me the wheel, we'll go about and get ready for business. That was child's play, alongside of what's to come. Get the sail up, please."

For a space thereafter Coast had his hands full; the Echo was swinging out of the channel, past the hollow, despondent clanging bell, and the wind had found her with a swoop of fury and a wolfish howl. By the time he had trimmed the main-sheet the catboat was sweeping onward at a rate little short of incredible.

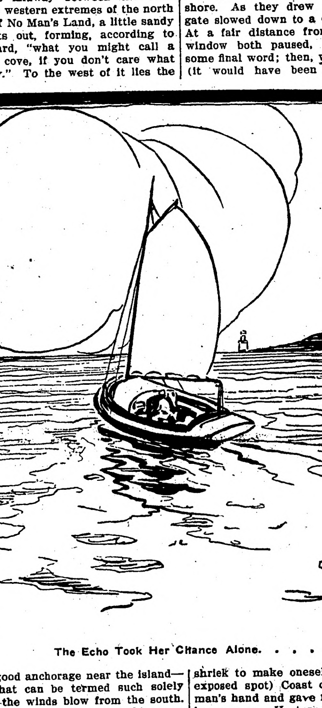
Steadily the guiding 'longshore lights swung round them, marking their progress: to starboard Cuttyhunk shining steadfast as a low-hung star, to port Gay Head lifting up its lofty beacon, astern, low down, a glimmer, frequently lost—Nobska. No nearer lights were there to bewilder; wise coastwise mariners hugged snug harbors on such a night as that; the Echo took her chance alone. . . .

Touching Coast's arm, Appleyard drew his attention to a tiny glint of light in the south, where No Man's Land beckoned them from afar, across a weary waste of broken waters.

Coast nodded, with a set, grave face, knowing that his hour drew nigh.

CHAPTER XIII.

About midway between the eastern and western extremes of the north shore of No Man's Land, a little sandy spit juts out, forming, according to Appleyard, "what you might call a sort of cove, if you don't care what you say." To the west of it lies the only good anchorage near the island—one that can be termed such solely when the winds blow from the south.



The Echo Took Her Chance Alone. . . .

Into the poor shelter of this courtesy harbor, under the pilotage of Appleyard (who asserted that he found his way half by guess work and half by sense of smell) the Echo fought her way and as her anchor bit into the bottom and her cable tautened brought up staggering, like a spent runner at the close of a long race.

Only seamanship of a sort not inaptly to be called superb (but not less so than the courage exhibited by both men) eked out by Appleyard's intimate acquaintance with the waters thereabouts, could have brought the Echo through in safety.

Coast took ashore with him a new sense of respect and admiration for his companion. What emotions, if any, Appleyard entertained, remained inscrutable.

Driving the boat through a quartering run of surf, they made an uncomfortable though not dangerous landing on the west side of the sand spit, drew the dory far up and set off, side by side, wet and weary, for the Cold Lairs—as they had christened, by common consent, the abandoned fishing village.

They stumbled up to and through its empty street, a little wondering, a little apprehensive, more than a little alert and inclined to seek the touch of each other's shoulders. They were, in the good old phrase, taking their lives in their hands in this phase of their adventure; and the sense of this clutched at their hearts with fingers of ice. That they would be recognized (save Coast by Katherine) as the men who had been on the island in the fog seemed little likely; so far as they knew neither had been seen but by the Chinaman whom Appleyard had stunned; and it was improbable that he had caught clear sight of either. There remained, however, a hundred masked dangers growing out of Blackstock's certain distrust and misgivings, with a far-fetched possibility that the men stranded on the shoals off Pasque would find some means of escape and communicate with Blackstock by wireless from the mainland. It was not more than an improbable possibility, but none the less it held its meed of danger and they might

UNCLE SAM'S SMOKELESS POWDER

FIRING A 12 INCH GUN AT FORT WADSWORTH

THE tendency of modern warfare has been toward the adoption of those instruments which accomplish its purpose with as little risk to the users as possible. This is exemplified somewhat in the use of smokeless powder, the manufacture of which is attended with much less danger, and its transfer from place to place results in fewer accidents as compared with the production of gunpowder. It can be handled with perfect safety and even set on fire in the open air without causing an explosion or occasioning the least anxiety.

At Indian Head, which is also the navy proving ground, there is a plant for the manufacture of this powder which is owned and operated by the United States government and the entire output of the factory, which last year amounted to over a million and a half pounds, is used by our navy. Should occasion ever require, the powder will also be used at Uncle Sam's many big fortifications, the accompanying illustration, showing a portion of one, Fort Wadsworth, near New York city.

About 25 buildings are used in the process of its manufacture. They are situated in that portion of the government reservation farther from the river and scattered over a large area, being about 400 feet apart. Explosions will sometimes occur no matter how great the precautions used, for the materials which go to make up the manufacture of powder are necessarily combustible, so the wisdom of this provision on the part of the government may be understood, for if one building should accidentally be blown up the others would not suffer thereby. The greatest secrecy is maintained as to some parts of the chemical process, and few of the three or four hundred men employed really know the entire combination of the chemical ingredients used in the smokeless powder making. The efforts of the powder board and the directors of the powder factory are constantly directed toward the improvement of the quality of the output, and recently two special points have been aimed at: First, to insure the chemical stability of the powder for as long a period as possible; second, to secure a degree of uniformity which will insure what is called "ballastic stability" of the powder—that is to say, a permanence of velocities and pressure throughout prolonged periods under varying conditions of temperature, moisture, etc. In short, to have the powder work as well in any part of the world as it does on the proving grounds.

There is a big laboratory attached to the factory standing some distance away from the other buildings, and here at least a dozen expert chemists are always at work and through their experiments a new stabilizer has been recently introduced into the powder-making formula, and from the reports of the officers of our battleships in various parts of the world the results have been most satisfactory. The whole powder making plant is wonderfully interesting even to a layman. Few people, however, are permitted to see its workings, for powder making, like gun testing, is conducted away from the public gaze.

Smoking is not permitted on the grounds, and so carefully do the authorities guard against accidents that the workmen are not even permitted to carry matches. All the buildings are well ventilated, as the fumes of the chemicals used are apt to bring on heart trouble. Chimneys are arranged to carry off the poisonous gases, consequently there is little illness among the men. There are facilities for a rapid output in case of necessity—a matter which would be of vital importance in time of war. There is also a reserve supply which is constantly on the increase as our navy grows larger.

The cotton used is shipped to Indian Head in large bales and stored in a building erected for that purpose. It is purchased in large quantities and must be of a special grade. The second stage of the work begins when the cotton goes to the picking room. Here colored men open up the bales and pick the fibers apart. After the fibers are separated the cotton is ready for the drying room, where it is kept for 24 hours. The temperature of the drying room is 212 degrees during the entire time and the workmen can only remain a few minutes at a time. After this process the cotton is taken into the nitration building, where nitric acid and sulphuric acid are added. The mixture is whirled around in huge tub-like machines covered with a hood and a steam jet to carry off the acid fumes. When this is completed the cotton is washed in fresh water and dried by a wringer, and unless this work is very thorough there is risk of spontaneous decomposition. It is now gun-cotton and is placed in cars and pushed to the boiling vats where is undergoes another state of purification. The pulper, a machine very much like the one used in papermaking, next comes into play. Here the gun-cotton is chopped up by knives so as to give the fibers a thorough cleansing. From here it goes to the poaching house, which consists of a series or large tubs in which the pyrocellus, as the material is now called, goes through a further cleaning process of hot and cold washings. It is then dried by a wringer similar to a printing machine and sent to the press house, where the water is squeezed out under great pressure. After a few minutes in the machine the mixture comes out resembling a huge white cheese. It is weighed and sent to the mixing house, where there are instruments such as are used in making bread by machinery and which are known as kneading machines. The pyrocellus is here mixed with a solvent, the name of which the government prefers to keep a secret. The resultant material is a thick, yellow gelatinous mass resembling taffy. The stage of smokeless powder has now been reached and the mixture is once more put through a machine by hydraulic pressure. It is then wrapped around reels and dried by steam so as to evaporate the solvent. It is pressed into the proper grain suitable to the different calibers of guns and at this stage it bears a striking resemblance to hoarhound candy, as it is identical with that both in shape and color. Then comes the cutting into proper lengths, and this is done by hand and the use of a sharp instrument very much like a meat chopper. Two men do this work and they are especially careful to get the powder the exact length. The cut powder is carried to another table, where a man goes over each piece and the defective pieces are thrown out. The inspector is particular that only perfect powder is sent out. Recently a plant has been erected to work over this defective powder, and so successful has this process been that the powder which a few years ago would have been a total loss, is now remade in such a manner as to be the equal of the best of the new product.

The next step in the process is drying and the green powder is sent to the drying house in covered cans, being wheeled there on trucks pushed along the tracks which are laid between the buildings. A colored man furnishes the motive power. The drying house is a veritable mountain of explosives, for great stacks of powder are piled up everywhere. It must be protected even from the rays of the sun and the windows are covered with canvas. Here it is branded and prepared for shipment. The actual testing of the powder takes place when it is used to fire the big guns down in the valley on the proving grounds.

Profound Linguist.

There had been a fatal accident at the railroad crossing in a little Pennsylvania town, says the Philadelphia Record, and the coroner, a pompous old fellow, who magnified conscientiously both his office and its incumbent, had impaneled a jury for the inquest.

There was only one witness of the accident, an illiterate Slav from the coal mines who could understand no English. With him the coroner began to struggle.

"Can you speak German?" he asked. The man shook his head.

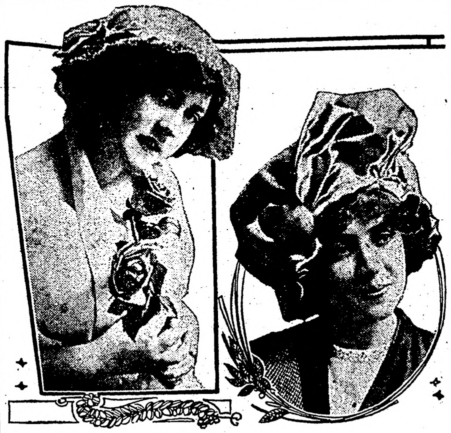
"Can you speak Italian?" continued the official. Again the man shook his head.

"Can you speak Hungarian?" The same response.

"Can you speak Russian?" finally asked the coroner. Again the man shook his head.

"It's no use, gentleman," said the coroner, turning to the jury. "We can't proceed with the case. I've spoken to this man in five different languages, and can't make him understand me."

Designs in Soft Caps



TO the astonishment of some of us and the delight of all, American women are developing a liking for soft caps, most of them for indoor wear. The day now begins with the breakfast cap of sheer silk, over-draped with net or lace and trimmed with ribbons and little flowers, and ends with the theater cap of cloth-of-gold or silver, jeweled and feathered. There are all sorts of gradations in material and design.

For the street, made caps of beaver-cloth, velvet satin, plush, many of them fur-trimmed, are fascinating from the standpoint of becomingness and most comfortable for winter wear. At present, at least four caps are required for wear during each 24 hours. The fresh, dainty breakfast cap, the cap for out-of-doors, the sparkling evening cap and the simple and useful sleeping cap. Besides these, there are sweeping caps, plain and easily laundered, which are necessities and not luxuries, and occasion comes for their use.

Most breakfast or morning caps are made with a coft crown of liberty silk over which is draped either net or lace, and a ruffle of lace which makes the frill about the face and neck. All the support such a cap needs is a circle of fine shirring or ribbon wire. The crown is a plaque of silk, overlaid with lace, cut in a circle 18 inches in diameter. This is gathered about the edge and sewed to the wire, or laid in a narrow hem, through which the wire is thrust. The frill of lace is sewed to the wire and the cap finished with a collar and bows of ribbon. Sometimes the frill is turned back across the front, hanging over the ears and neck. Again, the frill at the front is omitted, and the cap finished with a flat band of ribbon extending across the forehead to the ears. Narrow ribbons from No. 1½ to No. 5 are used in rosettes and finished with long hanging loops.

Not all the caps have full crowns, although all (so far) are soft. A straight length of goods is gathered at each end, edged with lace and adjusted flat to the hair. The lace is often wired with a very fine silk-covered wire, which holds it out about the face. Such a cap is shown in the picture given here. Such simple headwear is easily made at home and never was anything more worth while. The dainty caps for morning wear, with gay ribbons and little flowers, are alluring and pretty enough to create cheerfulness, even if one wakes with a "morning after" sensation. They cover the hair completely, so that it need not be dressed before breakfast. With a pretty morning jacket and cap, the day is well begun.

Nearly all caps for evening are made of gold or silver net and lace with or without a silk lining. Pearls and mock jewels, little hand-made roses and specially designed feathers are used, with ribbon in their decoration. They are exquisite examples of headwear, wonderfully becoming to their wearers and in no one's way. Oriental turbans of white tulle, apparently wound about the head, are decorated at the front with a small upstanding cochade and jeweled cabochon. All in pure white and finished with sparkling rhinestones they are the most impressive of the innumerable soft caps which are made for evening wear.

Sweeping caps are made of mull or of printed handkerchiefs and are gathered about the head with a drawing string, so that they are easily flattened out for laundering. Night caps are simple, but of sheer mull and lingerie laces. The hair is improved by keeping it covered with such light head coverings. But it is not the practical side of these soft caps which makes the strongest appeal to women. It is their prettiness and becomingness. They are utterly feminine.

EXERCISE ADDS TO CHARM

Thing for Women to Keep in Mind is the Necessity for Proper Selection.

It is curious to find that, with all the modern athleticism of girls and their fervid devotion to outdoor sports, they still cannot compete (except at tennis) with the more stolid and muscular male.

At dancing, to be sure, which is nowadays a high form of athleticism, the premiere danseuse not only competes with but outvies the particular youth with whom she gyrates and bounds, but dancing, after all, is more an affair of long practice than of actual muscular strength. The most exquisite dancer of the present time declares that athletics need not make women ungraceful, as so many people fear they do. She protests that the more she dances the more graceful she can make herself, which is easy to believe.

All her movements, however, are on strictly esthetic lines, which tend to make the body supple and beautiful.

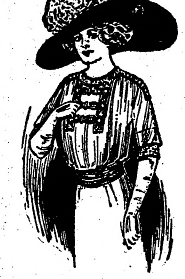
The danger to feminine attractions lies in games like hockey and golf, in which the most odd postures must be assumed in order to succeed at all. On a horse a woman can look perfectly graceful and yet perform much the same deeds of prowess as a man.

The prudent girl should choose carefully the kind of exercise which will not rob her of her feminine charm, though it is probable that the woman of the future will be built on robust lines, and that the young man of her period will not fail to find her adorable.

Hat Ornaments.

One of the practical and universally becoming trimmings being put on to straw hats for the south are the wing, plume or aigrettelike ornaments made of shadow lace, tulle or other gauze. While these hat trimmings are usually simple in number, a single ornament such as the ones mentioned being as much as is needed, the size of the ornaments is often very large. These made feather arrangements admit of a great variety of shapes and effects.

PRETTY THEATER WAIST.



This attractive waist is of light green marquisette of chiffon cloth with kimono sleeves. It is trimmed with bands of ecru lace or embroidery and ornamented in front with olives and cord to match this embroidery.

The under sleeves or cuffs are of white lace.

Gilding Laces.

One clever woman who appreciates artistic touches on her gowns and hats discovered while gilding little fancy things for Christmas that laces are made very beautiful by applying to them a coat of gilt paint.

She experimented at first with old bits of lace, and found the result so satisfactory that some yards of coarse imitation Irish lace were gilded and used as trimming on an evening gown.

To do gilding, lay the lace perfectly flat over a clean piece of blotting paper and apply the guilt with a brush.

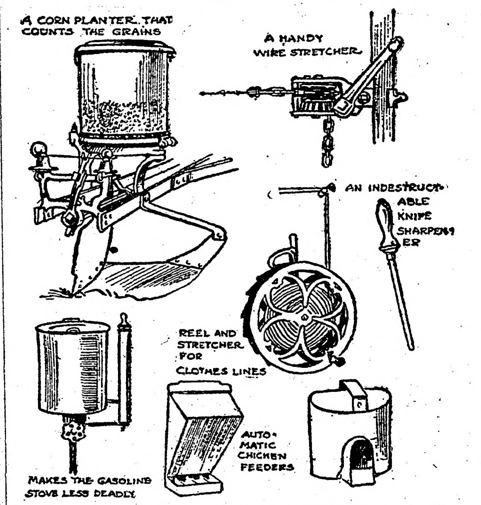
Let one side dry, turn and repeat the process on the other side.

If necessary, apply two coats of paint.

Silver and copper can be applied in the same way. Lace treated thus is lovely for all sorts of fancy work, besides trimming for gowns and hats.

GASOLINE ENGINES REPLACE FARM HORSES EXTENSIVELY

Liquid Diet of Machine Costs Less Than Oats and Corn for Animals and They are More Versatile—Becoming Most Important Factor in Successful Agriculture of Today.



A CORN PLANTER THAT COUNTS THE GRAINS
A HANDY WIRE STRETCHER
AN INDESTRUCTABLE KNIFE SHARPENER
REEL AND STRETCHER FOR CLOTHES LINES
AUTOMATIC CHICKEN FEEDERS
MAKES THE GASOLINE STOVE LESS DEADLY

Trouble Savers on the Farm and in the Home.

While the motor car is taking the place of the horse in the cities the gasoline engine is accomplishing much the same result in the country. Machine power comes very near being the most important factor in successful, scientific agriculture today, and while motor or steam hauling has been generally adopted only by large planters, practically every modern farmer uses the gasoline engine for driving machinery and doing the bulk of the heavy drudgery on the farm.

That machine power rapidly is taking the place of horse or mule power is shown by the fact that almost all the implements shown by manufacturers and wholesalers at a convention of implement dealers in Kansas City were equipped with attachments for operating them by engine power. That is true particularly of the heavier farm machinery, some of which now is so ponderous that it scarcely could be moved by the number of horses that conveniently could be hitched to it.

The points that recommend the gasoline engine to the farmer are its wide utility and the fact that its diet of gasoline is less costly than the draught animal's diet of corn, oats and hay. Since the farmer has come to accept the engine as a farm implement and to understand its operation, he has applied its power in many ingenious ways probably never dreamed of by the manufacturers in the first instance. It is those adaptations that have effected the greater part of the changes to power equipment for farm implements.

The gasoline engine has been a blessing particularly to the farmer's wife, who has been relieved of much of the heavy work of housekeeping in the country by the application of the force in performing the drudgery of the kitchen, the laundry and the dairy. It is a very inconsiderate farm husband who today does not lend the use of the gasoline engine to operate pumps, washing machines, churns, cream separators, sausage grinders and even sewing machines and knife sharpeners. And the farm wife relieved of such work is better off than many of her city sisters.

In farming operations the gasoline engine has done much to promote the adoption of more careful and scientific methods of crop growing. By the application of its power and speed to the operation of hulling, cleaning and seed grading machines it has relieved the planter of practically all of the laborious and time consuming task of selecting carefully his seed grain, one of the main essentials of increased crop yields.

In all farm implement displays nowadays the gasoline engine is the most conspicuous and most numerously represented.

LIVE STOCK IN COLD WEATHER

Animals Must be Fed and Watered Regularly and Daily Wants Supplied—Need Some Exercise.

To keep the stock in good, thrifty condition they must be fed and watered at regular hours and be given regular exercise. Their daily wants must be supplied, and these vary somewhat, according to the weather. It is here that the intelligence, promptness and experience of the farmer come into play. Where there is much stock to attend to and only two persons to do the work, it is important to know what to do first. This will vary according to circumstances. In our own case, commencing at 5 o'clock in the morning, the cows and horses are first fed, says a writer in the Baltimore American. While the cows are eating their mixed feed the stables are cleaned, the udders washed and wiped dry and then milked. The milk is strained into coolers and as soon as full carried to the stone dairy and set in a tank of running water. Then breakfast.

The first thing after breakfast, or about sunrise, is to send off the milk to the railroad station. In winter the night's and morning's milk is sent once a day; in summer the milk is shipped morning and evening.

After the milk is sent off the farmer or his help gives the cows a feed of long mixed hay. The cows are then corded and brushed down, and as soon as the hay is eaten the cows are turned out for exercise and to drink. The horses are then curried and watered and the stables cleaned. The pigs are given warm mill-feed slop, and the hens get a little mixed grain which is scattered through the cut straw of the feeding pen.

The hay and grain for the milk cows in cold weather are thrown into a large feedbox which is fastened to low iron whels which run on an iron track. After the feed is mixed it is covered over with canvas to cook. By mixing with boiling water several hours in advance the hay and fodder is softened and has a pleasant smell and of good flavor, and every particle is eaten with avidity.

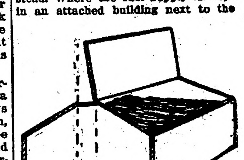
Give sows and pigs warm millfeed and bran slop, a few sliced carrots to the horses, grated turnips to the ewes and lambs and pulped mangels to the milk cows. The morning's rations should always be prepared the evening before.

All the feeding and most of the cleaning of the stables should be done before breakfast, and this can be readily done provided everything is ready to your hand.

WOOD BOX IS LABOR SAVING

Excellent Plan To Avoid Bother and Resulting Muss by Carrying Fuel Into Kitchen.

The bother and resulting muss of carrying wood, coal or similar fuel into the kitchen to fill the wood box, may be avoided by constructing the box with one-half its size built in the kitchen and the other half to project through the partition, as indicated by dotted lines in drawing, upon the wood-shed side, says the Homestead. Where the fuel supply is kept in an attached building next to the kitchen, as is usual, this is easily possible, and to fill the box you have only to raise the cover on the shed side of box and pile the fuel into same. In using, the housewife removes it from the kitchen side of box as shown in drawing. This has also the advantage of taking up less space in the kitchen as well as being handy and saving litter and muss.

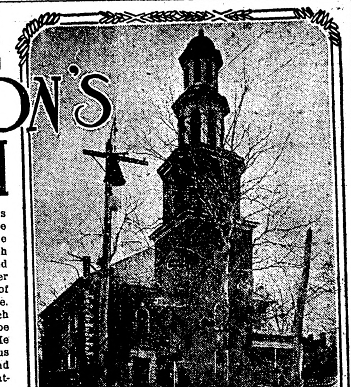


A Labor-Saving Wood Box.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S CHURCH

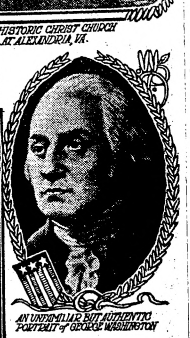
THE first president of the United States was a church-goer in the true sense of the word. There have been public men in the history of the nation who went to church far more regularly after they were elected to high official positions—or at least after they were nominated for such places of distinction—than they ever did before. However, it would seem that no such fluctuation in church devotion can be charged against George Washington. He was naturally and instinctively a religious man and he made every effort to attend divine worship every Sunday, no matter where he might happen to be. This was the case even in the trying days of the War for Independence.

However, Washington was enabled to be most regular in attendance at church when in his home state of Virginia. And yet, even in the Old Dominion, church-going required much more of an effort on his part than is exacted of the average public man today. Washington made his home, as is well known, on the vast estate known as Mount Vernon, and there was no church on the estate or in the immediate vicinity. Attendance at divine worship involved, therefore, a journey of greater or less length by coach, and this was not always pleasant, as any person may readily surmise who has had experience with the "red mud" of old Virginia in the winter or following heavy rains. That he was as persistent as he was in church-going under such circumstances casts an interesting sidelight upon the character of Washington.



HISTORIC CHRIST CHURCH AT ALEXANDRIA, VA.

THE OLD GRAVEYARD SURROUNDING "GEORGE WASHINGTON'S CHURCH"



AN UNFAMILIAR BUT AUTHENTIC PORTRAIT of GEORGE WASHINGTON

George Washington attended, from time to time, various churches located within driving distance of his home at Mount Vernon, but the place of worship to which he most frequently repaired was and is located in the town of Alexandria—for, be it explained, the historic edifice stands to this day in a perfect state of preservation. This structure, Christ church, to give it its proper title, has for more than a century been known as "George Washington's church," not only because he attended its services more regularly than those at any other church, but because he was a member and a pew-holder at this church.

It was, indeed, while Washington was a member that the congregation in the year 1767 built the stately house of worship which has not only defied all the ravages of time but is in regular use to this day and has been, even within very recent years, the scene of many interesting religious ceremonies. Something of George Washington's interest in the new church may be surmised from the fact that when it came to assigning pews in the new edifice he outbid all other members in the competition to win first choice of location and subscribed the record-breaking price of nearly $180 for the pew upon which his fancy had fallen and which he regularly occupied on almost every Sunday thereafter. This pew is marked with a silver plate bearing a fac-simile of Washington's autograph, and it is interesting to note that just across the aisle is the pew long held by the Lees of Virginia and which was occupied prior to the Civil war by Gen. Robert E. Lee, the military leader of the Confederacy.

The pew which George Washington bespoke when Christ church was first opened and for which he agreed to pay a yearly rental of five pounds sterling (equivalent to nearly $25) in addition to the thirty-six pounds, ten shillings which he subscribed for it at the outset is now reserved for the use of strangers, and this is a much appreciated courtesy on the part of the present congregation, for, of course, every stranger who visits Alexandria longs to sit in the great square pew which was once occupied by "His Excellency, the General," and to gaze up at the high pulpit from exactly the viewpoint of the Father of His Country in the days when he was the most conspicuous participant in the church services.

George Washington's pew in the old church remains to this day exactly as it was when he occupied it each Sunday morning, and this preservation is a matter of congratulation inasmuch as all the other pews in the church were somewhat changed in style in the year 1860. The Washington pew is in reality a double pew, or two pews, bearing the numbers 59 and 60. This pew, which is located on the left side of the church, has two seats, one facing the other, and there is a third cross seat against the wall, so that there was supposedly ample room for the Washington family and the relatives or house guests who so often accompanied the distinguished Virginian to church. In the vestry room of the church may be seen the original official record of Washington's purchase of his pew upon the completion of the church, which, by the way, had been under construction for several years.

And, speaking of the vestry room, it may be of interest to explain that George Washington was himself a vestryman of Christ church. Indeed, the young landed proprietor, then but 33 years of age, was among the first vestrymen chosen when Fairfax parish, to which the town of Alexandria belongs, was created about the year 1765. It was a couple of years later that the congregation decided to build a church and the edifice was not finished to the last detail until a few years before the firing of "the shot heard round the world." From that day to this the exterior of the church has undergone practically no alteration. At one time some alterations were made in the interior, but later this was wisely decided to have been a mistake and the church was restored to the style of Colonial days. Some of the original fittings, notably the sounding board and the wine-glass pulpit, had disappeared in the course of the transition, but these were replaced by fac-similes of the originals.

Many of the most interesting objects in Christ church are the genuine originals which were here in Washington's time. For instance, there is the elaborate crystal chandelier of solid brass with its twelve candlesticks typifying the twelve Apostles. Nor, indeed, is this the only reminder of the days when the church was lighted by candles, for on the pillars one may yet detect under the paint the marks of the tinder boxes. The chancel rail and mural tablets of the Lord's Prayer and the Apostles' Creed, which always arrest the attention of visitors, are relics of the days when George Washington was a leading member of the congregation, and so likewise are the communion table, reading desk and chairs. After all, however, perhaps the most curious of these mementoes of a by-gone age are the long-handled purses which were used in Washington's time to receive the offerings of the congregation.

The baptismal font, which is much admired, is not a relic of the Washington period, although it was put in place nearly a century ago. However, the Alexandria church boasts the possession of its first Bible and church service, the Bible having been printed in Edinburgh in the year 1767. Of the latter-day contributions to the contents of the historic edifice there may be mentioned the silver plate bearing a representation of the autograph signature of Robert E. Lee and the twin mural tablets set in place in 1870 which are inscribed in memory of George Washington and Robert Edward Lee. These various objects are of sufficient interest to attract a continual stream of visitors to the old church, and while (unlike historic churches abroad) the edifice is not officially open on week days, the sexton can usually be found on the premises and will obligingly open the doors on request and without demanding the inevitable "tip" which is besought by caretakers of similar institutions abroad.

Quite as interesting as old Christ church itself or any of its historic contents is the graveyard which well nigh surrounds the edifice and is enclosed by a quaint wall and fence. Here are buried many of the close personal friends and neighbors of General Washington—men and women whose names are well known to history—and the inscriptions on the ancient tombstones seem decidedly odd in the eyes of modern visitors. Christ church is not located in the most frequented section of the ancient town of Alexandria, but its lofty spire, or rather tower, renders it easy for the stranger to identify and find his way to the time-honored brick edifice and on Washington's Birthday anniversary he has, indeed, but to "follow the crowd."

Blamed for an Earthquake

Amusing Instance of Efforts to Stop Terrestrial Commotion Comes From Mexico.

While an earthquake is a phenomenon of a nature not likely to be treated with discrespect, still less with indignity, an Englishman nevertheless tried, 24 hours after his arrival in India, to kick one. He was writing at a table one afternoon when he became aware of an annoying unsteadiness in the furniture. Thinking that this was due to the rubbing of a dog against the leg of the table, the Briton kicked at the beast several times, and it was only when he looked under the still shaking table and saw nothing there that he realized his inability to stop terrestrial commotions.

An American woman who resided for some years in Mexico also had an experience with an earthquake. She was the mother of two lively small sons. One day they had been especially obstreperous and did not grow quieter as the time for her siesta and theirs approached. After rousing her from her nap two or three times by their antics, she gave them fair warning that if there was any further commotion severe punishment would result.

Again she dropped off into sleep. Suddenly she found herself awake and on her feet, with sounds of banging still in her ears and the room quivering as if from the fall of a heavy piece of furniture. The boys, scared and guilty looking, were in the doorway. She seized the nearer, reversed him and had him half spanked before the excited protests of his brother penetrated to her brain through his anguished howls. Then she became aware that she was spanking him for an earthquake.

To Join Black and Caspian.

Swiss engineers have convinced the Russian government that it is perfectly feasible to bore a tunnel through the Caucasian mountains near Tiflis, in order to join the Black and Caspian seas. This will be a tremendous undertaking, as the tunnel will be about sixteen miles in length, and the Russian government had practically decided that it was beyond the limit of reality. However, the Swiss experts have reported that the tunnel could be built within seven years without much difficulty, but at a great expense. A Paris firm of bankers, it is understood, is supporting the enterprise which will be put into execution about the early part of 1913.

RIVER SEINE ON THE RAMPAGE AGAIN

FLEES FROM PRISON

Convict, Who Escaped, Tells How He Did It.

Prisoner at Sing Sing Used Iron Bars and Blanket—Walked Only Three Miles When Police Chief Nabbed Him.

Ossining.—Francesco Dollano, a convict serving an indeterminate sentence of from two years and six months to five years for assault in the second degree, escaped from Sing Sing prison at about two o'clock in the morning and was captured and brought back after eleven hours of freedom. He has served one year and three months of his sentence.

The escape was not discovered until the officers made their morning count at 7:30. Keeper Murphy then discovered that the cell was vacant, and a hole in the roof told the story of the escape. The whistle was blown and Warden Kennedy had a description of the prisoner telephoned to all the neighboring police stations. About 12:40 in the afternoon Dollano was captured at Briarcliff by Chief of Police Keator of that village. Dollano made no resistance and was brought back to the prison.

After wandering about for eleven hours Dollano was only three miles from the prison. He was on the state road, headed for New York. He was familiar with the village, having been employed for two years on the estate of David Rousseau, owner of the Rousseau Electrical works at Ossining.

When questioned as to the manner of his escape Dollano said that he had secured two pointed iron bars from the foundry of the prison, where he was assigned to work. With these he removed a stone from the roof of his cell, on the top tier, and taking his blanket and the two iron bars he drew himself through the aperture into the space above. This was at 10:30 o'clock on Friday evening. Using the same tools, he made a hole through the roof of the building and found himself in the open air. Near the edge of the roof he found footing on a beam to which the telephone wires leading to the building were attached. He broke off several of these wires and twisted his blanket and the wires into a cord and then lowered himself half way down, from which point he descended to the ground by means of the window bars. The jobs must have been finished between 1:15 a. m. and 7:15 a. m., because the telephone wires were used at 1:15 a. m. and at 7:15 a. m., when the operator called up the guard post to which they lead he could not get connection.

When captured Dollano was dressed in convict garb with the exception of his cap and gloves, but he had covered the telltale buttons of his prison suit with black cloth. He is a powerfully built man, five feet nine inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds. The hole in the roof seemed hardly large enough for a child to get through. His hands were torn and bleeding.

Dollano's punishment will probably be a forfeiture of the short time allowed for good behavior.

CREW CRAZY FOR TOBACCO

Lack of Weed Almost Causes Mutiny on Board Schooner Clancy Brown.

Galveston, Texas.—The schooner Clancy Brown, with a cargo of coal, thirty-three days out from Baltimore, had an unusual experience when its crew of 12 men became mutinous because of a tobacco famine. Captain Swenten says his sailors went insane when the supply of tobacco gave out on the twenty-first day.

The schooner was blown out of its course and the absence of chewing and smoking tobacco made the men nervous wrecks. They refused to obey orders, quarreled and several times threatened to take the vessel and land somewhere in quest of the coveted weed.

Their behavior delayed the ship three or four days longer on its voyage, the captain says.

When the pilot boat met the schooner on the Texas coast the crew hugged the pilots when they dumped their tobacco boxes and plugs on deck.

Slain Goose Brings Joy

Gander That Wanders in Front of Machine Makes a Feast—Autoist Buys Bird.

Darby, Pa.—A fat old gander that waddled too slowly across the Westchester pike in front of the automobile of Richard Purly of Darby, with the usual result, brought belated but none the less appreciated holiday cheer to a poor family in Darby, exemplifying the old adage that it is an ill wind that blows good to nobody.

Purdy, with a couple of his friends, was spinning out Westchester pike, near Manao, when a flock of geese crossed ahead of the machine. After the last one had passed the gander, which had remained back, suddenly decided to follow, and waddled directly in front of the machine, on which Purdy had now put on full speed.

The irate owner of the bird appeared just in time to see it struck and demanded payment. Insisting that the goose weighed 20 pounds, at 25 cents a pound, he demanded $5 for it, but after he learned that Purdy was a butcher, he dropped the price to 14 cents, wholesale, and on second judgment said that he thought the bird might weigh a little under 20 pounds. Purdy guessed the weight at 15 pounds, and paid the farmer $2.10.

The farmer was walking away with both the goose and the money, when Purdy called him back and reminded him that the goose was not his property any longer, took it, had one of his companions bleed it and on his arrival in Darby presented it with his best wishes to a deserving family, who accepted it with profuse thanks.

Dumb—Wire in Throat.

Wichita, Kan.—Dumb for two years from paralysis of the vocal organs, caused by the lodging of a small piece of wire in his throat, Lewis Stiger, five years old, of Kiel, Okla., is able to talk again. By means of X-rays a surgeon definitely located the wire, and, using a tiny electric bulb to light the child's throat and a mirror to guide his instrument, he pulled it out. Almost immediately the child's vocal organs were restored to their full power. The wire was about an inch long.

Will Meet Wife In City

Hotel Men Have Unique Plan for Keeping Salesmen Over Sunday.

Springfield, Mass.—"Meet your wife in Springfield," the newest slogan among commercial travelers, attracted to this city hundreds of drummers and their wives, not to mention children. The Springfield Hotel Men's association, comprising the six largest hostelries in the city, is sponsor for the undertaking, which traveling men say is unique. Conspicuously displayed in the lobby of the hotels is this notice:

"The hotels and merchants of Springfield are united in a friendly endeavor to make our city the most popular in New England as a place for traveling men to stay in over Sunday."

Nearly 500 men and women attended the entertainment at Cooley's hotel. "We stand for a dignified Sunday and the programs we shall give will in no way be vaudeville shows," said Henry E. Marsh, proprietor of the hotel, to the correspondent. He is also president of the Hotel Men's association. He has been in the business nearly half a century and is said to know more commercial travelers than any other boniface in the United States.

"The drummers' receptions," as many call the Sunday affairs, caused a protest from the churches, and in order that they shall not interfere with the evening worship they will begin at eight o'clock hereafter instead of 7:30 p. m. Musical numbers include selections by an orchestra and vocal solos by members of a Hartford church choir.

"We've got the right idea and are going to push it through," said a hotel man. "The drummer who tells his wife that he can't be home over Sunday can at least meet her here. If not, he can enjoy wholesome recreation by himself. Without intending it as such, we've planted the nucleus of a great reform movement. Who knows but the hotel men of Springfield may go down in history with Wendell Phillips, William Lloyd Garrison and other men who had ideas and the courage of their convictions."

Spanks Wife; Is Arrested.

Hammond, Ind.—Mrs. Charles Bulnis, 16, had her husband arrested for spanking her with a strap. She advised the court to give him 100 days in jail and the court fixed that as the penalty.

TRUTHFUL; SHE FAILS TO WED

Young Woman Wouldn't Swear to Age of Which She Was Doubtful.

St. Louis.—Truth was stronger than Cupid at Clayton, the St. Louis county Gretna Green, the other day.

Miss Ida Lorenz and John F. Osborn, both of O'Fallon, Ill., went there to get a marriage license. Both seemed to be of legal age, and Deputy Recorder Ahlers filed out the papers.

"Now, as a matter of form, you will have to swear to your ages," said he.

The young woman seemed embarrassed. "I can't swear that I am eighteen, though I believe I am," she said. "My parents died when I was a baby and I have no birth certificate."

Though Osborn pleaded with her, Miss Lorenz could not be induced even to swear that to the best of her knowledge and belief she was of legal age. She and Osborn departed without the license.

Romance of a Gold Tooth

Macedonian Slaves for Coveted Filling to Win Girl—Makes Fortune and Seeks Sweetheart.

Wabash, Ind.—Nicholas Tetzliff, a Macedonian, has had one great ambition since boyhood—to have a gold tooth. Poverty would not permit of the necessary expenditure in his earlier days, but when he left his native land for America three years ago he promised Kyra Yannoula, a peasant girl, that he would return for her—after he had a gold tooth. He finally succeeded in getting together a fortune. A few days ago he went to a dentist and two hours later had a gold crown covering one of his incisors. He paid the dentist's bill and bought a railroad ticket to New York. In the afternoon he started for Macedonia to join the girl who is waiting for his return.

FOR EVERY FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST

To the head of every family the health of its different members is most important, and the value of an agreeable laxative that is certain in its effect is appreciated. One of the most popular remedies in the family medicine chest is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is known to druggists and physicians as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is mild and gentle in its action on the bowels, yet positive in its effect. A dose of Syrup Pepsin at night means relief next morning, while its tonic properties tone up and strengthen the muscles of stomach, liver and bowels so that these organs are able in a short time to again perform their natural functions without help.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this simple, inexpensive, yet effective remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and ask for a sample bottle. Dr. Caldwell will be glad to send it without any expense to you whatever.

Newspaper Is the Medium.

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

PITNEY APPOINTED TO SUPREME COURT

TAFT DECIDES ON NEW JERSEY STATE CHANCELLOR FOR HARLAN'S PLACE.

TAFT'S 6TH APPOINTMENT

Nomination Sent to Senate By Executive—Decisions in Oklahoma Cases Removed Hook From List of Candidates.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The nomination of Mahlon Pitney, chancellor of the state of New Jersey to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court, was sent to the senate by President Taft.

Mr. Taft does not expect any opposition to the nomination in the senate.

Decisions Cost Hook Post.

Chancellor Pitney long has been a prominent figure in New Jersey.

In casting about for a successor to Justice Harlan, Mr. Taft first looked beyond the Mississippi river. At one time it seemed certain he would name Judge William C. Hook of the United States circuit court, and again it was believed Secretary Charles Nagel, of the department of commerce and labor, would be the president's choice.

There was a protest against Judge Hook, because of his decisions in two Oklahoma cases, one involving the 2-cent fare law and the other the "Jim Crow" car law. The latter case in which Hook decided in favor of the railroads and against the contention of the negroes affected, is said to have been the final cause of the president's turning from the Kansas jurist.

Labor organizations protested against Secretary Nagel on the ground that he had been too lenient in the enforcement of the immgration laws.

Majority of Judges Named.

When Chancellor Pitney shall have been confirmed by the senate and has taken his place on the supreme court, President Taft will have had the extraordinary experience of having constituted a majority of the highest tribunal in the land—a bench on which it had been his most exalted ambition to serve as chief justice. In addition to naming five new justices, on a court of nine, President Taft also had the distinction of elevating Associate Justice Edward D. White, to the chief justiceship, making in all six supreme court appointment during the three years he has been in the White House. The five associate justices named by Mr. Taft were Messrs. Lurton, Hughes, Van Devanter, Lamar and Pitney.

NECKLACE IS MISSING

Diamonds Disappeared at Dance Given in Honor of Miss Taft.

Washington, Feb. 20.—More than a little mystery surrounds the disappearance of a diamond necklace, valued at $75,000, from the neck of a New York guest at a dinner dance given in honor of Miss Helen Taft by Captain Sowerby, naval attache of the British embassy, at Rauscher's.

Not only are strenuous endeavors being made to find the gems, but equally strenuous denials are being made that they were lost at all.

Among the guests at the dinner dance were: Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Edward McLean, Mrs. Esmond Ovey, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Helen Taft, Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. E. R. Thomas, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Miss Margaret Draper, Miss Harriet Anderson, niece of the president; Miss Cameron and Mrs. Clarence Moore.

TENNIS COURT ROMANCE

Miss Hotchkiss, Tennis Champion, to Wed Harvard Student.

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—At a luncheon to 30 sorority friends, Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, the champion woman tennis player of the United States, announced her engagement to George W. Wightman, a Harvard university student and son of a Brookline, Mass., capitalist. Miss Hotchkiss met Wightman on the courts of the Longwood Tennis club of Boston last June.

"Gross Revenue Tax Law" Valid.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Minnesota's "gross revenue tax" law, taxing revenues of express companies and other corporations, was declared valid by the supreme court. The state will be able to recover approximately $100,000 from express companies.

Standard Oil Plant Closed.

Council Bluffs, Feb. 20.—The Standard Oil company's plant at Denison has been closed on a writ of attachment. The attachment grows out of a suit against the company for selling oil which caused the death of a woman and child three years ago.

Two Cornell Students Drown.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Two Cornell students, Perry A. Converse of Buffalo and Charles W. Getman of Richfield Springs, were drowned at Kings Ferry when they skated into a crevice in the ice on Lake Cayuga.

Physical Directors Urged for Men.

Madison, Feb. 20.—The committee on teachers recommended to the state board of normal regents the appointment of directors of physical education for men at the state normal schools at a salary of $1,600 yearly.

GARDNER IN TROUBLE AGAIN

FORMER STATE SENATOR ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY.

Alleged, Through Power of Attorney, He Sought Control of Estate.

New York, Feb. 20.—Former State Senator Frank J. Gardner of race track legislation fame, was arrested and locked up charged with conspiracy to gain control of the half-million dollar estate of Samuel E. Haslett, an aged recluse, through a power of attorney Haslett repudiated and was released on $3,000 bail. Gardner, who a year ago was acquitted of a charge of attempting to bribe State Senator Otto G. Foelker in connection with the anti-race track legislation in this state in 1908, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment and said he had no doubt of his ability to clear himself.

George H. Decker, who, in a remarkable story of the alleged plot, told to Magistrate Kempner, involved Gardner in the case, will also be examined. Decker was employed as nurse for Haslett when the elderly recluse was taken ill two weeks ago in his "house of mystery" in Brooklyn. Haslett was reported in a serious condtion.

The document in question, which was witnessed by Decker, was extremely broad in its powers, authorizing Gardner to draw checks, pay bills, and care for Mr. Haslett's money and interests in almost every conceivable way, and containing a provision expressly revoking all other powers of attorney.

Decker's testimony is expected to throw more light upon another feature of the case, involving an alleged will executed by Haslett in which, according to Decker's story as told by Magistrate Kempner after his examination of the nurse, Gardner was made sole executor and Decker residuary legatee. The nurse, the magistrate said, insisted that Haslett had instructed him to call in Gardner to draw up this document.

Haslett, whose fortune was the object of the alleged conspiracy, has been a recluse since his wife was burned to death, 25 years ago, and when his "house of mystery" was entered recently, on his being taken ill the interior was found full of rich furnishings, but in an astonishing state of neglect and decay.

Poet Applebauer Shot Dead.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 20.—Maximilian Applebauer, 26 years old, a poet and writer, was shot and killed here while exhibiting an automatic magazine gun to Mieczyslaw Gorski. Applebauer removed the magazine from the gun and passed the weapon to Gorski to examine. Believing the removal of the magazine had rendered the gun harmless, Gorski raised it and pulled the trigger, sending a bullet through his friend's heart. A cartridge had remained in the breech of the gun.

New Norwegian Cabinet Formed.

Christiania, Feb. 20.—A new Norwegian cabinet has been formed under the leadership of General J. K. M. Bratlie, former minister of war, as follows: Premier and Defense—General J. K. M. Bratlie. Foreign Affairs—Johannes Irgens. Justice—Professor Frederik Stang. Agriculture—M. Euge. Finance—Frederick Know. Public Worship—A. J. Liljedahl. Commerce—A. O. Lindwig. Labor—B. Braenne.

English Aviator Killed.

Richmond, Eng., Feb. 20.—While monoplaning, Graham Gilmour fell 400 feet and was instantly killed.

THE MARKETS

Duluth, Feb. 20.—Wheat, May, $1.03⅞; July, $1.04⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.04⅜; No. 1 durum, $1.02.

South St. Paul, Feb. 20.—Cattle—Steers, $4.25@5.75; cows, $3.00@3.75; calves, $3.00@5.50; hogs, $5.60@5.95; sheep and lambs, $3.45@6.00.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Cattle—Receipts, 24,000; weak, generally 10c lower; beeves, $4.65@8.50; Texas steers, $4.50@6.75; western steers, $4.80@6.85; stockers and feeders, $3.80@6.10; cows and heifers, $2@6.40; calves, $5.75@8.

Hogs—Receipts, 68,000; market slow, generally 10c lower; light, $5.80@6.20; mixed, $5.85@6.25; heavy, $5.90@6.25; rough, $5.90@6; pigs, $4.25@5.90; bulk, $6.10@6.20.

Sheep—Receipts, 35,000; market slow; natives, $3.30@4.80; western, $3.60@4.85; yearlings, $4.80@5.75; lambs, native, $4.30@6.75; western, $4.75@6.80.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—For the first time in a considerable while wheat today sold at less than $1 a bushel. The reason was that big receipts at domestic terminals more than offset the effect of relatively firm cables. General selling carried down prices, but, under the $1 mark there was lively covering on the part of shorts. Accordingly, a rally soon followed. A decrease in Liverpool stocks tended to help the bulls. On the other hand, the mild weather in the United States promises to increase the free movement of loaded cars to primary points. The opening was a shade to ⅛@⅜c lower. May started at 99⅞c@$1.00¼, a loss of ⅛@¼c to ½@⅝c, but recovered to $1.00⅜@1.00½.

Subsequent stop loss selling carried the market lower than before, but the effect did not last. July showed comparative strength, owing to favorable reports. May closed at $1.00⅜.

Not many traders seemed to be operating on the long side of corn. Bearish feeling grew on account of the spring-like temperature and because of the poorness of cash demand. May opened ⅛@⅜c off at 67¼@67⅜c, and sagged to 67c.

Afterward the market became firmer with wheat. The close was steady at 67⅜c for May, a decline of ⅛c net.

A fair amount of buying on the part of commission houses upheld the market for oats. Weakness of other grain had little effect. May started at ⅛@¼c decrease and touched 52⅛@52¼c and reacted to 51⅞@52c.

Provisions declined with hogs. There was quite general liquidation by holders. First sales were 2½@20c lower, with May delivery $15.55@15.62½ for pork, $8.92½@9.00 for lard and $8.50 for ribs.

PRAYER

By Rev. William Evans, Director
Bible Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

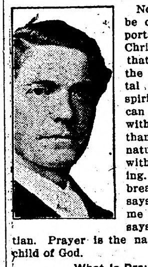
TEXT.—Lord, teach us to pray.—And He said unto them, When ye pray, say, Our Father.—Luke 11: 1, 2.



No subject can be of greater importance to the Christian than that of prayer. It is the Christian's vital breath. His spiritual nature can no more live without prayer than his physical nature can live without breathing. "Let me breathe or I die," says man; "let me pray or I die," says the Christian. Prayer is the native air of the child of God.

What Is Prayer?

Prayer has been defined as "An offering up of our desires unto God for things agreeable to his will, in the name of Christ, with the confession of our sins and thankful acknowledgment of his mercies." Yet prayer is more than this; it is a dialogue, not a monologue; it is a vision as well as a voice; it is a revelation as well as a supplication. Prayer is not a mere venture and a voice of mine, but a vision and a voice divine.

In the heart of every one prayer is a sense of need, but a sense of need is not prayer. Prayer is asking for a felt need and asking God, not the universe, for it. Prayer is more than an asking, it is a receiving, a hearing, a learning of God, a converse and communion in which he has much to say and we have much to hear and learn.

The day in which we live is so full of possibilities that an intelligent man will not consider anything impossible. Years ago Morse was considered a fool because he asserted the possibility of communication between Washington and New York. Likewise Marconi was laughed at when he first advocated the idea of wireless telegraphy. Time and experience, however, have proven that these men were wise and not foolish.

Prayer is made possible to the Christian because of the revelation Christ has brought to the world, of the Father. It is only when we understand the true nature of God that prayer becomes possible. This revelation is brought to us only through Christ's interpretation of God. The god of science and philosophy does not furnish any incentive to pray. Bain, the scientist, describes the god of science as a double-faced something—mind and force—which lie behind all natural phenomena.

God Is Called Father.

It is a remarkable thing to notice in almost every instance in the New Testament that when God is referred to in connection with prayer he is called Father. This in itself is an encouragement to prayer, as well as indicating that prayer is a possibility. It is expected that a child will ask its father for things it would not ask a stranger for. The fatherhood of God is not only a motive to prayer, but at the same time a thought which makes prayer both desirable and possible.

Do I find it hard to do as some people tell me—namely, "to pray all night"—let me not be discouraged, but remember that "like as a father" God deals with his children. I do not ask of my own child that he agonize all night when presenting to me a request. But you may say, "I am not sure that I obey properly." I reply, "Like as a father." Does an earthly parent not grant his child any petition until he properly obeys? "Like as a father." But, you say, "I do not understand God." Who does? Shall a father not grant a child's request until he is understood by the child? Then the child's request will never be granted. "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

But the Father to whom we are to pray is an almighty Father, one who is absolutely sovereign and omnipotent. There are no difficulties with God, and we must always remember that "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." Whatever may be our opinion of the unchangeableness of God's laws, we must never forget that every promise made to the prayerful soul shall be fulfilled by a sovereign God, even though ten thousand of what we call unchangeable laws need to be (so called) broken.

Is it not true that we ourselves break laws to supply the needs of our own children? If my little child is dying of a burning fever in the middle of August and calls for ice when the temperature registers 100 degree, if I know enough I can make ice, even though the temperature stands at 100, and answer the prayer of my child. If my boy is falling from a third story window, and hearing his affrighted call I rush to his help and catch him ere he touches the ground I not only save his life, but I break what may be called an unchangeable law—namely, the law of gravitation. So may we believe all things are possible with God.

FLAX GROWING IS PROFITABLE

WESTERN CANADA FARMERS BECOMING RICH IN ITS PRODUCTION.

So much has been written regarding the great amount of money made out of growing wheat in the prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Western Canada, that many other products of the farms are overlooked. These provinces will always grow large areas of wheat—both spring and winter—and the yields will continue to be large, and the general average greater than in any other portion of the continent. Twenty, thirty, forty, and as high as fifty bushels per acre of wheat to the acre—yields unusual in other parts of the wheat growing portions of the continent—have attracted world-wide attention, but what of oats, which yield forty, fifty and as high as one hundred and ten bushels per acre and carry off the world's prize, which, by the way, was also done by wheat raised in Saskatchewan during last November at the New York Land Show. And then, there is the barley, with its big yields, and its excellent samples. Another money-maker, and a big one is flax. The growing of flax is extensively carried on in Western Canada. The writer has before him a circular issued by a prominent farmer at Saskatoon. The circular deals with the treatment of seed flax, the seeding and harvesting, and attributes yields of less than 20 bushels per acre, to later seeding, imperfect and illy-prepared seed. He sowed twenty-five pounds of seed per acre and had a yield of twenty-nine bushels per acre. This will probably dispose of at $2.50 per acre. Speaking of proper preparation of seed and cultivation of soil and opportune sowing, in the circular spoken of there is cited the case of a Mr. White, living fourteen miles south of Rosetown, "who had fifteen acres of summer fallow a year ago last summer, upon which he produced thirty-three bushels to the acre, when many in the district harvested for want of crop. Now, there can be no proper reason advanced why such a crop should not have been produced on all the lands of the same quality in the adjacent district, provided they had been worked and cared for in the same manner. This year (1911) the same man had one hundred acres of summer fallow, had something over 3,800 bushels of wheat. He also had 1,800 bushels of oats and 300 bushels of flax."

There are the cattle, the horses, the roots and the vegetable products of Western Canada farms, all of which individually and collectively deserve special mention, and they are treated of in the literature sent out on application by the Government agents.

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

Girls

Read About These Three Girls. How Sick They Were and How Their Health Was Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Appleton, Wis.—"I take pleasure in writing you an account of my sickness. I told a friend of mine how I felt and she said I had female trouble and advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she had taken it herself for the same trouble with wonderful results. I had been sickly for two years and overworked myself, and had such bad feelings every month that I could hardly walk for pain. I was very nervous and easily tired out and could not sleep nights. I had dizzy spells, and pimples came on my face. But I have taken your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored my health. I think it is the best medicine in existence."—Miss Cecilia M. Bauer, 1161 Lawrence St., Appleton, Wis.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRATITUDE:

Geneva, Iowa.—"I have been teaching school for some years and I have neglected my health because I was too busy with my work to attend to myself properly. I suffered greatly every month and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

"I wrote to you about my condition and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Blood Purifier as you recommended. These remedies have done wonders for me and I can highly and widely recommend them to every suffering woman."—Miss Minnie Shaver, R. F. D. No. 1, Geneva, Iowa, c/o Sam Erickson.

A COLORADO GIRL'S CASE:

Montrose, Col.—"I was troubled very much with irregular periods. Sometimes two months would elapse. I suffered severe headache, was weak and nervous, could eat scarcely anything.

"I took both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and the result was wonderful. I feel like another person.

"I think your remedies are the best on earth and cannot express my thankfulness to you for what they have done to me. I help my neighbors when they are sick, and I shall always recommend your medicines."—Miss Ella McCandless, Montrose, Col.

Is it not reasonable to suppose that a medicine that did so much for these girls will benefit any other girl who is suffering with the same troubles?

Does it not seem the only sensible thing to give such a medicine at least a trial? You may be sure that it can do you no harm, and there are lots of proof that it will do you much good.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

RHEUMATISM A DISEASE OF THE BLOOD

The Treatment Which Is Most Successful Is Directed Toward Building Up and Purifying the Vital Fluid.

That rheumatism is a disease of the blood is shown by the fact that it is hereditary in certain families, and that there is a marked thinning of the blood immediately following its attack.

In the following brief statement are described symptoms which every patient will recognize and the means by which a cure was effected in this case is described with equal fidelity.

If you are suffering from any form of rheumatism with loss of flesh and strength, and thinning of the blood, the remedy that was so effective here deserves a thorough trial.

"About fifteen years ago," says Mrs. Rhoda Pettit, of Louisville, Neb., "after exposure to dampness and wet and being in a run-down condition from overwork, I began to suffer from inflammatory rheumatism. Both my father and mother were sufferers from the same disease. My right side was afflicted and I had no use of my right limb. The cords of the limb seemed to be drawn up. Often the pains would shift from one part of the body to another and, while they were worse in my right limb, they were very severe through the small of my back. There was a sensation as though I was being cut with a knife. My limbs and feet were swollen so that I could not put on my shoes. I suffered intense agony all of the time and when the attacks were severe I was confined to bed for weeks. My stomach was in bad shape. I was troubled with heartburn and gas. I lost weight and my strength was all gone.

"I took medicine from a doctor and tried several other remedies and liniments but nothing helped me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had taken them only a short time before I could feel the new blood and after a fair trial I was able to walk. The pills made me a strong, healthy woman and I am entirely cured of the rheumatism. I know I would not be living today if I had not tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The genuine are sold only in packages bearing the full trade-mark.

ROBBED OF $25,000

HEART OF NEW YORK'S FINANCIAL DISTRICT IS SCENE OF DARING HOLDUP.

VICTIMS BADLY BEATEN

Three Highwaymen Leap Into Machine—Secure Loot and Then Make Their Escape In a Waiting Automobile.

New York, N. Y.—Twenty-five thousand dollars in currency was stolen from a taxicab in the heart of the financial district by three highwaymen, who sprang into the vehicle and overpowered W. F. Smith and Frank Wardell, messengers of the East River National bank. Both messengers were badly injured and the robbers escaped with the money, $15,000 in $5 bills and $10,000 in $100 bills. The currency was being transported from the Produce Exchange bank in the lower part of the city.

The taxicab had proceeded up Broadway without mishap when, for some unexplained reason, the chauffeur turned west on Rector street into Church street, skirting the side and rear of Trinity churchyard.

About midway of the old cemetery three men sprang from the curb. One jumped on the chauffeur's seat; the other two got into the vehicle. The man on the seat pressed a revolver in his overcoat pocket against the side of the chauffeur, Gino Martini, and commanded him to drive swiftly on without making an outcry.

Inside the vehicle the two robbers were belaboring the bank messengers over the head. Smith, one of the messengers, is 61 years old, and he was bleeding, and almost unconscious when the taxicab reached Park place, a few blocks north. Wardell was badly beaten about the head, but was not so seriously hurt.

At Park place the highwaymen jumped from the taxicab, bearing a tin box which they had wrested from the messengers, and which contained the currency. In a flash they had sprung into a big black automobile which appeared to be awaiting their coming and were quickly lost in the maze of traffic.

Martini, the taxicab chauffeur, continued to run his machine until he found a policeman. Here he gave the alarm and the two injured messengers were taken to a police station. Smith's condition was so serious that he was removed to a hospital. Wardell's scalp was badly laverated, but because of his youth he stood the fight well.

The taxi was owned and driven by Gino Martini and had been used many times by the officials of the East River bank to transfer cash and securities. Martini told the police that he did not suspect any danger, even when the men leaped into the cab, as he thought they might simply want to ride.

"The man who got by me," he said, "jabbed the gun into my side. 'Keep on a-going,' he hissed at me, 'and if you make a sound or turn, I'll fill you full of lead.' When I felt the gun against my ribs, I gave the car the power. Then I heard the door slam, and I could feel the struggle going on inside the cab, but I did not dare look around.

"We whizzed past two policemen, but I was so scared that I was afraid to make a sound. As I neared Park place the man beside me said: 'Slow down and stop at the corner.' I did as I was told and he jumped off and streaked for the black automobile that was standing there. I felt the door of the taxi open and I saw the other two men jump out and run over to the car, the engine of which had been started. They disappeared before I could tell anybody what had happened."

After questioning Martini at length, the police took him and his taxicab to headquarters. There the fingerprint experts of the department went over the machine in an effort to find fingerprints which might give them a clue.

MECCA FOR THE BLIND AND DEAF.

A Hospital for Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Established At White Bear Lake.

Prominent St. Paul specialists have taken over the White Bear Hospital and are the first to give Minnesota and the N. W. an institution exclusively devoted to the care of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat diseases. The Hospital has an accommodation for forty-five patients, is steam heated, electric lighted and has a modernly equipped operating room. It is beautifully located on the shores of White Bear Lake, free from the din and roar of the city and easily reached by steam and electric cars. The reputation and large practice of the physicians in charge are too well known in the Northwest to need any recommendation. That the Minnesota Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital will be welcomed by the people of the Northwest is evident by the number of patients that are already coming from long distances to secure the services of these specialists as well as the conveniences of this up-to-date hospital.—"White Bear Life."

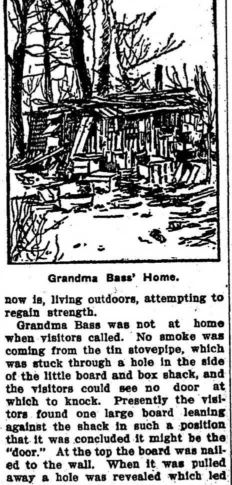
HAPPY IN A SHED-LIKE HOME

Aged Kansas Woman Can't Keep Warm in Old Shack—To Have New House.

Kansas City.—There is happiness in the little Kansas City, Kan., shack of loose boards and boxes that Grandma Bass calls home. The little woman, 78 years old, must sit shivering beside an old broken stove, but she does not complain. She is happy in the promise of the Kansas City, Kan., police that they will build her a new home, a home that at least will keep out the cold. And the haunting fear of the poorhouse, which she has had constantly with her the last two years, has vanished.

Formerly Grandma Bass was used to much better things. Even after the death of her husband several years ago thoughts of becoming a public charge did not enter her life. With the income she obtained by sewing and the money a son brought home for his work at the packing houses the little woman managed. Then the son developed tuberculosis and three years ago was forced to leave. He went up the Missouri river, where he now is, living outdoors, attempting to regain strength.



Grandma Bass' Home.

Grandma Bass was not at home when visitors called. No smoke was coming from the tin stovepipe, which was stuck through a hole in the side of the little board and box shack, and the visitors could see no door at which to knock. Presently the visitors found one large board leaning against the shack in such a position that it was concluded it might be the "door." At the top the board was nailed to the wall. When it was pulled away a hole was revealed which led into a small dark room.

In the room, which had no floor other than the bare earth, was a table with broken legs, an old commode and a box which serves as a chair. Another small room adjoined the front one, and in it was an old bed on which were a thin blanket and a tattered comfort, and a broken bowled stove. A small pane of glass set insecurely in the side of the wall served as a window. The snow was drifting through the holes in the roof of the shack and the wind was blowing through chinks and holes in the walls.

The visitors started to leave. Up the railroad tracks a half-mile they came upon Grandma carrying a basket.

"Don't you nearly freeze in that little house?' she was asked.

"Well, it gets pretty chilly sometimes,' she answered. "But I've got used to the cold. Once I would not believe I could stand living as I now live, but circumstances force a person to get used to everything," she said, smiling.

HOW HE FOUND THE CULPRIT

Tennessee Man Who Started a Skunk Farm Had Trouble Right at the Beginning.

Louisville.—A farmer of Tennessee started a skunk farm a year ago and stocked it with twenty fine animals. He was beginning to count up his returns at $2 per head when he began to miss his animals. As the fence was skunk-tight he started out one night to learn how the animals got away and was pained to observe two enterprising darkies tolling his skunks into a bag with soft music on a banjo. It is said that the discovery of the peculiar love of music on the part of the skunks disconcerted the farmer for a moment but he succeeded in planting 27 No. 6 shot in the seat of the pants of one of the banjoists as he went over the fence. The skunk stealing stopped.

Fighting Parson Feared.

Banning, Cal.—Many Indians of the different reservations of Riverside county are concerned over the announcement received from Denver that the Rev. Charles C. Brannon, the "fighting parson" of the Methodist faith, had been appointed chief special officer of the Indian service in place of Mr. Coggeshall, who takes an Indian agency in New Mexico. The Rev. Mr. Brannon has been shot at many times and never hit; he has had many fights and was never "licked," and will have the task of suppressing illegal sales of liquor among the Indians, thereby taking the place made vacant some time since by "Pussyfoot" Johnson's resignation.

RESTORED TO HEALTH.

After Suffering with Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

Mrs. John S. Way, 209 S. 8th St., Independence, Kans., says: "For a number of years I was a victim of disordered kidneys. My back ached constantly, the passage of the kidney secretions was irregular and my feet and ankles badly swollen. Spots appeared before my eyes and I was very nervous. After using numerous remedies without relief, I was completely cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. In view of my advanced age, my cure seems remarkable."

A plain homely sack but a better tobacco
GENUINE DURHAM
Smoking Tobacco
SMOKING TOBACCO

"Bull" Durham is packed in a plain muslin sack.

The package is cheap and homely, but it is handy, substantial, convenient, and what it lacks in beauty is more than made up in the quality of its contents—for what is saved on the sack goes to make the tobacco better.

GENUINE
"BULL" DURHAM
SMOKING TOBACCO
Forty "rollings" in each 5c. muslin sack

It is smoked by more men than all the other high-grade brands combined. Every day new smokers discover its honest worth. Once a man tries "Bull" Durham he goes on smoking it year after year. Nothing else goes into his pipe—no ready-made cigarettes for him, when once he's tried rolling his own from good "Bull" Durham.

Try a sack of this famous old tobacco today, and see for yourself why so many thousands of men have made it their lasting choice.

Sold by practically every dealer in the U. S.

Cement Talk No. 2

Concrete is the hardened rock-like product produced by using some brand of Portland cement with sand, gravel or broken stone and water. The cement is the material which binds the sand, gravel or broken stone together; this binding action is produced by water. The terms "Cement" and "Concrete" thus have different meanings, although they are frequently used interchangeably. While cement is only one of the materials in concrete, it is perhaps the most important. To insure the best results in concrete work, the highest grade of Portland cement should be used. The concrete worker may rest assured that he has the best cement if he will make certain that the word Universal is printed on each bag of cement that he buys. Whenever you think of doing any concrete work, see us about Universal Portland Cement.

"SUCCESS FARM;" "FAILURE FARM"

DO you see the two farms! They are both good farms, or ought to be, as are most of those in this country.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THEM IS NOT IN THE LAND, BUT IN THE MEN THAT OWN THEM.

One of these men is an up to date chap who READS THE PAPERS, especially the farm notes, takes agricultural journals and applies scientific methods.

The other works just as hard, but will not have a newspaper in the house and could not get a new idea if it were bored into his head with an X ray.

THE UP TO DATE FARMER GETS TWO OR THREE TIMES THE YIELD OF HIS NEIGHBOR AND WITH BUT LITTLE MORE LABOR OR EXPENSE.

He uses fertilizer, crop rotation and intelligence. He economizes every rod of his land; makes it all count. He practices soil conservation. He gives back to the soil as much as or a little more than he takes from it. He knows the latest experiments made by the agricultural department, the agricultural colleges and experiment stations. He reads the newspapers. SEND in YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TODAY.

One View of Modern Children.

Children are never children to themselves. From the standpoint of the grownup the real children we meet in these days are few and far between. To be a real child implies unconsciousness of one's superiority. The trouble with many of the children of today is that they have discovered that they are superior. Their advantages are much greater than ours were, and they know it and they rub it in. The old fashioned licking has gone out and with it the child. In his place is a vastly superior creature who is affable on being approached, condescending under continued contact and capable of any degree of cruelty if his dignity be ruffled.—Life.

Something Wrong.

A thousand spurs are striking deep,
A thousand spears in rest;

Willing to Stand.

A farmer owned a young steer which he wanted to break in to the plow, and, having no other animal to harness with it, he decided to get into the yoke himself, giving the reins to his son.

No sooner had they started than the steer bolted into a wild runaway, the farmer holding on to the yoke with both hands and keeping the pace for dear life. Over plowed fields they flew, and as he was about to drop for lack of wind they brought up against the fence with a mighty thump.

As the son hurried to the scene the panting father managed to gasp, "Unhitch the steer, bub; I'll stand!"—National Monthly.

Curious Mode of Catching Turtles.

A curious mode of catching turtles is practiced in the West Indies. It consists in attaching a ring and a line to the tail of a species of sucker fish known as the remora. The live fish is then thrown overboard and immediately makes for the first turtle he can spy, to which he attaches himself very firmly by means of a sucking apparatus arranged at the top of his head. Once attached to the turtle, so firm is his grip that the fisherman on drawing the line brings home both turtle and the sucker.

A Yankee In the Orient.

Whatever the outcome of the imbroglio between Russia and Persia, Americans will glory in the spunk of their fellow citizen, William Morgan Shuster, in his manly attitude as Persian treasurer general. A Yankee that has the pluck to stand up against England and Russia for the liberty and independence of a weaker nation possesses a double portion of the spirit of '76. Even though Uncle Sam could not mix in and go to his rescue, Mr. Shuster won the unanimous moral support of his countrymen. Not only so, but he gained the respect and applause of many Englishmen, despite the fact that their government was allied with Russia. More to the purpose, he rallied to himself the support of the Persians. For a young man scarcely heard of till the present row made him a central figure in world politics, this represents something of an achievement.

Persia is one of those nations that have recently emerged into constitutionalism and some degree of liberty. As an earnest of her change of heart she chased her former shah out of the country and started to reform things generally. Having need of some one to look after her finances, she applied to the United States and Mr. Shuster was recommended as the man for the place. Those who stood sponsor for him have reason to take pride in their discrimination. Shuster made good. Not only did he handle the finances in a way acceptable to his employers, but he showed himself loyal to the land he was serving in her new spirit of nationalism.

Shuster is simply a victim to the machinations and land greed of Russia, backed by Great Britain, who expects to share in the spoil. That is the whole story as it looks to American eyes.

Having made a thornless blackberry, Luther Burbank is now being appealed to by the French government to create a desertless Sahara. If anybody can do it Burbank is the man. He will probably breed a cross between desert sand and swamp mud, or graft seaweed on to a mirage.

A hangman has turned evangelist. Perhaps the transformation is not so radical as it seems, however. Hanging may be the best thing for some men's souls.

Some Solace For the Male.

Despite the advance of woman suffrage, women's clubs, women in business and women generally, there are still some crumbs of comfort for mere man. The census furnishes one. In the United States proper there are 106 males for every 100 females. The exact figures for the whole country, exclusive of Alaska and our island possessions are: Males, 47,332,122; females, 44,640,144.

The proportion of males over females has risen in ten years. At the last census the proportion was 104.4 to 100 as against 106 to 100 now. The census enumerators ascribe this increase to the large immigration, the natural tendency being for more males to immigrate than females. Yet this alone could not explain the difference, as there was proportionately as great an immigration in the decade prior to 1900 as there has been in the decade since.

The officials of the census bureau have another ingenious theory to account for the masculine excess. It is that at birth the number of males always exceeds the number of females. But in countries where the death rate is high they say that the male mortality is greater than that of the females, and hence an equilibrium is soon struck. Through better health conditions we have lowered the death rate, hence the numerical superiority of the males.

There are some exceptions to the rule. In Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia the females are in excess of the males. Among negroes and native whites of foreign parents the same is true. But among native whites and immigrants the men have the best of it—in numbers.

Mexico is now talking reciprocity with the United States. That is all right, but we positively refuse to reduce the import duty on revolutions. And they now seem a standard Mexican crop.

Bring us the news.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Roscoe Batten is out in the country this week working on a hay baling contract.

Mrs. Nels Gudvangen has been on the sick list for the past couple of weeks but is reported as improving.

Walter Patton and Albert Pich came in from East of Mud Lake this morning after a load of supplies.

The Ladies Aid will meet with Mrs. H. Knutson, four miles east of town, next Wednesday afternoon.

H. C. Rowberg, attorney from Thief River Falls, was here today interested in the claims of unpaid coal haulers.

There will be Sunday School in the Holt church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and Young People's services in the evening at 7:30.

The special election held Saturday last in School District No. 58 resulted in the defeat of the proposition to issue bonds for the building of a new schoolhouse.

Mrs. Thomas Jacobson visited at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank [illegible] home the loser.

A bunch of news items received this week from Route 2, Thief River Falls, are not published for the reason that the correspondent neglected to attach his signature.

Harrison Henry, a Dakota cattle buyer was buying stock here last week and shipped out two carloads on Saturday. One 8-year old steer was bought from August Hoffman for $82.50, and it weighed 1,400 lbs.

Miss May Collins, of St. Paul, was here to attend the Leap Year ball Saturday evening. She came over from Oslo, where she was organizing a Royal Neighbor camp, and remained until Tuesday as the guest of Mrs. J. C. Davidson.

The Sunny Side.

(News from R. F. D, Route No. 1.)

All of the girls are complaining of sore toes since the party.

Alfred Larson was at Lysnes' sawing wood on Tuesday.

Fred and Lillie Peterson spent Friday evening at Kuehne's.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Peterson spent Sunday at Louis Johnson's.

Burndette and Charles Horian called at Peterson's Sunday evening.

Sophie Johnson is staying with her sister, Mrs. Swenson, west of Holt.

Ole Larson is back from his claim. Wonder what kept him away from the party.

Hjalmar Peterson made a business trip to Thief River Falls Friday, returning Saturday.

Oscar Furr called at Wegge's on Wednesday evening. Wonder what time he got home.

Oscr Knutson was seen going north to hunt wolves. We rather think he was hunting "dear."

We wonder if the boys went to the woods the day after the party. Some of them seemed to think that "The longest way round is the sweetest way home."

The Jolly Bunch had a most enjoyable time at a party given by the Misses Kuehne in honor of their brother, Ernest, who left the following day for Canada.

The Misses Zelma and Malinda Wegge, Hulda Johnson, and Messrs. Hjalmar and Fred Peterson and Walfred Johnson took in the Leap Year ball at Holt Saturday evening and report a fine time.

H. O. Kjomme, the Thief River Falls attorney, was a business visitor [illegible] in connection with the claims of several parties who hauled coal for the dredges but have not been paid in full for their labor.

Al Betcher, the McIntosh wrestler who recently defeated Ludvig Monson, was beaten by L. Curtis, of Halstad, at Thief River Falls Tuesday night. Local enthusiasts who went down to see the match say that it was a great contest, but that Betcher was clearly outclassed.

Tuesday, the 12th inst, is general town election day. Every township in this end of the county should pay special attention to the election of officers who will see to it that the roads are improved as much as possible during their term of office. It will be the best investment for any town to make.

OBSTACLES.

The consciousness of power comes to us from conquering obstacles. Hindrances are, after all, our opportunities. God must regard our struggle. And that he has a great purpose in it all we are forced to believe from the way he treats us and gives us all, at some time in our lives, a battle to fight.
—Roderick Stebbins.

A Dangerous Juror.

"I don't like the looks of that juror with the big ears and the long, pointed chin," the defendant in the case whispered to his lawyer.

"He has an ugly mug," said the lawyer, "that's a fact."

"It isn't altogether his looks though," confided the client; "he's paying too blamed close attention to the testimony."—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Their Man.

A pleasant little story is told of Dr. Boyd Carpenter in the days before he was bishop of Ripon. To him came one day a young man and maiden, both bashful and on a very obvious errand.

"Are you Mr. Carpenter?" began the swain timidly.

"Yes," was the reassuring reply; "Carpenter—and joiner."—London Tit-Bits.

Evident.

Smith and Jones were speaking about the fine points of their respective sons.

"That boy of mine," remarked Smith extravagantly, "is the genuine article. He's all wool, you can bet."

"Shouldn't wonder," commented Jones. "I notice that he shrinks from washing."—Housekeeper.

On the Safe Side.

Fond Father—Yes, Johnny, when the millennium is come the lamb can lie down with the lion in perfect safety. Little Johnny (doubtingly)—I s'pose that's so, but I'd rather be the lion, just the same.

Howling Hilarity in Holt

Booze is making quite a reputation for Holt these days, and some other citizens seem to enjoy it and take pride in keeping it up.

During the past week the main street has at different times been a scene of wild hilarity. Parties with jags and jugs have paraded publicly shouting and swearing, pausing once in a while to call each other by pet names and entirely careless of who might be insulted by their actions or language. One day a couple of young fellows, both said to be under age, and both gloriously jagged, had a runaway through the town. They are said to have got their booze, at least some of it, in Thief River Falls. But the kids seem to have little difficulty in getting liquor without going out of town for it, and the men who keep the supply on hand care not if the boys land in the penitentiary, or in hell, if they can only get them drunk and have a laugh at the —— fools, as they call their victims.

Prominent local men have urged the editor at different times to sound a note of warning. There is a way to check this practise, and the law breakers can thank themselves if they get in trouble.

Reflecting Lighthouses' Origin.

Accident, not necessity, was the parent of the invention of reflecting lighthouses. During a meeting of a mathematical society at Liverpool some years ago one of the members laid a wager that he could read a newspaper paragraph at ten yards distance by the light of a farthing candle. This he succeeded in doing by covering the inside of an earthen dish with putty [illegible] and then placing his reflector behind the candle. Captain Hutchinson, a dock master, was present, and from this experiment gained the idea from which he evolved the reflecting lighthouse as built in Liverpool.

Instincts That Lead to Death.

Professor Mivart proved that there are "instincts" that lead to death by failing to adapt themselves to a change of circumstances. Migratory quail by thousands perish in the deserts of northern Africa, where their ancestors used to find a comfortable winter resort, abounding with forests and even with grain fields, if we shall credit Pliny's account of the Numidian coast lands. The forests are gone, but myriads of quail still follow in the same route at the risk of starvation.

Why Grass Grows Hollow.

The stems of grass and oats are usually hollow, and the knots of nodes which occur at intervals and which have a peculiar degree of firmness, derived from the interlacing of fibers, give them a firmness and strength which they would otherwise lack. If the material of wheat straw were in a solid form it would make but a thin wiry stem, which would snap with great ease, but in the hollow form, with the intervening knots, the necessary support is afforded.

Rosemary.

Rosemary, the charming name of the plant that's for remembrance, is not only frequently found in folklorian legend, but has been esteemed also from the very dawn of history for its "essential oil," its "sweet water" and its fragrant dried leaves and branches. In the middle period of English history it was always a special favorite in gardens and was used for strewing upon the floors of dwellings and upon casements and also, of course, for garden embellishment.—London Spectator.

Auburn Haired Women.

History avers that women with auburn hair have wielded a strong influence in all ages. The women familiar to history who belonged to this sisterhood were Isabella of Castile, Helen of Troy, Catherine I. of Russia, Joan of Arc, Elizabeth of England, Mary Stuart, Anne of Russia, ex-Empress Eugenie, Lucrezia Borgia and Beatrice Cenci.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

The World's Standard

Used Exclusively by 98% of World's Creameries

Ten years ago there were a dozen different makes of creamery or factory separators in use. To-day over 98 per cent of the world's creameries use De Laval separators exclusively.

When it comes to buying a separator why not profit by the experience of the creameryman, which qualifies him to advise you correctly.

He knows which separator will give you the best service and be the most economical for you to buy. That's why 98 per cent of the world's creameries use the De Laval exclusively.

There can be no better recommendation for the De Laval than the fact that the men who make the separation of milk a business use the De Laval to the practical exclusion of all other makes. They know from experience.

Easiest to turn, easiest to wash, skims the cleanest, lasts the longest

DIAMOND RIDING PLOWS

The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.

It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

REPLIES TO 7 GOVERNORS

Former Executive Reiterates Desire to Have People of Each State Signify by a Primary Election Their Choice of President.

> EIGHT YEARS AGO.
> Nov. 8, 1908.—"On the fourth of March next, I shall have served three and a half years and this three and half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

New York, Feb. 27.—"I will accept the nomination for president if it is offered me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference," is Colonel Roosevelt's reply to the letter of seven Republican governors asking him to stand for nomination.

The eagerly awaited reply was unexpectedly brief, but definite. It follows:

"New York, Feb. 24, 1912.

"Gentlemen: I deeply appreciate your letter and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts upon me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand as the heads of government in their several states.

"I absolutely agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole. I will accept the nomination for president if it is tendered to me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference.

"One of the chief principles for which I have stood, for which I now stand and which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to reduce to action, is the genuine rule of the people; and therefore I hope that so far as possible the people may be given the chance, through direct primaries to express their preference as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican presidential convention.

"Very truly yours,
"Theodore Roosevelt.

"The Hon. Wm. E. Glasscock, governor of the state of West Virginia, Charleston, W. Va.

"The Hon. Chester H. Aldrich, governor of the state of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

"The Hon. Robert H. Bass, governor of the state of New Hampshire, Concord, N. H.

"The Hon. Joseph . Carey, governor of the state of Wyoming, Cheyenne, Wyo.

"The Hon. Joseph M. Carey, governor of the state of Michigan, Lansing, Mich.

"The Hon. W. R. Stubbs, governor of the state of Kansas, Topeka, Kan.

"The Hon. Herbert S. Hadley, governor of the state of Missouri, Jefferson City, Mo."

Letter Drafted to Roosevelt.

The above named governors assembled at Chicago two weeks ago and drafted a letter to Colonel Roosevelt, asserting that there was a popular demand for him to be president again, and urging him to declare himself as to whether he would accept the Republican nomination if "it came unsolicited and unsought." For two weeks Colonel Roosevelt considered the letter.

Chicago Comments.

Chicago. — Definite announcement from Colonel Roosevelt that he will accept the presidential nomination if offered him without his becoming an active candidate caught no one napping in Chicago and took no one by surprise.

At the Roosevelt headquarters where foreword of the Colonel's announcement had sped, the leaders only smiled. At the Taft headquarters there were smiles, too, smiles because the suspense had ended, although there were none who doubted the outcome of the appeal of the seven western governors addressed to the former president.

Democrats interviewed all united in declaring that in their opinion Roosevelt's nomination will make for a certain Democratic victory. Practically all of them voiced the same views as did Mayor Carter H. Harrison.

Brother Charles Not Scared.

Cincinnati.—After reading the statement of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt that he would accept the nomination if it was tendered, Charles P. Taft, brother of President Taft, said: "I don't think Mr. Roosevelt will get the nomination. In fact I am positive we will beat him. Mr. Roosevelt has made himself unpopular with the Republican party by his speech at Columbus." Mr. Taft said that was his own personal opinion.

TO TAKE OVER EXPRESS COS.

RATES COULD BE CUT TO ONE-THIRD.

Senator Gardner Offers Bill for Federal Operation Under Postal Service.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Senator Gardner, of Maine, introduced a bill under which the government would take over the properties of express companies and operate them as a part of the postal service extending the service to the rural delivery. The measure indicates the probable cost of taking over the properties as follows:

Real property, $14,932,169; equipment, $7,381,405; materials and supplies, $138,210; advance payments on contracts, $5,836,666; franchises, good will, etc., $10,877,369; total, $39,165,819.

While the balance sheets of the company show other assets of nearly $150,000,000, Senator Gardner argues that these are not devoted to express service and that this property might be retained by the corporations without impairing its value.

It is proposed that rates charged for express service under the government shall be based upon weight and length of haul, rather than upon the system in effect for the carrying of mail.

While the bill introduced does not fix rates, Senator Gardner offers figures showing that express charges in this country are now sixteen times freight charges, and indicating that under the postal system this ratio could be reduced to about five and one-half and, at the same time, express business would be extended to the entire country.

TO INVESTIGATE RAY

Army Politics Is Seen In Case of Paymaster.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The scandal involving Major Beecher B. Ray of the army pay corps, is engaging the attention of army men and politicians because of the evidence already brought out, and more to follow, indicating that through the use of this army officer in several campaigns the army has been invaded by politics. This has nothing to do with the personal scandal involving the name of Major Ray.

The investigation into the Ray case has proceeded far enough for it to become apparent what the committee hopes to show. Representative Helm of Kentucky, the committee chairman and his Democratic colleagues say that Major Ray was used in the 1904 campaign by Theodore Roosevelt, and in the 1908 campaign by William H. Taft, that he was detached from his army duties, although his pay and expense allowances were permitted to continue and assigned to Chicago headquarters of the Republican campaign committee; that while thus assigned he did political work keeping the labor vote in line for the Republican ticket and paying particular attention to the order of railway trainmen of which he formerly was a member.

More than this, the committee Democrats claim that, as a result of these political services, first for Roosevelt and then for Taft, Major Ray was shown unexampled favoritism, having been assigned to 18 separate and distinct stations in 13 years, although the average tour of duty of a paymaster at any one station is between three and four years, and that, although guilty on three separate occasions of financial irregularities and once involved in a scandal relating to a woman, each time, against the recommendation of his superior officer in the army, he was saved from punishment by President Taft.

These papers, or a limited portion of them, as it afterwards turned out, were forwarded to the committee, which, when congress convened, immediately began a personal investigation of the case. Since then no less than three additional bundles of papers, of vastly greater interest and importance than those sent to congress by the war department last summer, have come to light.

One bundle, sent to the Helm committee by express direction of President Taft, contained two letters from Mr. Taft giving his reasons for not permitting Major Ray to be courtmartialed on charge brought against him by his personal clerk, who accused Major Ray of misconduct involving his, the clerk's wife. The president said that, in his opinion, "the honor of the army and the good name of a woman" would suffer if Major Ray were courtmartialed.

Several Perish in Fire.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 27.—Two men are dead and several others are supposed to have perished in a fire in the Gilman house.

Snead Jury Unable to Agree.

Fort Worth, Feb. 27.—The jury in the case of John B. Snead, charged with the murder of Captain A. D. Boyce, Sr., is apparently unable to reach an agreement. The jury sent for Judge Swayne and announced that there was no possibility of reaching a verdict. The judge sent the jurors back with instruction to deliberate further. Since that time there has been no indications that a verdict would be forthcoming. It is believed that unless a verdict is reached by today a mis-trial will be entered.

CONGRESS HAS A BUSY DAY

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES VOTES TO PROBE THE MONEY COMBINE.

WAS NEARLY UNANIMOUS

To Investigate Proposed Panama Canal Tolls—Bill Introduced by Senator Poindexter to Abolish Commerce Court.

Washington, Feb. 27.—An investigation to determine whether there is a "money trust" in the United States operating through or in connection with the national banks, was ordered by the house by a vote of 270 to 8. While Republican regulars and insurgents protested that the inquiry as proposed was a "sham" and a "delusion," the Democratic forces united in support of a compromise "money trust" resolution, and succeeded in securing all but eight Republican votes in its support.

Usage of Panama to Stifle Rates.

In an effort to preserve and promote the interests of the government by the protection and development of full, fair, open and profitable use of the Panama canal by the ships of commerce and war of all people and all nations the house interstate and foreign commerce committee embarked on a general investigation of charges of ship trusts, subsidies and other rumors of impropriety in the usage of the canal after it is opened.

The resolution was introduced by the chairman of the committee, Representative Adamson, of Georgia. It recited the need of a thorough inquiry into the charges that the canal will be used by trans-continental railroads to stifle competition in freight rates. It empowers the committee to call the aid of the government executive departments to summon witnesses and put them under oath and to get papers and other information throwing light on the matter. The result of the investigation will be in recommendations for laws appropriate to the needs disclosed by the inquiry.

Would Abolish Trade Court.

Senator Poindexter of Washington, opened his campaign for the abolition of the commerce court by advocating before the senate interstate commerce committee his bill to end the court's existence. Senator Townsend asked questions designed to show that only those who opposed the creation of the court were disappointed with it. Senator Clarke of Arkansas, declared if the court did not change its attitude he would favor limiting its powers or abolishing it although he had voted to create it.

Would Settle Land Titles.

Washington.—Representative Steenerson introduced a bill designed to give relief to a large number of settlers in the White Earth reservation by quieting the title to the 2,800 allotments which have not been brought into question by federal law suits.

There are now approximately 1,200 allotments being challenged by the governments, and because of this situation the titles to all neighboring allotments have become clouded. It is to remedy this situation that Mr. Steenerson has introduced his bill.

One provision of the bill is to the effect that the federal authorities shall have 90 days in which to bring suit against any of the allotments affected by his measure, but after that time, no action can be brought against the title of the lands.

Appropriation High Dam Work.

Washington.—The river and harbors appropriation bill contains an appropriation of $1,250,000 for continuing the improvement of the Mississippi river from St. Louis to Minneapolis, and $200,000 for containing construction of the high dam in the Mississippi river in the vicinit oyf Minneapolis. Other Minnesota items contained in the bill are the following: Warroad river, for maintenance of channel, $3,200; Duluth harbor, for continuing improvement at Superior entrance, $150,000; Red River of the North, $17,000, for continuing improvements and for resurvey looking toward additional improvement; survey of old canal route between Mississippi river and Lake Superior with a view to permanent improvement, St. Croix river, to be surveyed for future improvement.

The bill carries $25,965,010, the smallest amount since 1894.

The largest of the improvements appropriated in the bill are $5,400,000 for the Ohio river and for the Mississippi, $5,950,000; Missouri river, $800,000; Delaware river, $700,000, and Tennessee river, $350,000.

Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 27.—Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, woman tennis champion of the United States, was married to George William Wightman of Brooklyn, Mass.

New Motor Boat Records.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 27.—The Oregon Wolf, a nine-cylinder hydroplane, in a sanctioned race against time here broke the world's motor boat records on a five-mile course for all distances up to 30 miles. The Oregon Wolf's time for the 30 miles was 42 minutes 14 2-5 seconds, the best previous record over a six lap course was 44 minutes 33 1-5 seconds made by the Dixie IV of St. Louis in 1911. The Oregon Wolf was driven by John E. Wolf of this city, her owner and builder.

MAN AND WIFE FOUND DEAD

FINDING OF BODIES STIRS POLICE TO POISON PROBE.

Mystery in Discovery of Package Believed to Have Contained Arsenic.

Chicago, Feb. 27. — Six unopened bottles of milk and a dead cat led the police of Waukegan, Ill., to the discovery of a poisoning mystery.

Because of them, they broke open the doors of a residence in the north shore suburb and found the bodies of John Jenstrom, a well-to-do contractor and his wife, Anna. Both had been dead several days.

An inspection of the premises resulted in the finding of a package, believed to have contained arsenic, the remnant of a meal which is thought to have been the last one the couple ate before their death. The food, believed to have contained arsenic will be analyzed by a chemist.

Jenstrom owned the house in which he and his wife lived in semi-seclusion, not mixing with their neighbors or seeming to care for social life.

He also owned considerable real estate in Waukegan and it is thought to have been worth several thousand dollars. So far as is known he had no relatives, intimate friends nor enemies.

For several days the neighbors noticed that neither left the house and they began to wonder at it. Then the dead cat was discovered, curled up on the front porch and the police were notified.

They found the bodies of the contractor and his wife in their bed. There were no signs of violence.

COLUMBIAN LEAGUE MADE OVER.

President Powers Announces Re-arranged Circuit of Clubs.

St. Louis, Feb. 27.—John T. Powers, president of the proposed Columbian baseball league, says the proposed circuit of cities where teams will be located has been arranged. The re-arranged circuit, according to Powers, includes Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Louisville, St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City and either Milwaukee or Indianapolis.

Turk Warship Sunk; 30 Die.

Constantinople, Feb. 27.—According to the latest dispatches from Beirut, the forts, the Corvette Avnillah and a torpedo boat replied to the Italian fire. The Avnillah was struck and soon was in flames. The torpedo boat was sunk. Thirty persons were killed. About 50 persons were wounded. Government buildings were also shelled. The Italian warships, at the conclusion of the bombardment, steamed away. It is believed that the Italians will continue their attacks on other coast towns.

"Universal Healer" Arrested.

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 27.—Federal officers arrested Harry Daverkosen on the charge of fraudulent use of the mails in claiming he was a medium and clairvoyant and could cure all the ills of mankind. A large mail sack of letters, which the prisoner had received and another sack full of his paraphernalia were seized. Daverkosen was arraigned and held under $1,000 bonds for appearance March 5.

Harvard Professor Dies.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 27.—Charles Robert Sanger, Ph. D., professor of chemistry and director of the chemical laboratory at Harvard university, died following a nervous breakdown.

Winnifred Green Takes Life.

Kansas City, Feb. 27.—Before the applause had died away after Winnifred Green had sung her song hit, "A Skeleton Rag," at a theater here, the girl swallowed carbolic acid in her dressing room.

Gipsies Defy Police.

Fulda, Germany, Feb. 27.—The district surrounding this city have been in a state of virtual war for a week, owing to the presence of a band of gipsies who, after committing three murders, sought refuge in the forests

SERIAL STORY

No Man's Land

A ROMANCE

By Louis Joseph Vance

(Copyright, 1910, by Louis Joseph Vance.)

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas, names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise.

Blackstock spoke abruptly the instant Coast succeeded in forcing the door to—abruptly and harshly, but with a certain jerky intonation that betrayed jangled nerves: an involuntary confession most welcome to its hearer; this was, after all, with all its viciousness, a human being—no such nerveless monster of blood and iron as Appleyard had pictured in his narrative of the hour of the assassination, or even as Coast had come to figure the man in his long days of hopeless brooding.

"Who's that?" he cried. "Who's there? What the devil—"

He paused to control his agitation. But Coast withheld his reply an appreciable moment. Then, "Mr. Black, I believe?" he said quietly.

"Black!" The man started at sound of an unfamiliar voice, and Coast saw his great frame quiver—slightly, indeed, but perceptibly. "That's my name," he continued hoarsely. "But . . . who are you? . . . What d'you mean by coming in here without knocking?" he added with a show of bluster.

"I knocked—several times," Coast lied steadily. "The wind, doubtless . . . Sorry I startled you; thought you'd be expecting me."

"Expecting you!" Blackstock moved impatiently. "But, damn it, who are you? Can't you give yourself a name?"

"Why, Handyside, of course." Coast's tone was a perfection of polite surprise. "Surely," it seemed to say, "you must've been looking for me!" Distrusting deliberately artificial inflections, he was at pains to speak crisply, as was not his habit; such being the only way he could think of to disguise his voice. He was watching Blackstock closely, alert for a sign of recognition in the man's expression. Somewhat to his surprise he detected none. "I got orders to come here and relieve Power last night," he continued. "Came down this morning to New Bedford and—"

The words froze upon his lips. A door to his left had opened; Katherine stood there, watching, listening. Apparently she had started to enter without any suspicion that her husband was not talking to one of the servants, and in her astonishment had stopped. The figure of the man by the door could not but be strange to her, masked as its every line and contour was by clumsy and fitless oilskins and the deep shadow cast by the broad turned-down brim of a sou'wester. Yet Coast thought to discern a deathless apprehension in her pose, a mute but infinitely pitiful question in her eyes. And his heart stood still, for the crucial instant was imminent; in another minute, two at most, she would know him. And then . . .?

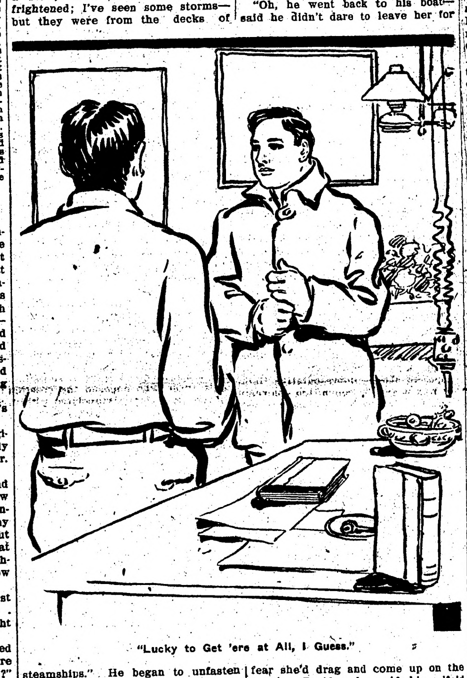
"Well?" Blackstock roused him. "What you stopping for? I'm listening!"

"I beg pardon." Coast tugged at the button on the chin-strap of his sou'wester. "The lady there . . . I didn't know . . ."

Blackstock turned his head impatiently, moving his sightless eyes in the direction of Katherine. "Oh," he said, "my wife—"

The woman moved quickly into the room. "Yes," she said, still with her eyes to the stranger. "It is I, Douglas. I didn't know—I fancied one of the servants . . ."

"This is Mr. Handyside," Blackstock told her sharply, as if irritated by the interruption; "he's to take Power's place—"



"Lucky to Get 'ere at All, I Guess."

Coast removed his sou'wester and came forward a pace, so that the light was strong upon his face. "Yes, ma'am," he said, "I'm the new operator. "How d'you do?" He contrived to keep his tone coolly respectful and impersonal, but his eyes were pleading with her, and he hung upon the issue of her response as a condemned man lives in the hope of a reprieve.

She knew him now; his action in discovering his features had but hastened slightly the confirmation of her most dread premonition. And of a sudden her face was a mask of chalk set with eyes that blazed with cold fires of terror. Coast saw her sway, but though he feared she was about to faint, dared not move to her assistance. Indeed, there was no need; she was fashioned of sterner stuff; though every atom of her being shuddered, she remained mistress of herself. An instant's delay would have been damning; she knew that . . . and her answer fell pat as he ceased to speak.

"Good evening," she said so admirably that there was even a hint of languid indifference in her voice. "You have surprised us, Mr. Handyside."

"Lord, yes!" Blackstock broke in. "It's hard to believe. D'you mean to tell me you made the run through this storm?"

The blood flowed back into Coast's heart. He flashed the woman a look of thanks, but her gaze was blank as it met his, and he knew that as yet she existed and guided her actions automatically. The real awakening to the situation was yet to come—nor with her would it be long delayed. The crisis was not yet past.

"Well," he said, with a careless half-laugh, "I'm here, you see. It is a blow, that's a fact. Had me frightened; I've seen some storms—but they were from the decks of steamships." He began to unfasten the oilskin coat. "Lucky to get here at all, I guess."

"That's true, or I'm no judge of weather. I wonder you managed to get Finn and Hecksher to take the chance."

"They didn't want to." Coast offered up a fervent prayer of gratitude for the fortuitous turn of the conversation that had supplied him with the names of Mr. Handyside's traveling companions. "But I was told to hustle because Power was leaving you practically without notice, so I insisted. Of course the fog held us up all morning; and then we had to have an accident?"

"How's that?" Blackstock sat down heavily, still with his staring eyes turned toward Coast, his face clouded with thoughtfulness. "Where are they, anyway?" he continued without pause, as one reminded of an oversight. "Finn—Hecksher—why aren't they with you?"

"Oh, they're all right," Coast parried, making time for Katherine, whose struggle to retain her poise and comprehend just what it all meant was engaging his attention to such a degree that he had to force himself to give heed to Blackstock. "You don't need to worry about them."

Blackstock leaned forward, scowling intently. "What d'you mean by that? Didn't they bring you here?"

"Only part way; you see, this accident I mentioned—"

"What sort of an accident? Hang it, if they didn't bring you— Where'd you leave them?"

"Safe enough—high and dry—aground in Quick's Hole."

"The devil you say! How'd Finn come to run the Corsair aground? Why, he knows more about this coast—"

"Not his fault. It came about kindness of some amateur asses—beg pardon, Mrs. Black; I'm quoting Mr. Finn—in a catboat. . . . They almost ran us down when we were about midway through the Hole—didn't seem to know what they were doing; and in trying to avoid a collision we piled up on a shoal on the lefthand side of the channel—forget the name of the island it makes off from."

Coast hesitated in assumed perplexity, in acual trepidation more acute than he cared to acknowledge even to himself.

"Pasque, you mean?"

"That's it." But though his story seemed to be credited, the tension held unrelaxed; Katherine was recovering from her shock and . . . What would she do when she had had time to take second thought? Would her primal impulse shield him, to further his deception, prevail? Or would some mad concept of duty force her to expose him and bring ruin down upon them both?

He could not keep his eyes from her. Not a detail of her attitude escaped him, not a convulsive movement of her hand (in whose rosy hollow lay his life and hers) . . . She stood unmoving by the table, one hand touching it for support.

Meanwhile he heard himself talking, responding glibly to Blackstock's testy catechism.

"But how the devil'd you get here, then?"

"Pure luck. We'd been stuck about half an hour when a fisherman—fellow named Wise, from Vineyard Haven—came along, trying to beat the storm home. We hailed him and he luffed up to us—he could do that with his boat, a light-draught Cape Cod cat; and I offered him a ten-spot to bring me on. You see, I understood it was an emergency case. He held back a bit, but the sight of the money fetched him; and he earned it. I wouldn't take that trip again for a hundred dollars."

"Well, then . . . But what's become of him?"

"Oh, he went back to his boat—said he didn't dare to leave her for fear she'd drag and come up on the beach. Besides, he said his wife'd be fretting about him and he wanted to be ready to beat back the first sign of a let up."

"I see." Blackstock nodded slowly. "You must be pretty well used up." He laid his hand as if abstractedly upon the table beside him, moved it to and fro, found the edge of the whisky tray, and grasped the neck of the decanter. "You've earned a drink, Handyside?"

"Thank you," he said, "but I'm on the wagon."

Blackstock chuckled. "That's your affair," he said. I'm not." There was a grain of combative bravado in the latter words. He splashed whisky into a tumbler and diluted it with a little water, finding the objects with an adroitness on a par with that which had excited Appleyard's interest. "Health," he said, tersely, and drank.

The woman roused herself. "Perhaps Mr. Handyside will sit down," she suggested in a toneless voice.

Her eyes challenged Coast's. He looked away, unable to endure their pitiful defiance. The drama of her life had needed but this last heart-rending touch. There are tragedies in women's life beside which death itself is trifling.

"No, thanks; I'm all wet." He wondered to hear his own voice so steady and in character with his impersonation. "About done up, too. If you don't mind, I'd like to turn in."

"I'll show you the way." Blackstock rose. "You're to have Power's room."

Coast's glance was instant to the woman's face and found it inscrutable. Did she or did she not suspect? . . .

"Power won't mind?" he asked quickly; and still she showed no sign.

45 NEW EMBALMERS

State Board of Health Holds Examination At St. Paul.

St. Paul.—Miss Margaret M. O'Brien of Preston was the one woman among forty-five persons given licenses as embalmers by the state board of health as the result of examinations Feb. 2. There are two Minneapolis men in the list, which follows: Henry E. Anderson, Minneota; Walter J. Borden, St. Paul; Horace F. Bell, St. Paul; Berner Blomquist, Delano; Walter F. Bowers, Finlayson; Rutherford B. Burr, Minneapolis; John L. Cofer, Howard Lake; John E. Cronin, Rochester; O. F. De Groat, Spring Valley; Henry A. Dobratz, Hutchinson; William Drummond, Ceylon; Archie L. Dunlap, Duluth; Gustav T. Falk, Foley; John T. Fielding, Trego, Wis.; Leo. M. Finnegan, St. Paul; Emil J. Florin, Cochrane, Wis.; Benjamin Foss, Cottonwood; Edward A. Gillespie, Virginia; George L. Griffin, St. Paul; George Grummett, Ishpeming, Mich.; Edwin Halliday, Ellsworth, Wis.; Frank M. Hensler, Henderson, James H. Hynes, St. Paul; Albert C. Johnson, Taylor, N. D.; Owen D. Jones, St. Paul; William J. Kenney, Browns Valley; James J. Little, Madison; Austin E. McInnis, Gilbert; Homer I. Merricks, Minneapolis; Geo. O. Nelson, Randall; Ellsworth J. Norman, Blue Earth; Miss Margaret M. O'Brien, Preston; Darwin S. Olsen, Atwater; C. A. Olund, Duluth; Ignatius Pederson, Fosston; John P. Pederson, Ladysmith, Wis.; John Peterson, St. Paul; William C. Sawinske, Rochester; Louis F. Schuetz, Hartland; Gilford B. Severson, Glenwood; Ralph Sheehan, Caledonia; Arthur W. Shepard, North St. Paul; Carl R. Strand, Northfield; James E. Walker, Hawarden, Ia.; William Young, Jr., Arlington.

A UNION CHURCH

Is Being Considered by Protestant Bodies At Crookston.

Crookston.—The Union Protestant Church proposition is the talk of Crookston and it is believed that in a few weeks the idea will assume tangible shape.

The situation among Protestant churches in Crookston is similar to that in many other cities. The city has fifteen or more Protestant churches, every one of which is carrying an indebtedness. There is not a modern Protestant church in the city. All are frame structures. Three have been without regular pastors at intervals, and two are without pastors now and practically closed.

The union church idea has the support of the leading men of the Baptist, Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian and several of the Scandinavian churches.

The tentative idea is for all to unite, turn in all the church property, have a strict business administration of the affairs of the church, erect a building at a cost of about $100,000, and call a pastor who will preach the gospel with all narrow creeds eliminated. The plans call for a Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. equipped with gymnasiums and instructors.

The plan is popular with the general public and it is argued that such a church could be financed easily without anyone bearing a burden. A great deal will depend upon the action of the Methodist congregation, and if the plan is favored by that church, there is little question but what it will be approved by other churches.

SET GUNS ARE NOT USED

Dangerous Practice Is Disappearing, According to Game Warden Rider.

St. Paul.—With the hunting season for big game and small game practically closed, not one set-gun has been found in Minnesota. According to the belief of H. A. Rider, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, the custom will likely not be revived.

"In previous years," said Mr. Rider, "hunters have loaded up blunderbusses with powerful charges of buckshot, placed a carcass before it for bait, attached a string to the carcass so that when moved the gun would be discharged, and often killed timber animals. This was only one of the many methods used with set-guns. But the charge originally intended for animals, frequently took effect in the bodies of men or domestic stock. Set-guns were so dangerous, that a law against their use was enacted. Apparently, hunters either have become more law-abiding or more humane."

New School House At Kimball.

Kimball.—The new $18,000 school building, which was built to replace the building destroyed by fire, was dedicated by Superintendent Boergens of Stearns county, President W. A. Shoemaker of the St. Cloud normal school, and Governor A. O. Eberhart. C. D. Brower, treasurer of the school district, made a brief statement. Dr. Sherwood presided over the meeting. After the exercises in the city hall the crowd repaired to the schoolhouse, where a reception was held and lunch was served.

BANKS RECEIVE LESS

Falling Off of 50 Per Cent In Funds to Be Placed by the State.

St. Paul.—Minnesota banks which are used as state depositors, will receive only 50 per cent of the usual amount of deposits this year, according to a letter sent to these depositories by Walter J. Smith, state treasurer. This money will be forwarded to the banks as soon as possible after March 1, and the cash that will be available at the time of distribution is estimated by the treasurer to be approximately $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 less than last year at the same time.

Many banks have been added to the list of depositories since last year, and this will decrease the amount received by each. Another reason for the decrease is that at the beginning of last year the state had a larger amount of cash on hand than usual because it had just won several suits compelling the railroads to pay back taxes to the state. These amounted to about $800,000.

Still another reason for the decrease in available funds is the payment of more than $1,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness against the new Capitol, as authorized by the last Legislature. The Legislature also made appropriations for other causes which have been drawn against the state so that the treasurer has been compelled to make more than the usual amount of temporary loans in order to meet the state's obligations.

Receipts from all corporations have fallen off during the past year. Receipts from railroads have decreased nearly $700,000 and the collections from other corporations who pay the state a tax have fallen off in about the same proportions.

DITCH APPEAL FEARED

Attorney General Says Board May Stir Up Attack on Whole System.

St. Paul.—Whether to appeal from the decision of Judge Flaherty of Morris, who held the appropriation for the improvement of the Mustinka ditch in Traverse county to be a valid legislative act, or to go ahead with the work, is worrying the members of the state drainage board. For nearly a month now the board has been wrestling with the question. To carry the decision of Judge Flaherty on an appeal to the supreme court, the board members say, would open up the question of the legality of all this work, and as the result is uncertain, the members are reluctant to take the initiative.

By some the building of ditches, which is now a feature of reclamation work in the upper part of the state, is regarded as internal improvement, and this is forbidden by the constitution.

MORE SCHOOLS STARTED

One Result of Increased Immigration to Beltrami County.

Bemidji.—Increased immigration has made it necessary to establish new schools in Beltrami county. A school of from twelve to fifteen pupils has been opened in a rented building on the north shore of Kitichi lake, southeast of Bemidji. Mrs. Anna R. Fitch of St. Cloud is the teacher. On March 4 a new school will be started on the north shore of Upper Red lake, township 155-32.

Five Minnetonka Cottages Burn.

Minneapolis.—Five cottages on the Methodist assembly grounds at Holdridge, Lake Minnetonka, were destroyed by fire of unknown origin. They were used by the Epworth league at its annual assembly each summer. Twenty other cottages belonging to the assembly were not damaged. The loss is about $1,000.

New Industry For Cass Lake.

Cass Lake.—W. E. La Fountain, who came here recently from Tupper Lake, N. Y., left for Chicago to purchase machinery for making concrete brick at Cass Lake. He expects to take up his permanent residence in Cass Lake after completing one more contract in New York.

Swedish Lutheran Meetings End.

Moorhead.—Special services in the Comstock and Wolverton churches closed the district convention of the Swedish Lutheran church. Rev. N. Washlund of Detroit, Minn., and Rev. N. O. Grundeen of Fargo were the speakers.

NORTH SHORE ICE MOVES

Duluth.—The big field of ice on the north shore east of Two Harbors and down to Grand Marais moved out and exposed the open bosom of the lake. The ice field was "hull down" on the horizon to the east. The going out of the ice on the north shore did not disturb the icebound steamer Crescent, which is well sheltered at Two Islands, or the two motor boats at Beaver Bay.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The Silver Cup at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

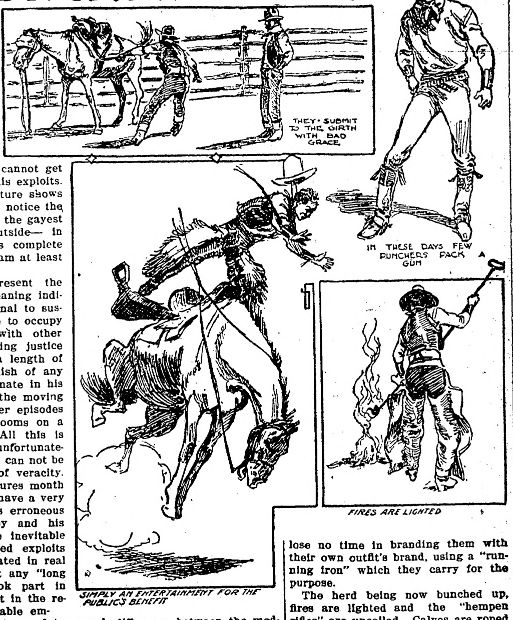
THE PUNCHER of TODAY



THEY SUBMIT TO THE GIRTH WITH BAD GRACE

IN THESE DAYS FEW PUNCHERS PACK A GUN

FIRES ARE LIGHTED

SIMPLY AN ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE PUBLIC'S BENEFIT

THE cow puncher, like the poor, is always with us, if not in the flesh, then at least in some of the moving picture shows to be found in every street. Go where you will in the English speaking world, you cannot get away from the puncher and his exploits. If you don't patronize the picture shows themselves, you cannot fail to notice the man in the "chaps" printed in the gayest of colors on the posters outside— in fact, no picture show seems complete unless it includes in its program at least one cowboy picture.

The pictures usually represent the puncher as a happy, well meaning individual, with a miniature arsenal to sustain the effect, who has little to occupy his time except meddling with other people's business, administering justice with the aid of a tree and a length of rope and being in at the finish of any love affairs which may culminate in his neighborhood. According to the moving picture authorities these latter episodes seem to crop up like mushrooms on a moor in the cow country. All this is very nice and romantic, but, unfortunately, if the truth is to be told, it can not be stamped with the hallmark of veracity.

After viewing these pictures month after month the public must have a very exalted though none the less erroneous idea of the average cowboy and his work. If we leave out the inevitable "girl" some of these pictured exploits might well have been duplicated in real life in the "early" days, but any "long haired" plainsmen who took part in them have now to be content in the recounting of them (with suitable embellishments, probably) to their grandchildren—if they are lucky enough to have any.

There are no two callings in the world today surrounded by so much romance, and about which so much has been written as those of plainsmen and sailors, and yet withal, the general public has a very hazy and sometimes absurd conception regarding the life and members of both professions. Perhaps that the fact that the real work of both callings is done far away from the public ken, thus allowing plenty of latitude for a vivid imagination, is responsible for many of the false impressions concerning them.

In the first place, the average puncher might work on the ranges three or four years and at the end of that period be able to count all the "girls" he had ever seen on the fingers of one hand; and a visit to the "home" ranches would probably reveal as many Chinese as ladies, and it is hard to imagine anything romantic connected with a Chinese. The "bosses" see to it that while the puncher is on the payroll he has mighty little time for anything outside of hard work.

Again, in these days few punchers pack a gun. Years ago, when cattle rustling was rampant, it was advisable that the stockmen should be provided with guns, as the rustlers themselves went armed; but the real use of the gun dates back to the time when fences and lineriders were practically unknown. Thus, during some big stampede, when thousands of dollars' worth of beef was running headlong to destruction and all ordinary means had failed to check it, as a last resource the foremost rider would shoot down some of the leaders, thus checking the rush and enabling the riders to "circle" the bunch; that process by which alone big herds can be kept under control, when they show a tendency to be restless. It consists in making the fringe of the herd move in a circle around the rest of the bunch; thus the cattle themselves are made to head off their fellows, until finally the entire herd is one huge revolving mass of flesh.

But at the present time fences and restricted ranges have almost rendered these big stampedes things of the past and the type of men who coped with them and with hostile Indians has disappeared.

While the modern cowboy is called upon in a roundup to do much strenuous work, during which the safety from accident is measured almost entirely by the sure footedness of his pony and his skill as a rider, mischance is the sum total of risk to life he has to run.

Some persons having in mind the "frontier celebration" held at Cheyenne, Wyo., will be inclined to doubt this statement, but it must be remembered that these gatherings, which are held annually in all big cow centers, are simply entertainments for the public's benefit and to demonstrate the skill attained by certain individuals picked out of thousands. Their reckless disregard for limb or life is not general among the punchers. What a man may do in the ordinary course of his work and what he is willing to do for the love of applause or for money, may be two widely different things.

Some of the most skillful and intrepid broncho busters to be seen in exhibitions never go near a cow camp from one year's end to another. Several of these "high priced attractions" are engaged in the sheep shearing business; another drives his own team and "rig" in connection with the transfer business. So these exhibitions must not be taken as a criterion of the character and work of the $75 a month puncher or the all the year round stock hand. The fact is there is as much difference between the modern stockhand and the old timer as there is between a deckhand on a river boat and a deep sea sailor.

The old time cowpuncher considered teaming in any form beneath his dignity, and would have viewed any request to handle the lines much as a present day plumber would regard the suggestion of having a shovel added to his tool bag. For this reason in bygone days the roundup cook had to be an expert teamster; but, as is to be expected, where such an unusual combination of talents is required, that member of outfit's long suit was seldom within the culinary department. While the old cowboy's lot was cast in more strenuous days than now, still he was more independent and enjoyed better opportunities of acquiring his own herd, whereas the present day puncher can hardly expect to attain anything beyond the status of a foreman.

Practically all the cattle ranches of any consequence are now owned or controlled by companies, or perhaps trusts would be a better name.

During the last ten years wages have decreased for range work, and with the decline in wages the work has become more general. Nowadays the cattle owners hire their regular help by the season or the year, and outside their work during the roundup their "job" and surroundings are much the same as those of the farmer's hired man. The states of Montana and Wyoming pay the highest wages for range work, riders receiving $75 a month and board. On the other side of the line wages are about 20 per cent. lower for the same work. These wages only obtain during the roundup, which time corresponds in the conduct of a cattle ranch to the harvest season of the grain farmer, and many of the punchers work for $40 a month and less for the rest of the year.

There are two big roundups during the year, the spring roundup and fall, or beef, roundup. The spring roundup, which takes place in May or June, is perhaps the busiest time of the year. A foreman is chosen from each district. Usually he is the son or relative of the manager or owner of the ranch he is attached to. Each foreman or captain brings a number of cowboys with him, the number varying according to the cattle his employer is estimated to have running range. The work is apportioned and the helpers are under semi-military organization. Each puncher is provided with from five to eight ponies, and the whole district, sometimes covering hundreds of square miles, is laid out in daily rides. As a rule four to five weeks are required to cover the country.

The riders travel in pairs, as a rule, and much patience, coupled with keen observation, is necessary if their work is to be thorough; watercourses must be followed, and the country carefully searched for stragglers some of which occasionally turn up only after a year or two.

Daybreak finds a roundup camp astir, and the saddle horses having been corralled by the night wrangler, whose duty it is to herd the work ponies during the night, by 6 so'clock the riders have caught and saddled their respective mounts and are away "chasing beef." In the first stages of the roundup they will probably not be back for 15 or 16 hours.

The puncher must stand alike severe heat and drenching rains when after cattle, and this with no prospect of relief until the work of the roundup is completed. When all the cattle apparently have been rounded up to a common center an enumeration is made, beef stock selected and calves branded. It might be mentioned here that if during these expeditions the riders come across any unbranded yearlings, and there is nothing to suggest what outfit they originally belonged to, they lose no time in branding them with their own outfit's brand, using a "running iron" which they carry for the purpose.

The herd being now bunched up, fires are lighted and the "hempen rifles" are uncoiled. Calves are roped and dragged to the branding fires, where a couple of men on foot grab and hold the calf, clearing the lariat so that the rider may be free to fetch another one. They then apply the heated irons for two or three seconds. The branding completed, they administer a gentle kick to the bewildered calf to remind him he is free, and they are ready for the next. This goes on until all the calves and yearlings have been branded.

The climatic and physical conditions of the country seem to have quite an effect on the cattle running wild. Their breeding propensities vary according to the country.

Each member of a herd seems to know its place, and prefers its own to any other herd, but like all other rules this one is proved by exceptions, and sometimes in a large herd calves will get mixed up and separated from their mothers, and in such cases disputes will arise as to the ownership of the calves. If not satisfactorily settled otherwise, the calf in dispute is taken to the fire and the branding irons applied with not sufficient pressure, however, to make a permanent mark, but sufficiently to burn the calf and make it cry out. In a moment there is an answering bellow from one of the herds, followed by a stir among the cattle, who seem almost to make a gangway for the concerned mother as she rushes to answer the call of her calf. A rope is shot around her hind legs as she leaves the fringe of the herd, allowing her no chance to make any serious objections, her brand is observed and the calf branded accordingly. Justice is served. The cow and calf are turned loose again, and it is a fine sight to watch them "beat it" together for the herd.

The branding done and stock taking finished, the beef ready for shipping is driven to the home range to await actual shipment, and the remainder of the cattle are once more free to wander the hills and plains until the fall, when the big drive will take place.

The rounding up of cattle is sometimes difficult, as they, unlike horses, frequently take a notion to split up in bunches and head off in all directions, making much work for the riders.

Cattle are not roped as are horses. The latter are thrown by their forelegs, the cattle roped by their hindlegs. The reason for these different methods will be readily understood when one remembers that, while a horse rises from the ground with his forelegs, the cattle are able to rise only with their hind legs. In the case of the horses also, they are less liable to be injured or to injure themselves when thrown in this way.

The cow pony enjoys the chase, the puncher's "Haloo-oo!" being to him what the hunter's horn is to the hound. He understands every movement of his rider, who, wether at work or play, seldom touches a bridle rein. Should he wish to gallop he lifts his elbows and he is borne away; if he wishes to go to the right or to the left he leans slightly in either direction, and a gentle touch on the pony's neck is sufficient to pull him up. When the rider is about to make a throw the pony slows up, and when he sees the rope uncoil ahead of him he advance again and finally stops dead as the loop settles about steer, jerks back his head, stiffens his neck and prepares for the shock, aiding the rider in throwing his victim, and all this of his own accord and without having received any spoken command from his rider.

The kind of cow puncher we read about, who was as indelibly marked with the physical characteristics of his calling as were the cattle he herded with the brand of their owners, has given way to the less hardy and picturesque cowboy or stockhand of today, who may be beating a train tomorrow or driving team in the city.

FEWER U.S. CONVICTS

British System for Reforming Army Deserters to Be Tried.

Criminals to Be Sent to Alcatraz While Men Guilty of Purely Military Offenses Are to Go to Fort Leavenworth Prison.

Washington.—A sweeping change in military prison methods was instituted by orders of the War Department. All of the short term prisoners of Alcatraz island, San Francisco, have been ordered transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

All of the long term prisoners in the latter institution, about 270, to be transferred to Alcatraz, which will thus be made the place of confinement for the criminal element, while Leavenworth will be the place of detention of soldiers guilty of purely military offenses. To save transportation expenses, a second criminal jail is created at Fort Jay, Governor's Island, N. Y.

The effects of these changes is to carry out the recently developed British system of treating deserters and other soldiers guilty of breaches of discipline as subject to reformatory influences and of segregating them from the absolutely criminal and vicious class.

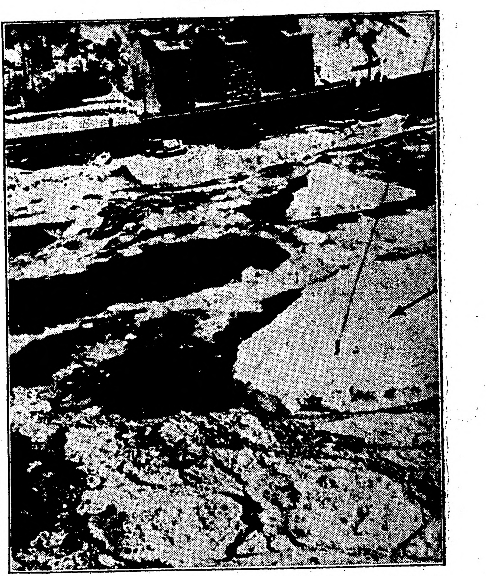
In a report, giving the result of a recent inspection by him of the "detention barracks" of the British army the inspector general of the United States army, Gen. E. A. Garlington, said:

"It took five or six years for the detention system in England to establish itself, but it apparently has saved many men from trouble and from degenerating into hardened cases. They evidently endeavor in this system to apply humane common sense in the treatment of men in trouble. This gives an opportunity for the men to recover their self-respect and respond to any patriotic instinct which, under the stigma of prison life and its demoralizing environment, cannot be expected to survive."

In his recent report General Wood, chief of staff, recommended that the British system be given a trial in the United States. Under the present system in the United States, a soldier convicted of desertion becomes a "convict" and loses not only opportunity again to serve in the army but his citizenship as well.

Under the British system the deserter when apprehended, or men found guilty of other purely military offenses, are sent to the detention barracks. When they are believed to have reformed they are restored to duty with their regiments. If they are found to be undesirable for further service they are discharged.

NIAGARA HERO GRASPING ROPE



HERE is an actual photograph of the fatal Niagara Falls ice bridge tragedy. It shows young Burrell Hecock of Cleveland, O., in the act of grasping the rope dropped from the cantilever bridge after he had made a heroic attempt to rescue Mrs. Stanton. Hecock was drawn part of the way up to the bridge, but his strength failed and he fell back and perished in the torrent.

OLD LEAP YEAR LAWS

Customs Originated in an Ancient European Superstition.

Man Who Refused to Marry When He Was Proposed To Fined Under Scotch Act of 1288—Privileges Granted Women.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—History gives the "ladies' leap year privilege" as a well accepted fact. It is an old one, becoming a part of the common law of social life in Great Britain as early as 1606. "Courtship, Love and Matrimony," published in that year, says:

"Albeit it is nowe become a part of the common lawe, in regard to the social relations of life, that as often as every bissextile year doth return, the ladyes have the sole privilege, during the time it continueth, of making love unto the men, which they doe either by words or lookes, as to them it seemeth proper, and moreover no man will be entitled to the benefit of clergy who doth in any wise treate her proposal withe slight or contumely."

One legend by which it is attempted to account for the origin of the privilege relates that an appeal was made to St. Patrick to accord the women the same right of proposing at any time as the men have. This he refused, but was willing to concede the right every seventh year. Finally, as a compromise, he agreed that women should enjoy the right every four years, and that this year should be the longest of the four.

In 1288 it is said that a law was enacted in Scotland that:

"It is stut and ordeint that during the rein of hir maist Blissit megests, for like years known as lepe year, lik maiden ladye of both highe and lowe estaite shall hae liberte to bespeake ye man she likes; albeit he refuses to talk hir to be his lawful wife, he shall be mulcted in ye sum ane pundid or less, as his estaite may be; except and awis gif he can make it appear that he is betrothit ane ithr woman he shall then be free."

A like law is said to have been passed in France about the same time. In the fifteenth century the custom was legalized in Genoa and Florence. In Scotland, in later years, and perhaps at present, the women have the privilege at many private dances of choosing their own partners in a leap year. Men stand about the walls of the room, like veritable wall flowers, waiting "to be asked." They look pictures of sheepish anxiety until they are courtesyed to and led forth to the dance by the fair one. Frequent "asking" is supposed to accentuate the "hint" that a proposal trembles on the lips of the fair one.

Laborer Finds $30,000.

Wife Spanked Her Rival

Mrs. Jennie Russ of Wilkesbarre, Pa., Says She Chastised Miss Sue Phillips.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Mrs. Jennie Russ of this city, who lost her suit to have her husband found guilty of non-support, charged that the husband, Christian Russ of this city, spent much time and money in entertaining Miss Sue Phillips, and that in consequence he deserted her.

She admitted that recently she had decoyed Miss Phillips into the private room of a hotel and had spanked her soundly. The husband said that after a quarrel with his wife she had gone to his bank and drawn out all his money, so that he could not give her any. Judge Strauss on hearing this dismissed the case.

New Diamond Field Found

Stones Worth $150,000 Taken Monthly From the Farm of an Old Boer in Western Transvaal.

London.—According to information received in London a new diamond field has been discovered in the Western Transvaal. The site is the farm of an old Boer at Mooifontein, in the district of Bloemhof. Mooifontein now has a population of more than 6,000 drawn there by the diamond fields. The development of the diamond field was the outcome of the rush of miners to Bloemhof, a village on the Vaal river, 220 miles from Johannesburg.

A little more than a year ago a Dutch farmer discovered diamonds near Bloemhof and some diggers from mining camps went there. Among the prospectors were the sons of the old Boer at Mooifontein. They found that the gravel in which the diamonds were found was identical with gravel on their father's farm and went home to investigate it.

They struck pay dirt immediately. Last September the government issued a proclamation declaring a portion of the farm to be an alluvial digging and the rush to stake claims was begun. Mooifontein was the name of the old Boer's farm. It is now a small city.

In November the owner, who was receiving $3,000 a month in house fees from the claim holders, protested against the purpose to open more of his farm to diamond seekers. He said that many of those who came had brought cattle and sheep which were devastating his fields. The field is now yielding about $150,000 a month in diamonds which are of a quality commanding $20 a carat. Owing to shortage of labor the amount of digging is comparatively small. Diamonds have been found on other farms in the vicinity of Mooifontein and it is believed that the field covers a wide area.

VERSE NO STAY TO SUICIDE

Brooklyn Man Crumples Poem Holding Out Hope as He Fires Fatal Shot.

Los Angeles.—Rejecting a poem "Opportunity" which held out hope of another chance, Joseph Vincent, a Columbia graduate, formerly of 369 St. John's place, Brooklyn, shot himself on the summit of Silverwood hill here. At his feet was found crumpled up a poem, writted in the East side of New York by William E. Malone, who lived among the submerged tenth while studying them. The final two verses read:

Though deep in the mire, wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say "I can."
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep,
But yet might rise and be again a man.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell.
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven.
Each morning gives the wings to flee from hell;
Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven.

The verses had been copied by Mrs. Adelaide Lafetra, an old time friend, who knew of his despondency. Mrs. Lafetra said he had made many failures, and she had tried to arouse him to better things.

Birds Cause Horses Death

Veterinarian Explains a Trypanosyomia Epidemic in Kentucky—Is Like Pellagra.

Louisville, Ky.—Blackbirds carrying infection from the south are responsible for the death of great numbers of Kentucky horses from a disease akin to pellagra, in the opinion of Assistant State Veterinarian M. A. Purdy, who is analyzing the brains of dead horses in an effort to find traces of the germs. The disease is trypanosyomia, and Dr. Purdy's theory is that the birds infected with it are bitten by mosquitoes, which either bite the horses, thus conveying the infection, or lay their eggs in the damp fodder eaten by the horses. Moldy feed was at first held responsible for the epidemics, which have been prevalent since last spring, but that theory has been discarded.

UNCLE SAM'S FARM IN PANAMA

SCENE NEAR CANAL

UNCLE SAM has found time to look into the agricultural possibilities of the canal zone, and he proposes to turn the five-mile strip of land on each side of the canal into one big vegetable garden. He intends to see that the thousands of vessels from all over the world passing through the canal will be able to replenish their stock of fresh meats and vegetables when they reach the Isthmus without the loss of a minute in traveling time. At present vessels leaving New York for a trip down the coast any great distance must stop at one or two places for fresh meat and vegetables before reaching their final destination.

Uncle Sam had his explorers examine every foot of ground within the ten-mile limit of the zone, from the Pacific to the Atlantic, including a portion of Costa Rica on one side, and Panama on the other. The investigation has now reached the stage where it can be safely asserted there are exceedingly bright prospects for the building up of a lucrative agricultural and stock raising industry along the Panama canal.

In addition to the great quantities of fresh meats and vegetables required for steamers passing through the canal, it must be remembered there will always be a great number of canal employes living along the line of the canal. The majority of these employes will undoubtedly be married, with families and children, and all these mouths will require vegetables to fill them. Also a number of minor industries may be built up along the canal, which will require its quota of human beings, who will also require feeding. But aside from these minor considerations are the vast number of ships expected to pass through the waterway—some authorities claiming the traffic will be so heavy as to be one continuous line of ships from one end of the canal to the other during the entire 24 hours.

About a year ago the investigation was started by the Bureau of Soils and the Bureau of Plant Industry working together. Hugh H. Bennett and William A. Taylor, two of Uncle Sam's scientific explorers in the department, were the men detailed to make the investigation. In speaking of the farming on the canal and its possibilities in the future, Mr. Taylor said:

"Though the Isthmus of Panama has been for four centuries the most important portage of the western hemisphere the lands through which successive routes of travel have passed across it show little agricultural development. Man's impress on the country, except in the immediate vicinity of the Panama railroad—completed in 1851—and the canal route, which lies close to the railroad through most of its length, is chiefly apparent through the destruction of practically all the more valuable timber trees that made up the original forest."

Hugh H. Bennett, who assisted in the investigation, said the most promising line of attack upon agricultural problems of the canal zone will be to develop a permanent mixed tropical agriculture with a distinct horticultural trend, in which hand labor of tropical origin will be the main dependence for tillage. In this way existing and prospective conditions would favor the production of high-priced products requiring regular and frequent transportation service, such as will doubtless be available promptly after the opening of the canal for use.

"One important feature," continued Mr. Bennett, "will be the early working out of a method of mixed cropping in which soil maintaining and improving leguminous intercrops can be continuously used to replace the wild and intractable native vegetation of the present shack-farm agriculture.

"Agricultural operations in the canal zone are now confined mainly to the meager efforts of the native and West Indian population and are restricted to patch farming. The production of local staple products, principally tropical vegetables and fruits, rice and corn, is little in excess of actual food requirements of the operators. The greater number of these farms, although occupying the smoother slopes of the larger valleys and never distant more than five miles in a direct line from the canal, are isolated and inaccessible, owing to the broken topography and absence of good highways. They are reached only by narrow, winding trails, at no time passable for vehicles and often well-nigh or quite impassable for horses.

"There is plenty of room for extension and improvement of the stock-raising industry. Upon a large proportion of steep-hill land suited only for forestry and perhaps the production of certain fruits, such as pineapples, mangoes, etc., good grazing can be secured through the establishment of guinea grass pastures. A number of native grasses, such as those which flourish upon the savanna lands, afford good grazing, while Para and Bermuda grass, cowpeas, velvet beans, corn, the sorghum known as 'Guinea corn,' sugar cane, and peanuts do well upon the lower-slope soils and constitute excellent forage crops. Another good stock food is cassava, a crop that gives large yield with a minimum of attention. It might be well to say here that fine cattle, particularly the large, strong oxen as draft animals in portions of Costa Rica, are fed almost exclusively upon chopped stalks of plantian, banana and sugar cane.

"In the latter part of the dry season the grasses of the canal zone are generally so parched that very little sustenance can be secured from cleared pastures. But stored forage and crops like cassava, sugar cane, sorghum, banana stalks, etc., could be depended upon to carry stock through the dry months to the rainy season—the season of green grass and other tender vegetation. With such possibilities for the local production of forage crops there is no necessity for the present relatively large importations at high prices of grain, hay and other feeds by the few who are operating stock and dairy farms. At the time of this survey the price of shelled native corn was $2 gold per 80-pound sack, while bran was bringing $2.50 per 100 pounds. It is not at all surprising under such conditions that the demand for milk is so much greater than the supply and that the prices are exceptionally high. Milk from dairy farms of the savannah section is sold in the city of Panama at 25 cents per bottle containing one-fifth of a gallon, less than a quart.

"Very few hogs and goats are raised in the canal zone. A considerable number of hogs and goats are imported from points along the Pacific coast, and hogs principally from the Province of Chirique, in the high northern portions of the Republic of Panama. Some poultry is raised by native and canal employes. In view of the ruling high prices there is unquestionably a good opening for raising both pork and poultry. Away from the noisy activities of canal construction the depredations of wild animals such as the tiger cat and jaguar would likely entail some loss to these industries.

"Small farming, including the production of vegetables and choice tropical fruits, such as the avocado, mango, papaya, pineapple, orange, guava, anona, etc., can be carried on profitably with the application of intensive methods, coupled with proper care in the selection of crop varieties and soil.

"Such a variety of ornamental plants thrive on this soil that there seems little doubt that many of these could be extensively and profitably grown for shipment to the United States and other northern countries."

For Violent Transit.

A recent book by Mr. Edwin J. Dingle, entitled "Across China on Foot," contains a bit of practical advice about the manner in which American goods should be packed for transportation in the interior of China.

Conditions are such that the packing should be thoroughly done. The Germans and the Japanese understand this; British and American manufacturers are either careless in this respect or ignorant of what is demanded by the conditions of transportation over roads that are mainly eight-inch tracks along the face of precipices.

One of Mr Dingle's friends, needing a typewriter—and knowing the country—wrote home explicit directions as to the packing.

"Pack it ready to ship," he wrote, "then take it to the top of your office stairs, throw it downstairs, take the machine out and inspect, and if it is undamaged, send it to me.

"If damaged, pack another machine and subject it to the same treatment until you are convinced that you have one that can stand being thus handled and escape injury."—Youth's Companion.

Cardinal's Hat

Current events continue to be well represented in the fashions. The famous red hat of the new American cardinals has been copied for this summer, and it will prove a fine protection from the sun's rays, besides reminding us of an important event.

COMPARTMENTS IN THE BAG

One of the Newest and Most Welcome of the Many Recent Fads of Fashion.

If you once have owned a fourfold bag you will never again be without one. Into the separate compartments can go buttons, hooks and eyes, thread and sewing utensils and a small piece of work, and there is no wild hunting for the article needed as in a one-piece bag.

These bags may be made in any size, but a convenient size is made from a yard and three-quarters of five-inch flowered ribbon with colored satin edges. Cut the ribbon into four strips of equal length, double each strip and overcast the edges together to form a small bag. Turn in the top to the depth of an inch for the heading and run with a double line of sewing for a casing.

Use two yards of number one of baby satin ribbon for a drawstring, cutting in separate yard pieces. Rip the stitches on the outside of the casing between the line of sewing, and run the drawstring through the outside of each of the four bags, tying the ends in a fluffy bow. Start the other drawstrings at the opposite end with two bags to each side and run around the four, using the inner side of the casing. Tie ends in a bow.

To keep the bags from sliding on the drawstring, tack the two on each side together, running a stitch or two in the frill just above the casing. This makes them draw easily on one string.

Beauty and Happiness.

Does beauty bring happiness?

One of the most beautiful women in the world thinks that by itself it cannot, but says that every woman has a charm—for some man.

"Every woman is charming in some way to somebody," she says.

"Beauty of itself cannot bring happiness; frequently it is a snare to the woman who possesses it. One cannot be beautiful forever, and love that centers only round a woman's beauty turns to hate when she grows old.

"I have known ugly women who charmed men by their grace of manner, their high intelligence, their kindliness of heart. You may say that is little consolation to the woman hungry for beauty, but I know how little of a man's heart the woman has who holds him by beauty alone."

The Semidress.

The simple bodice, with the low shoulder finished by a wide hem and the full-length close-fitting sleeves attached to the lining of the bodice, is a feature of some of the newest frocks, although the majority of gowns show the elbow-length peasant sleeve such as we have worn for some time past. This sleeve and the modified peasant sleeve will undoubtedly be worn during the summer. The skirts of all semi-dressy frocks escape the ground all around and are as narrow as ever. They are made either quite simple and trimmed with a row of ball buttons down the entire length of the front, a smart new feature, or they have the knee-deep tunic.—Harper's Bazar.

Dainty Pillows.

Without sacrificing any of the daintiness of her household decorative effects the housewife today rejoices to introduce the note of utility, and sometimes amid the color and glitter of her drawingroom, the result is not a little bizarre as well as pleasing.

Cushions on the whole are much darker and more serviceable than they were, and pretty things of a pale soft color and trimmed with lace are reserved for the bedroom or the boudoir. In sitting or smoke rooms, though, the colors are rich, and a thread of gold or silver often runs through them.

"FRUIT" SACHET THE LATEST

Quaint Conceit of the Season Has Made Its Way Into Deserved Popularity.

Quite one of the quaintest conceits of the season is the "fruit' sachet. Instead of the little flat satin perfumed sachets to which one is accustomed one now uses small clusters of grapes in natural colors, purple and green, arranged quite flat with a circle of small leaves around, white cherries, delicately flushed with pink, tiny apples, some quite green, others rosy, and greenish yellow limes, all are requisitioned.

The "fruit" is composed of silk or velvet, hand-tinted, and is filled with sweet-smelling ground spices and perfumed powder, so that it diffuses a fragrant odor and delicately scents the lingerie or garments among which it is placed.

PRETTY LITTLE COAT

She Made Her Furs.

Some very pretty afternoon and evening scarfs and muffs have been made by girls, using fur and marabout trimmings left over from former years. One girl had yards of swansdown that had trimmed her first party cloak. She cut the bands in half lengthwise, making a band a little over an inch wide. This she sewed on the edges of a scarf of fawn-color chiffon cloth, with two bands at even intervals between the edges. She made also a big, soft muff to match with the swansdown bands. The hat she wears with these is of white beaver, with a white marabout band and standing feather at the left.—Harper's Bazar.

Smocking and Braiding.

Smocking and braiding are trimming notions that have lately had a revival not only for children's dresses but also for blouses and matinees.

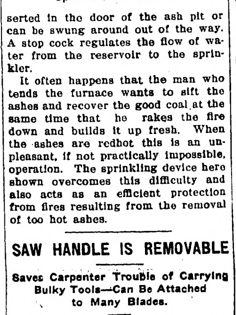
INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

METHOD OF COOLING ASHES

Sprinkling Device Invented by New York Man Enables User to Kill Fire—Also Good Protector.

A sprinkling device has been invented by a New York man that enables the user to put out the fire in the red-hot ashes he rakes down and sift them at once. An upright standard with a horizontal arm is fastened to a base on the floor in front of the heater. This holds an L shaped pipe which has a reservoir for water at the top and a sprinkler at the other end and which moves about so that the sprinkler at the other end and which moves about so that the sprinkler can be inserted in the door of the ash pit or can be swung around out of the way. A stop cock regulates the flow of water from the reservoir to the sprinkler.



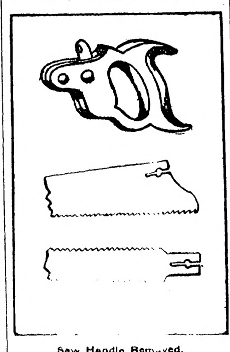
Sprinkler for Ashes.

It often happens that the man who tends the furnace wants to sift the ashes and recover the good coal at the same time that he rakes the fire down and builds it up fresh. When the ashes are redhot this is an unpleasant, if not practically impossible, operation. The sprinkling device here shown overcomes this difficulty and also acts as an efficient protection from fires resulting from the removal of too hot ashes.

SAW HANDLE IS REMOVABLE

Saves Carpenter Trouble of Carrying Bulky Tools—Can Be Attached to Many Blades.

Heretofore to be equipped for any sort of work that would turn up a carpenter had to carry at least three or four saws in his kit, and saws take up room. Now a New York man has devised a removable saw handle, so that all the carpenter need take along is a variety of blades, which can be stowed away in the bottom of the box and not noticed. Each blade is made with a slot in the end that slides into the slot in the handle. There is a locking device in the handle which holds the blade as firmly in place as if it were there to stay. The convenience of this arrangement can readily be understood, even by those who are not familiar with tools, and to the carpenter himself it is a godsend. He can carry a dozen saw blades, if he likes, in the space needed for one saw with the handle fast.



Saw Handle Removed.

Paper Bottles.

The latest big monopoly is said to be a trust which has obtained control of every machine devised for the manufacture of paper bottles and other containers for foodstuffs and liquids. The new package or bottle will be made so that it will be destroyed when opened and must be thrown away and a new one purchased with every package of food or liquid. This means that bottles for milk, vinegar and all liquids and packages for butter, oysters, mincemeat and everything else can be used only once. This will greatly increase the cost of living.

Automobiles Exported.

The bureau of statistics shows that American automobiles are shipped every year to Mexico, the West Indies and various countries in South America, Asia, Oceanica and Africa.

FORTUNES MADE IN SEAWEED

Turned Into Food, Clothes, Boots, Medicine, Furniture, Fertilizer and Many Other Articles.

Seaweed is rapidly establishing a claim as the greatest friend of man, and many new uses are being discovered for it in foreign countries.

If the experience of the Japanese and the dwellers on the western shores of Norway, Scotland and Ireland is to be accepted, there are huge fortunes to be made from seaweed. The Japanese, including the Formosans, employ some 600,000 persons in the seaweed industries. These are mainly engaged in preparing edible products. China alone consumes $600,000 worth of the gelatinous articles every year.

The edible seaweeds of Great Britain and Ireland are advancing in popularity even among London epicures. Served with roast meats they are said to be extremely palatable.

The London industry which employs Devonshire and Japanese seaweed in the manufacture of such diverse objects as cloth, stout shoes, golf balls, policemen's boots, picture frames, marbled floors and electric switchboards, by no means monopolizes its uses. In Cornwall seaweed is used as a fertilizer for the land, in France it finds utility as a stiffener for mattresses and a size for straw hats. The native fishermen of South Australia make ropes and fishing nets from local varieties.

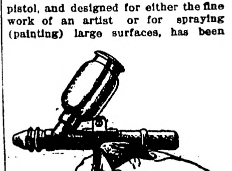
Iodine, a chemical of great medicinal value, claims seaweed as its principal source. The production of "kelp," or burned seaweed, which is the first stage in its preparation, is an industry that is rapidly developing in northwestern Europe. The hardy kelp burners of the Hebrides and Irish coast have now strong rivals in Scandinavia, and in one Norwegian province at least the revenue from this work already exceeds that derived from fishing and agriculture.

In America it has been found to be a valuable source of potash, greatly needed as a fertilizer.

PAINTERS' PISTOL AIR BRUSH

Paint Is Contained In Holder Above Barrel and Conveyed to the Surface by a Tube.

A fountain air brush, shaped like a pistol, and designed for either the fine work of an artist or for spraying (painting) large surfaces, has been placed on the market, says the Popular Mechanics. The paint is contained in the holder above the barrel, and the compressed air, conveyed by a tube, passes through the handle of the curious gun into the barrel, where it picks up the paint and sprays it onto the surface being painted.



Pistol Air Brush for Painters.

The machine is made in various sizes, ranging from the fine needle-point apparatus for artists' work to the sizes used for painting vehicle bodies and like tasks. It is also used to some extent in painting tin and metal ware.

Keyless Lock Is Latest.

The old joke about the gentleman returning home very late from his club and vowing he couldn't open the front door because somebody had stolen the keyhole, is sadly out of date at last. A foreigner has invented a keyless lock which requires neither key nor keyhole. The lock is moved by the knobs or buttons projecting at the right hand side. It can be set in such a way that only the members of the house to which it belongs can unlock it, and it is made in no fewer than 38,006 combinations. It is unlocked by pulling one or more of the knobs upwards a certain number of times.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF AMERICANS GOING TO CANADA

Although Western Canada suffered, as did many other portions of the west, from untoward conditions, which turned one of the most promising crops ever seen in that country, into but little more than an average yield of all grains, there is left in the farmers' hands, a big margin of profit. Of course there were many farmers who were fortunate enough to harvest and market a big yield, and with the prices that were secured made handsome returns. From wheat, oats, barley and flax marketed to the 1st of January, 1912, there was a gross revenue of $75,384,000. The cattle, hogs, poultry and dairy proceeds brought this up to $101,620,000 or 21 million dollars in excess of 1910. There was still in the farmers' hands at that time about 95 million bushels of wheat worth at least another sixty-five million dollars (allowing for inferior grades), besides about 160 million bushels of oats to say nothing of barley and flax, which would run into several million of dollars.

There is a great inrush of settlers to occupy the vacant lands throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The reports from the Government show that during the past year upwards of 131,000 Americans crossed the border into Canada. A great many of these took up farms, over ten thousand having homesteaded, in fact the records show that every state in the Union contributed. A larger number, not caring to go so far away as the homesteading area, have purchased lands at from fifteen dollars an acre to twenty-five dollars an acre. The prospects for a good crop for 1912 are as satisfactory as for many years. The land has had sufficient moisture, and with a reasonably early spring, it is safe to predict a record crop.

Those who have not had the latest literature sent out by the Government agents should send to the one nearest, and secure a copy.

CHILD'S HEAD A MASS OF HUMOR

"I think the Cuticura remedies are the best remedies for eczema I have ever heard of. My mother had a child who had a rash on its head when it was real young. Doctor called it baby rash. He gave us medicine, but it did no good. In a few days the head was a solid mass, a running sore. It was awful; the child cried continually. We had to hold him and watch him to keep him from scratching the sore. His suffering was dreadful. At last we remembered Cuticura Remedies. We got a dollar bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bar of Cuticura Soap. We gave the Resolvent as directed, washed the head with the Cuticura Soap, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. We had not used half before the child's head was clear and free from eczema, and it has never come back again. His head was healthy and he had a beautiful head of hair. I think the Cuticura Ointment very good for the hair. It makes the hair grow and prevents falling hair." (Signed) Mrs. Francis Lund, Plain City, Utah, Sept. 19, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

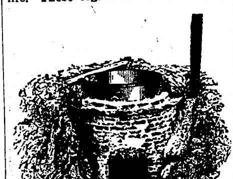
PRESERVATIVE TREATMENT FOR TIMBER USED ON MODERN FARM

Of the Several Methods of Preserving Posts and Rails Dipping in Creosote Is Considered Superior—Naturally Durable Woods Compel Use of Inferior Product.

(By C. P. WILLIS.)

The amount of wood used on the farms of the country and exposed to rapid decay is enormous. It is estimated that one million fence posts and rails, the equivalent of six billion board feet, are required each year. For this class of material durability is the first requisite. The naturally durable woods were formerly plentiful over large areas, but in many sections they have now become too scarce and dear to use. There remains, however, an abundance of inferior woods which, when preserved from decay, are entirely satisfactory substitutes.

Decay consists in the destruction of the wood tissues by low forms of plant life. These organisms we term fungi.



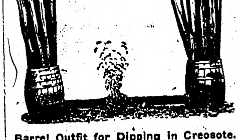
Heavy Iron Tank Heated by Fire Underneath.

It is possible that bacteria may be associated in some cases, but as yet we have no positive proof of it. It follows that the object of all preservative treatment is to prevent the development of these organisms, and that the most effective treatment is the one that accomplishes this for the longest period.

Fungi require for their best development a certain balance between the air and the moisture content of the wood, and a favorable temperature. Thorough seasoning, on the one hand, or thorough saturation with moisture on the other, alters this balance to such an extent that the growth of the organism is either retarded or prohibited. Air seasoning only retards the growth.

There are several methods by which timbers may be given more thorough preservative treatment. The surface of the wood may be soaked with paint or some similar substance. Such a coating keeps the wood dry, and more or less effectually excludes the entrance of the decay-producing organisms. Such coatings, however, would be applied only to well-seasoned material, since they will also tend to retard the escape of such moisture as may be already within the timber. Better preservatives are the products of the distillation of coal tar and petroleum tar, which, in addition to possessing the advantages of paint, are antiseptics and poisonous to fungi. The deeper such antiseptics penetrate the wood the more lasting is their effect.

It is well known that wool decays most rapidly when placed in contact with the surface of the ground, because the wood-destroying organisms find there more uniform conditions of heat and moisture to encourage their development. For this reason the ground line of a post must be thoroughly treated, whereas portions of the post above and below this point require less treatment. The climate of the locality should also be considered. In the warm Gulf states or in a moisture-laden atmosphere posts require more thorough treatment than in a cooler northern climate or on the arid plains.



Barrel Outfit for Dipping in Creosote.

The impregnation of fence posts with creosote is best accomplished by the so-called "open-tank" process. This consists of heating the wood for a certain period and then cooling it in the preservative. The principle is simple: During the heating the high temperature causes the air and water contained in the wood cells to expand, so that a portion of this air and water is forced out. The rest contracts as the subsequent cooling progresses, and a partial vacuum is formed into which atmospheric pressure forces the cool preservative.

The open-tank principle may be variously applied in the treatment of posts. The best way to heat the posts is to immerse their butts in creosote maintained at a temperature of 220 degrees F.

The simplest form of treating plant consists of two creosote barrels, placed about seven feet apart and connected by a three or four-inch pipe. The heating is accomplished by building a fire under the pipe. Each barrel should be set with a shallow box or provided with some gutter arrangement to catch the oil in case of an unexpected leak. The barrels should be shielded from the direct heat of the fire. In some respects the barrel tanks are not satisfactory on account of them leaking, which is almost sure to occur after a few days' use. Nevertheless, the barrel outfit will suffice when only a few posts are to be treated and when, in consequence, the treatments are few and short.

Thorough seasoning should always precede impregnation. Even air-dry wood is unfit for treatment after a heavy rain and when thus saturated should be permitted to dry for at least three days.

Bark retards or prevents the penetration of the preservative into the wood. It also uselessly increases the cost of treatment by itself absorbing oil. Peeling the posts before treatment is, therefore, necessary. Even the paper inner bark should be carefully removed.

The tops of posts should be cut obliquely to shed rain water. A bevel made with an ax is preferable to one made with a saw, because it is smoother. Beveling is particularly important if the tops of the posts are not to be treated.

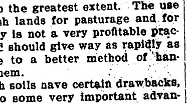
DRAINAGE OF MARSH LANDS

Rapid Progress of Agriculture Will Soon Make it Desirable to Develop Waste Soils.

(By A. R. WHITSON and F. J. SIEVERS, Wisconsin.)

While some use has been made of marsh lands for growing wild hay and for pasture in connection with the farming of upland soils, relatively little effort toward the improvement of such lands has been made. The high price of farm lands and the rapid progress of agriculture will soon make it desirable to develop these waste lands to the greatest extent. The use of marsh lands for pasturage and for wild hay is not a very profitable practice and should give way as rapidly as possible to a better method of handling them.

Marsh soils have certain drawbacks, but also some very important advantages as compared with upland soils.



A Drainage Ditch Used to Lower the Water Table in a Dry Season. When Dammed It Will Raise the Water Table in the Adjoining Marsh, Producing Subirrigation.

When they occur in considerable areas they are more easily cleared than cutover timber land, and being free from stone, can be brought under cultivation at much less expense than the upland soils, even though drainage is necessary.

The first step in the development of any marsh land is to drain it. In the case of large areas this will require the construction of large main ditches, requiring the use of a dredge, and cooperation among the adjoining owners either by organizing a drainage district or by having the town or county officers take charge of the work. In the case of smaller areas this can frequently be done by mutual agreement between two or three adjoining owners.

Two kinds of drainage must be provided for; first, surface drainage, and second, subsurface drainage. It is occasionally true that the construction of ditches around the edge of a marsh tract in such a way as to carry off most of the water from the surrounding higher land without letting it onto the marsh will reduce the wetness of the marsh land to such an extent that crops can be grown without further ditching. Ordinarily, however, ditches on the marsh itself are necessary.

English Workmen.

If what Rider Haggard writes is true the condition of farm workmen in England is a sad one. He describes some of the places where men are compelled to live as "vile and not fit for a human being." At one place he found 20 men working on a farm but could see no cottages. There was one long low building on the place. It looked like a wagon-house. It had no windows. Sacks were laid on the floor and there the 20 men slept. A hundred yards away was an elm tree on a hill, and there he found the ashes of a fire and a rod to hold a pot. This was the dwelling place—the kitchen and the parlor of the 20 men. Winter and summer they did their cooking and spent their Sundays under the tree.

Test for Grains.

To test grains for hardness, Dr. E. Stranak, of Prague, pushes a specimen under a very thin saw attached to the scale pan of a balance. The weight necessary to cause cutting is a measure of the hardness. It is found that grains resist not only insect attacks but plant diseases in a degree proportionate to their hardness.

A World Without A Bible

By Rev. William Evans, Director Bible Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—When Michaiah, the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all of the words of the Lord: Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim, the king of Judah, hath burned.—Jer. 36:11-28.

Can you picture a world without a Bible? What a poor world it would be. The art of the world has for centuries found its sublimest subjects in the gospel story. A visit to the world's great galleries of art will corroborate this fact. The most beautiful picture in the National Gallery in London is Murillo's "Holy Family;" in Paris, Murillo's "Assumption of the Virgin;" in Antwerp, Reuben's "Descent from the Cross;" in Florence, "The Madonna de la Sedia;" in Venice, Titian's "Assumption of the Virgin;" in Milan, Leonardo's "Last Supper;" in Berlin, Guido's "Ecce Homo;" in Rome, "The Crucifixion," and in Madrid, "The Ascension," by Raphael; in Dresden, the crown of all the worlds' art, "The Sistine Madonna."

The influence of the Bible is equally felt in the realm of poetry as illustrated in Dante's "Vision;" Tennyson's "Holy Grail;" Browning's "Christmas Eve," "Easter Day," "Death in the Desert;" Whittier's "Our Master."

In the realm of music, the influence of the Bible is seen in such oratorios as "Elijah and Paul" by Mendelssohn; "The Messiah" by Handel; "The Creation" by Haydn. Our National hymn "America," was written by a clergyman.

Literature also has felt the influence of the Bible. In a very real sense Germany may be called the home of the Bible, and Germany is the land of books and learning. It is claimed that over 25,000,000 books left the German press last year. It has been said that Ireland, which, in a sense has been deprived of the Bible, is not a land of literature. Indeed, it has been claimed by some that there are towns of moderate size in Ireland in which a book store cannot be found. Ruskin's beautiful gardens would be but barren deserts were it not for the flowers taken from the Bible. Milton's "Paradise Lost" is nothing but the Bible in blank verse. Bunyan in his Pilgrim Progress saw practically nothing that the Apostle John had not seen in the Book of Revelation. Shakespeare's works would be very meager if stripped of all their scripture quotations and references. It is claimed that Carlyle is but a spiritual distortion of the Prophet Ezekiel.

When we turn to the realm of morals, the influence of the Bible stands out in even stronger relief. A moral geography of the world could be made by considering the countries that have the Bible and those that do not. What makes Edinburgh better than Constantinople; Toronto better than Paris; Massachusetts better than Mexico? Mexico was colonized a whole century before Massachusetts. Yet look at the moral and intellectual contrast between Massachusetts and Mexico. What better testimony can we have to the influence of the Bible than is found in these comparisons and contrasts? What is the difference between the Pilgrim fathers who came to this country to build up and many of the present emigrants who come to pull down the institutions which are precious to us? Does not the difference lie in this—that those Pilgrims came with the Bible in their hands and the fear of God in their hearts, while a large number of the emigrants of today come with neither of these blessings? Say what we will against the blue laws of Puritanism, they are to be much preferred to the wide open continental Sabbath and the anarchical spirit that too often characterize the emigration of today.

Some figures will be interesting and instructive in this connection. In England, a Bible land, there was 1 murder to every 178,000 inhabitants; in Holland, a Bible land, 1 to every 100,000; in Austria, a land which is half and half Bible, 1 to every 57,000; in Spain, a land of no Bible, 1 to every 4,114; in Naples, a land of no Bible, 1 to every 2,750; and in Rome, the city of no Bible, 1 to every 950.

Further, in speaking of the influence of the Bible in the realm of morals, it is claimed that in London, a Bible city, 4 births out of every 100 were illegitimate; in Paris, where the Bible is seldom read, 48 out of every 100; in Vienna, where there is practically no Bible, for every 100 legitimate births, 118 were illegitimate; and in Rome, where the Bible is practically a forbidden book, for every 100 legitimate births there were 243 illegitimate.

Yet in spite of these facts some men today are trying to get rid of the Bible. Should we not count that man a traitor to his God and to his country who would destroy the Bible

Beauty—real beauty—is more than skin deep. No cosmetic in the world can give the wholesome color, the bright eyes, the clear, transparent skin that is the natural result of pure blood, proper diet and hygienic habits of daily life.

It sounds easy and it is easy for a woman to have the beauty which health alone can give. A safe and efficient tonic if the blood is weak, thin or impure (Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are especially recommended), the avoidance of foods which will cause eruptions, and regular bathing of the skin. That is all and it is the only way. Most ladies, and especially young mothers, will be interested in the following statement:

"After my baby was born," says Mrs. Etta Estes, of No. 333 South Lawndale street, Kansas City, Mo., "I did not gain in strength as I should have. I did not have any color and kept losing in flesh until I was almost a skeleton. I had severe headaches and pains in the side, arms and shoulders. I finally gave up the doctor's treatment in order to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They helped me immediately and I became stronger each day, soon got a better color and am now in the best of health. I am convinced that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them and advise any woman who is suffering as I did to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once and not wait another day."

Write to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Box 176, Schenectady, N. Y., for a free booklet, "Plain Talks to Women." It is an outspoken but perfectly proper little book and should be read by every woman and growing girl. A free sample of the new laxative "Pinklets" will also be sent you. Should you be unable to obtain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in your locality they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, fifty cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.

BATTLE RUMORS NOT CONFIRMED

WAR DEPARTMENT STARTLED BY DISPATCHES AND SENDS ORDERS TO TROOPS.

JUARED IS STILL SAFE

In the Opinion of the Washington Authorities—Col. Villa Marching Northward With Eight Hundred Troops.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The war department was thrown into a state of excitement here by telegraphic reports of the arrival of a large band of insurgents in the vicinity of Juarez, Mexico, opposite El Paso, and of serious fighting in the outskirts of the town. These reports, it was explained at the department, came from "army officers" and the department officials were startled a second time by press dispatches from El Paso stating there had been absolutely no fighting in Juarez or its environs. None of the department officials would comment on the complex situation.

The immediate effect of the first report was to cause the dispatch of some further messages from the war department to certain military posts looking to further movement of troops toward the border.

The Fourth infantry, now divided between Fort Crook, Omaha and Fort Logan, Hot Springs, Ark., was ordered to get ready with supplies and shelter tents and everything for border service and to be prepared to entrain for San Antonio upon the receipt of a second message.

The assemblage of this military force on the north side of the Rio Grande does not mean a projected invasion of Mexico, a fact strongly emphasized at the war department. It is admitted, however, that the troops will not hesitate to cross the international boundary line to insure the maintenance of a neutral zone broad enough to insure the safety of persons on the American side.

"There is no thought of intervention in Mexico for the purpose of pacification or otherwise, said Secretary of War Stimson at the White House today. "All that we propose to do is to protect American lives and property, and this we will do."

El Paso.—Juarez today awaits an attack and is praying for Colonel Villa, who is rushing north with a force of 800 to defend the city against the combined forces of the Vasquista rebels, numbering 1,700. Colonels Campa, Rojas and Salazar, rebel leaders, who effected a junction of their forces early today twelve miles south of Juarez, are advancing on the city. Villa and his troops are still more than fifty miles away.

FOR FIRE PREVENTION

Minnesota State Association to Convene in Rochester Tuesday.

Rochester, Minn., Feb. 27. — The Minnesota State Fire Prevention association will hold a meeting in Rochester on Tuesday, at which fire prevention will be discussed. It is proposed to have speakers visit the city schools and a mass meeting will be held at night. A representative of the state fire marshal's office will also be present, and explain the work of that department.

COUNTING ON ROSE

A. A. U. President Thinks Californian Will Win at Stockholm.

San Francisco, Feb. 27.—Enthusiastic over the splendid form displayed by Rolph Rose, who has broken his own world's record in the shot put with a mark of 50 feet 2 inches, Gustaf T. Kirby, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of America, predicts that Rose will reach a mark of 57 feet with the shot. Kirby said that Rose undoubtedly would be America's representative at Stockholm.

Welsh Miners Determined.

London, Feb 27.—One of the largest mine owners in England, who has taken part in the conference with the government, expressed the opinion that the only hope of preventing a coal strike, which will involve more than 800,000 miners, is for the government to persuade the men to postpone their notices.

Tornado in Arkansas.

Little Rock, Feb. 27.—Details of a tornado which devastated portions of Lincoln, Jefferson and Arkansas counties place the list of dead at ten, with at least 25 hurt.

27 Governors to Meet.

Washington, Feb. 27.—The National Civic Federation, which will hold its annual convention in this city, March 5, 6 and 7, will consider, for the most part, industrial peace and progress, with special reference to the relation of the employer to the employee not only in private corporations, but in public utility, government, state and municipal service. As showing something of the importance of the gathering from a national point of view, the governors of twenty-seven states will attend.

STRIKERS STONE THE POLICE

OFFICERS USE CLUBS AND SOLDIERS ARE CALLED.

Mill Workers Declare They Will Again Attempt to Send Children Away.

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 27.—The mill workers' strike, now in its seventh week, was marked by a recurrence of riotous scenes. The disturbances, however, were not connected with the exportation of children. Police officers were forced to use their clubs on a crowd of strike sympathizers, who had thrown stones at them, following some arrests. A number of infantrymen and a troop of cavalry were sent to the scene and dispersed the crowd.

The city officials gave back to the parents most of the children who were taken charge of as they were about to be placed on a train en route for Philadelphia. The children had passed the night at the city poor farm.

The parents of these children will be called into court to answer to charges of child neglect. Leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World said that another attempt will be made to send children to homes which have been found for them in other cities, principally Philadelphia.

Federal investigation by congress, it is said, will be welcomed by the strikers in every line of their activity.

Up to the present time, over 300 children have been sent out of the city under direction of the Industrial Workers of the World leaders.

The strike leaders and some of the parents declared they have a legal right to send their children away for a vacation.

Colonel Sweetser, commanding the military forces and Acting City Marshal Sullivan said that they stand by their attitude not to allow further exportations of children.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Fear that other nations might be drawn into difficulties growing out of the Italian-Turkish war, carried the wheat market upward today, but the effect was only brief. Offerings increased as prices advanced and as a result the gain was more than wiped out. Longs unloaded freely. Bears received aid from Liverpool advices that trade there was dull owing to a lack of demand. A similar influence came from the heavy snowfall in the winter wheat region, especially southwest. Opening figures were same as Saturday night to ⅛@¼c up. May started at $1.00½ to 1.00⅝@1.00¾, the identical change shown by market taken altogether. A rise to $1.00⅞ followed. On the ensuing setback the prices receded to $1.00⅜.

An advance in floor quotations led to another rally, but the effect was overcome by the smallness of the increase in the visible supply. The close was steady, May ⅛@¼c net lower at $1.00¼@1.00⅜.

Bad weather furnished an incentive to buyers of corn. There was a wave of selling later, however, on account of the weakness in wheat. May opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜c higher at 68½@68⅝c to 68¾c, and then sagged to 68⅜c.

The big increase in the visible supply weakened the market still more. Closing figures were easy at 68⅛@68¼c for May, a decline of ⅛@¼c net.

Oats followed the course of other grain. Business was light. May started ¼c to ¼@⅜c up at 52⅝@52¾c to 52¾c and declined to 52¼c.

AKED EQUAL TO SITUATION

Example of the Soft Answer That Turneth Away Wrath—Also the Truth.

One of Dr. Aked's most ardent supporters when that divine was pastor of Mr. John D. Rockefeller's church is fond of telling what he considers a striking example of Dr. Aked's wit.

Dr. Aked was fond of taking long country walks, and one day, being far in the country and wandering through a field, he and his friend noticed a sign nailed to a tree. "No trespassing here."

Hurrying to get out of the forbidden ground they met a farmer who assailed them grimly with the remark:

"Trespassers in this field are prosecuted."

Dr. Aked smiled at the irate farmer.

"But we are not trespassers, my good man," said he.

"What be you, then?" demanded the farmer.

"We are Presbyterians, my dear sir," replied Dr. Aked and walked away.

Europeans are getting tons of Banksian pine seed from Minnesota for forest planting. They have discovered the value of this hardy, quick growing and useful pine, and are eager for it. Americans have not yet waked up to its value, although a nursery has been started near Aitkin, Minnesota, to grow this species exclusively and make ready for the rush, when it comes. Grown under the embankment system this tree promises great things for the Prairie farmer.

TAKE THE LAWYER. The papers are constantly chronicling important trials or printing judicial opinions and decisions involving new and interesting points.

TAKE THE DOCTOR. Every new medical discovery, every interesting experiment, if sufficiently important, is reported in the press. It may not be told in technical language, but it gives a clew that may be followed up by the physician if he is so minded.

SO WITH ALL THE PROFESSIONS. These are but suggestions of the one hundred and one ways that the newspapers are useful to the professional man, whether he be engineer, chemist, physician, lawyer, minister or college president.

BLUEBERRIES AND CLAMS.

It is a far cry from clams to blueberries, but nevertheless they are pretty closely related to each other just at present. The clam supply is not over abundant now, and all because the blueberries are ripening. There are many places down the bay where blueberries are to be secured. The men who ordinarily dig clams are picking the berries and making a good penny, so they do not give their attention to the bivalves.—Portland Press.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Roosevelt has declared that he will accept the republican nomination for president if the people want him. Of course, this means that the voice of the people must be loud enough to strike terror to the hearts of the politicians to such an extent that they will not dare to nominate anyone else. That is a big job, but by no means an impossible one. It depends mostly on Roosevelt himself. He will have to convince the people that he stands squarely on their side and to do this it will take work both hard and clever to prevent wrecking the party completely in the big eastern states which will actually decide the final result. Roosevelt can carry the west; Taft can not under any circumstances. In New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois and probably Ohio, their strength is nearer even, while the other republican states in the east are undoubtedly strong for Taft at the present time. Taft has the machine and precedent in his favor. These also seem to be about the only things against Roosevelt, and, while they will prove to be strong factors against his nomination, it must be admitted that they are not reasons why he is not the better man for president. Taft has made numerous great mistakes, and is rated as being the one great mistake of Roosevelt. Can Roosevelt correct the errors made by the man he made president? If he can and will, he should be given the nomination. The best man, in any party, is none too good to be president. Taft has not proved to be the right man, and the people may decide against Roosevelt, too.

LaFollette may now safely be considered as out of the running for the presidential nomination. However, other years are coming, and the public will not forget the game little Wisconsin man.

Governor Eberhart has committed himself to Taft, and his friends try to convince the people that this is proof of his having "backbone." It is more of a proof that he is owned entirely by the machine.

A woman's jealousy of another's clothes caused a split in a gang of New York thieves a few days ago and the police were given information that enabled them to capture several badly wanted criminals. It seems that a jealous woman can be dangerous anywhere, even for very trivial reasons.

The Japanese Way.

The question of choice between two vases was decided by a patron in a Japanese shop when the proprietor said: "That smaller vase, madam, is thoroughly Japanese in form and decoration. That floral pattern in gold around the upper half is characteristic, and so, too, is the exceedingly narrow and short neck. The vase will hold but a single blossom that should be long stemmed and stand upright. Thus the flower will be individualized and the vase likewise. That is the Japanese way."

Fitted For It.

"Mrs. Meddle makes much trouble in this town." "Yes; she has such a fine sense of rumor!"—Life.

Blessed With a Wife.

A former vicar of a country parish not far from Sheffield was a gentleman distinguished for his learning and for the position he took at Cambridge. One day a visitor to the village got into conversation with one of the parishioners, and the talk turned to the vicar.

"Your clergyman," said the visitor, "is a very able man. Why, he is a wrangler."

"I never heard that," was the reply of the villager, "but his missis is."—London Tit-Bits.

"Why, they had an idea the old man hid some money somewhere, and they've been digging and scraping and looking for it ever since he died. I'll bet the place is worth twice what it was."

"The old man was cute, wasn't he?"

John Bright.

The centenary of the birth of John Bright, the great English Quaker, orator and progressive statesman, was celebrated on Nov. 16. To Americans Mr. Bright is known chiefly because of his opposition to slavery and his espousal of the cause of the North during the civil war. By Englishmen he is remembered as one of the chief advocates of the repeal of the corn laws, of the extension of suffrage and the establishment of a national system of education. To the Irish he was a consistent and powerful friend in all their struggles, except the final one for home rule. By the Hindoos he is gratefully recalled for his fight to end the abuses of the East India company and to bring India under the direct control of the crown. To the world at large he stands as an advocate of peace, of the rights of workingmen and of humanitarian movements.

John Bright has been classed as the foremost orator among English statesmen of the nineteenth century. In his directness, his outspoken opposition to wrong and his moral and religious force he has been likened to one of the Hebrew prophets. His diction was well chosen and his voice full and musical, but perhaps his greatest power with an audience lay in his simplicity, honesty and earnestness. He was transparently sincere. Yet with all these gifts he never used them for self aggrandizement and never failed to use them in behalf of the poor and downtrodden. He employed short Anglo-Saxon words, humor and epigram, logic and facts. He fought always against the aristocracy and for the common people, yet he dared to go against public opinion if he thought it wrong, suffering obloquy to denounce the Crimean war and leaving the cabinet because of the bombardment of Alexandria.

He had little education, going into his father's business as a spinner at the age of fifteen. One of the most disinterested and unselfish acts of his life occurred in connection with our own war between the states. That struggle interfered with cotton manufacture, in which Mr. Bright was peculiarly interested. Yet he braved English public opinion to stand with the American Union, although to do so hurt his own business as a spinner.

John Bright took his religion into politics. One of his earliest fights was for temperance. With Richard Cobden he shared the credit of bringing free trade to England. Take him all in all, he was one of the purest types of statesmen the world has seen.

What Is the Truth About Tripoli?

The Italians deny the stories of atrocities by their soldiers in and about Tripoli. At least a portion of the press has accepted the denial, but there is so much confusion in the news that the exact truth cannot be known for some time, if ever. For the sake of humanity and for the fair fame of Christendom it is to be hoped that the Italians can prove to the world that their soldiers have been slandered.

The probability is that they can prove this in the main. It now appears that the first treachery was shown by the Arabs, a thing not out of keeping with their reputation. That some indiscriminate slaughter followed by the Italians is no more than could have been expected. General Sherman's definition of war still holds good, and the twentieth century is certain to be shocked by even its mildest forms.

One good thing Italy has done in Tripoli was to stop the slave trade through the ports of that country. It will surprise most Americans to know that the barter and sale of human beings are still carried on in parts of the earth. Most of the bondmen are recruited from Africa, as of old. Italy is stopping this, so far as Tripoli is concerned, just as France has stopped it in and through Algeria and Tunis and is stopping it in Morocco, and Great Britain has stopped it in Egypt and elsewhere.

Italy is doing other good things, chief of which is to end Turkish misrule in northern Africa. Italy is the country of Cavour and Garibaldi. Frankly, we take those tales of atrocities in Tripoli not only with a grain but with a bushel of salt.

Some practical jokers in Jersey turned around the guideboards, thus causing several motorists to lose their way. There would be some point to the joke if these humorists were sent to jail for interfering with public property.

A Seattle man has paid $3,000 for a set of false teeth for a race horse. This will be fine for anybody who wants to find out the age of that particular horse.

The world is to last at least ten million years longer, so we are told by scientists. There may be a McNamara jury yet.

One man has been found who willingly gives his wife credit for making him what he is. He is a bankrupt.

P. A. Risberg drove down to Thief River Falls yesterday to attend to his lawsuit against the Great Northern Railway company.

Farmers in the vicinity of Middle River had a meeting there Saturday and started the organization of a co-operative elevator company. It is their intention to incorporate with a capital stock of $10,000.

Sued for Keep of Cow

In municipal court at Thief River Falls yesterday evidence was heard in an action brought by P. A. Risberg against the Great Northern Railway company to recover for taking care of a cow over winter. It seems that the cow in question was injured in a car while being shipped from Roseau to St. Paul, and was unloaded here. The local agent, acting under instructions from superior officers engaged Mr. Risberg to take care of the animal temporarily, and it has been in his care all the time. The company declined to pay the bill and the suit resulted. The court took the case under advisement and will render decision soon.

Railroad Surveyors Working

According to a report published in Thief River Falls a crew of fourteen railroad surveyors have crossed the boundary line and are making a survey southward through Roseau and eastern Marshall counties. They are supposed to be laying out a line for the Minneapolis & St. Louis road between Winnipeg and Minneapolis.

THE UNKNOWN FUTURE.

We take just pride in our present enterprise and achievements, but we may believe that the commerce of the future will as far exceed that of the present as the varied production, the vast extent of commercial exchanges, and the means of communication of today, transcend the hopes and even the dreams of Washington.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR

A Money Maker and Saver

Soon Pays for Itself

Occasionally the intending buyer of a cream separator who has but a small amount of ready cash to invest is tempted to put his money into one of the so-called "cheap" machines.

Why pay your hard-earned money for a "cheap," trashy machine, which is always most expensive in the end, when you can buy a reliable De Laval upon such liberal terms that

It will more than earn its cost while you are paying for it.

When you buy a De Laval you have positive assurance that your machine will be good for at least twenty years of service, during which time it will save every possible dollar for you, and earn its original cost over and over again.

If it is not convenient for you to make full payment at time of purchase, we can arrange for you to make a partial payment, and pay the balance on such liberal terms that your machine will more than save its cost while you are paying for it.

PROPER HEAT IN THE HOUSE

Matter of Moisture Is Always One of the Most Important Considerations.

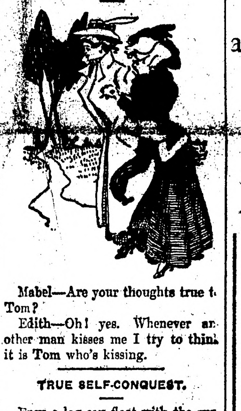
According to the medical folks artificial heating of a house with dry, hot air is both unhealthful and expensive. They declare that it begets tuberculosis, pneumonia and colds, and they claim to have plenty of proof to this effect. Their advice is to moisten the air a bit.

The Pennsylvania board of health has prepared some advice on the subject and is distributing it in the form of a bulletin. This states that moistened air does not have to be heated to as great a temperature as dry air in order to be made comfortable. When you feel cold, therefore, instead of seeing whether the furnace needs fuel, find out if the air does not want water. On a cold day the windows of your room should have the perspired look of a kitchen window on a washday. In very cold weather the panes ought to be frosted.

If you find this is not the case the air probably needs a drink. Place a pan of water in the room, or, if you have steam heat, allow a little of the vapor to escape. You will soon feel comfortable, though the temperature of your room will not have risen.

With properly moistened air a room need not be heated more than 64 degrees.

DEVOTED LOYALTY



Mabel—Are your thoughts true to Tom?

Edith—Oh! yes. Whenever another man kisses me I try to think it is Tom who's kissing.

TRUE SELF-CONQUEST.

Even a log can float with the current, it takes a man to fight sturdily against an opposing tide that would sweep his craft out of its course. When the jealousies, the petty intrigues and the meanness and the misunderstandings in life assail you, rise above them. Be like a lighthouse that illumines and beautifies the snarling, swashing waves of the storm that threaten it, that seek to undermine it and seek to wash over it. This is conquest.—From "Self-Control," by William George Jordan.

MUST BE PUSH BEHIND IT.

But the manufacturing of an article of highest excellence is not enough. The article must be made known. It must be made widely known. Its inherent superiority must be insistently and continuously impressed upon the plastic mind of the consuming public by a judicious and liberal use of newspaper advertising.—Dr. V. C. Price.

NOT AS BAD AS HE EXPECTED.

"Thanks. The elevator man told me yez were goin' to bounce me, but I knew ye wouldn't be doin' anything as ondaycint as that."

WELLESLEY SCORES.

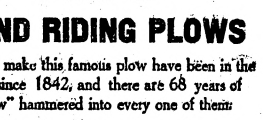
DIAMOND RIDING PLOWS

The people who make this famous plow have been in the plow business since 1842, and there are 68 years of "knowing how" hammered into every one of them.



It is the only plow made that has a controlling rod that is absolutely automatic, a feature protected by patents. You don't have to handle the levers when making a turn. The rear wheel is self-castoring, and requires no attention. The foot raising and lowering levers are the best ever devised. The frame is the strongest ever put on a plow.

The Diamond was introduced twelve years ago. It took the lead at the very start, and has been there ever since. We are selling it because it is the best made. It is so good that the manufacturers back it up with an unqualified guarantee.

Congress.

Senator Dupont of Delaware, it is said, will be the next one under fire.

Senator Newlands introduced a revised interstate trade commission bill.

Congress was in session on Washington's birthday, though but little work was done.

Senator McLean introduced a bill exempting "factory smokers" cigars from internal revenue tax.

Watchdogs of the treasury refused to permit of an appropriation for coast defense of Cape Henry.

Senator Dupont denied election corruption charkes made by Senator Reed's investigation resolution.

In the house a resolution was passed requiring secretary of war to submit all papers in case of Major General Ainsworth.

Senator Stone introduced resolution directing foreign relations committee to make prompt inquiry into conditions on Mexican border.

Senator Cummins spoke favoring general pension legislation, saying the government could tax wealth if necessary to provide revenue.

In the house the amendment to the fortifications appropriations bill providing for the government to manufacture its own powder was defeated.

British Ambassador Bryce explained the British legislative system to the house judiciary committee in connection with the legislative bureau bill.

Senator McCumber explained to the interstate commerce commission his proposed federal incorporating act as a sort of constitution for corporations.

Labor Leader John Williams of Pittsburgh told finance committee of the senate any reduction in steel plate tariff would result in conflict between capital and labor.

Senator Hitchcock pressed forward the movement for a senate investigation of the dispute between the United States and Colombia growing out of the establishment of Panama as a republic. He introduced a resolution asking that the president send to the senate all correspondence and communications between United States and Colombia.

General.

Supporters of President Taft are willing to pit him against Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt is casting about for a man to manage his campaign.

Rev. W. B. Loomis, a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, is dead at Lone Rock, Wis.

Great Britain has acknowledged the right of the United States to fortify the Isthmian canal.

Viscount Ghinda, the new Japanese ambassador, was formally presented to President Taft.

The ways and means committee of the house still is deadlocked on the sugar tariff schedule.

Charles Louis Loos, professor of Greek and former president of Transylvania university, is dead.

The house went on record as favoring the adoption of the eight hour work day on all government work.

The president nominated Charles A. Overlock of Arizona to be United States marshal for the district of Arizona.

Secretary Stimson, of the war department, will make a speech before the Taft club in Chicago on the night of March 5.

Senator Poindexter advocated before the interstate commerce committee his bill for abolition of the United States commerce court.

Chairman Underwood said the ways and means committee had failed to find a substitute for sugar as a revenue producer, thereby indicating free sugar was unlikely.

Five of the seven railroad and steamship men indicted in Juneau, Alaska, February 15, for alleged violation of the Sherman law gave bonds for their appearance in court at Juneau March 15.

Representative Adamson introduced a resolution for inquiry by interstate commerce commission into charges that railway and shipping combinations intend to use the Panama canal to settle competition in freight rates.

John H. Marble, formerly of San Francisco, chief of the division of prosecutions of the Interstate Commerce commission, has been appointed secretary of the commission to succeed Edward A. Mosley, who died last April.

Government ownership of express properties and operation by Postoffice department is provided in a bill Senator Gardner will introduce.

An outline of the Panama canal zone government bill, which has been made by the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, will be reported within ten days.

The plant of the Montana Packing company was destroyed by fire at Butte. The estimated loss is $50,000.

In an explosion and panic in a moving picture show at Albrightsville, Preston county, W. Va., twenty-nine persons were injured.

The senate is making ready to take up house tariff bills.

AMERICAN SHIPS WILL PAY TOLL

STEVENS OF MINNESOTA SAYS ALL BOATS LIKELY TO BE TAXED THE SAME.

INCOME & SUGAR TO PASS

The House, But Likely to be Stalled in the Senate.—Senator Bristow of Kansas, Lambasts Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin.

Washington, March 5.—The interstate commerce committee which has under consideration the matter of tolls for the Panama canal, has practically decided, says Representative Stevens of Minnesota, to have all vessels, whether foreign or domestic, pay the same charges for use of the canal, and that all vessels doing an interstate business which are owned by any railroad in the same trade, shall be excluded from use of the canal.

The Democratic bill to levy an excise tax on all net incomes above $5,000 a year, including salaries, will be reported with the bill to put sugar on the free list. It is expected both measures will be passed by the house within 10 days.

The income tax, or extended corporation act bill, under the senate rules, will go to the committee on judiciary, where it will meet an unfriendly reception. The free sugar bill will go to the finance committee. Senate leaders declare that the finance committee hardly would feel justified in reporting a bill cutting off more than $50,000,000 in revenues without knowing what the senate proposed doing with the income tax bill which is looked to to make up the deficit. On the other hand, it was said the members of the judiciary committee would not be easily convinced of the necessity of the new taxing measure in the absence of the passage of the sugar bill and the consequent deficit in the revenues.

Bristow Scores Stephenson.

Senator Bristow's speech in opposition to the retention of Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin as a United States senator was concluded. Mr. Bristow read extracts from the testimony intended to show that money had been corruptly used in carrying the primaries for Stephenson. He said large sums of money had been used corruptly in procuring the influence of the game warden of the state and his deputies.

Mr. Bristow occupied two days in the presentation of the facts which he said was a disagreeable duty, but necessary for the protection of the seats of the senate against barter and sales.

As a climax to an exciting session of the committee in which the Lawrence strike conditions were revealed from several rival sources, Representative Victor Berger, of Wisconsin, and Robert McCartney, of the citizens committee of Lawrence almost came to blows and were separated by Representative Wilson of Illinois.

Coal Miners See Victory.

London, March 5.—The coal strike, the greatest in the history of the British Isles, marked time over the week end. One satisfactory feature is the complete absence of disorder in the districts affected. Labor leaders in recent speeches have insisted upon the importance of supporting the miners, because now that the government has decided to institute a minimum wage in connection with the mines it will be impossible much longer to withhold establishing a minimum wage in all industries.

French Strike Possible.

Paris, March 4.—The possibility of French miners following the example of the English workers, while remote, nevertheless exists. This subject was discussed by the national congress at Angers, but the decision was left entirely to the executive committee, which will order a strike only in event of parliament acting unfavorably on various reforms for which the miners are now agitating. A strike of the French miners could not be considered a movement in support of the English strikers.

Veteran Cab Driver Killed.

Chicago, March 5. — A driverless horse attracted the attention of the police to the unexplained death of Archie Michaud, one of the oldest cab drivers in Chicago. Following the horse, which still wore a bridle and other pieces of harness, the police found Michaud lying unconscious on the pavement. Near by was the wreckage of Michaud's cab, which apparently had been run down by an automobile or street car. Michaud for many years had a stand at the Polk street depot.

Forty Seek Hangman's Job.

Montreal, March 5.—Since the publication in the Montreal newspapers of the statement, Sheriff Martin was unable to find an executioner to hang Jules Plourde, March 8, 40 men have called on Sheriff Lemieux of Montreal to seek his influence to secure them the post. The applicants were of all ages, some being mere boys. Sheriff Lamieux has had to order his office staff to admit no more would-be hangmen. None of the applicants here was definitely engaged, but the names of a few were taken.

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK

TOILERS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF 5 PER CENT INCREASE.

Authorities Taking Extra Precautions to Prevent Any Further Outbreak.

Lawrence, March 5.—A crisis in the big textile strike came when the mill owners' offer of a minimum wage increase of 5 per cent became effective. Although the Industrial Workers of the World rejected the offer, the employes in the Arlington and Pacific mills, who are affiliated with the Central Labor Union, voted to return to work. Five hundred wool sorters, representing all the mills in this city, and 300 mule spinners also voted at meetings to return.

The Industrial Workers of the World remain firm in their original demands, which includes a 15 per cent increase, double pay for overtime, the abolition of the premium system, the taking back of all strikers and the release from jail of Strike Leaders Ettor and Giovannitti, who are held on a murder charge.

More pickets were placed on duty by the Industrial Workers of the World in an endeavor to prevent the mill hands from returning to work. The authorities, on the other hand, took extra precautions to prevent outbreaks or the intimidation of returning workers. Leader Haywood of the Industrial Workers addressed several meetings of strikers.

In a telegram to the strike leaders, Congressman Victor Berger requested that some women, alleged to have been clubbed by the police, be sent to Washintgon to appear before the house rules committee which is considering a resolution for a federal investigation of the strike.

5,000 DEAD IN MUTINY

Property Loss At Peking Alone Will Amount to Over $15,000,000.

Peking, March 5. — Five thousand people have been killed here since the outbreak of the mutiny, according to figures given out by Yuan Shi Kai. The property loss will amount to more than $15,000,000.

The city was comparatively calm as the result of the presence of 3,000 foreign soldiers. Nearly all of the fires had been extinguished or had burned out and little looting was reported. The mutineers appeared to have been awed by the announcement that four British regiments are on their way here from Hong Kong.

Scores of suspects were summarily executed but it was noticeable that few of the victims were soldiers. A report was circulated that the actual mutineers had been promised immunity if they would not attemtp any more outbreaks.

Soldiers Loot in Tien Tsin.

Tein Esin.—Rioting of a serious nature took place here. The outbreak had been feared and precautions were taken as far as possible to protect residents from harm. Between 9 and 10 o'clock the soldiers mutinied, set fire to a number of buildings, and then began looting from house to house. They were joined by the rabble. Shops and banks in all the important streets were looted, and some of them were wrecked.

No fewer than 14 fires were raging simultaneously in various parts of the city. The soldiers broke into the Pie Yang mint, which was set on fire. Machinery, to the value of many thousands of dollars, was destroyed. The looters entered the silver stores, wrecking off the iron shutters and even making holes in the walls. The mint was looted of everything portable and the ground was strewn with empty cartridge clips and cases.

The German consul dispatched a guard to protect German residents in the city, composed chiefly of the engineering staff of the Tien Tsin-Fukow railway. A German doctor, named Schreeter, who entered the city to assist German friends, was shot dead by looting soldiers. Foreigners generally, however, were not molested. A company of the Somerset regiment was sent to the British station at midnight to protect the railway property.

Fires At Leopold Rothschild.

London, March 5.—An attempt to shoot Leopold Rothschild was made by a man as Mr. Rothschild was entering a motor car in front of the bank in St. Swithin's Lane in the city of London. Mr. Rothschild was not hit.

Blythe Adopts Montana.

Bozeman, March 5. — Samuel C. Blythe, author of "Who's Who and Why," counts himself a Montana resident, owning a ranch in this county, and was in the state last week to register, having chosen Helena as his place of residence.

Pere Marquette Man Resigns.

Detroit, March 5.—W. D. Trump tendered his resignation as general superintendent of the Pere Marquette road, effective May 1. Mr. Trump has been connected with the system continuously for more than 30 years.

Steamer Caught in the Ice.

Chicago, March 5. — The steamer Flora M. Hill of the Hill line was caught hard and fast in the pack ice two miles off North Chicago after bucking the ice fields from Chicago to a point 33 miles north.

LEUPP TESTIFIES ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

FORMER COMMISSIONER IS FIRST WITNESS AT HEARING IN WASHINGTON.

NO FAITH IN THE INDIANS

Thinks Civilization Would Be Promoted by Giving Them Their Property and Letting Them Blow It In.

Washington, March 5. — The house committee on expenditures in the interior department met and decided to let the subcommittee, consisting of Chairman James R. Graham, Representative Henry George, Jr., and F. W. Mondell, continue the hearings which have been inprogress in Minnesota for over a month, and that the subcommittee shall submit its report to the full committee.

Among those present at the hearing today were former Indian Commissioner Francis E. Leupp, Joseph R. Farr, former Government Superintendent of Logging M. C. Burch, and E. C. O'Brien representing the department of justice. Mr. Leupp was called to the witness stand.

Judge Burch said that the purpose of calling Mr. Leupp was to develop fully his connection with White Earth affairs. Mr. Leupp was commissioner when the Clapp and Steenerson bills were enacted. He also visited White Earth during the summer following the taking effect of the Clapp law of 1906 permitting mixed bloods to sell their allotments and he obtained first-hand information. Upon his return he told of methods being used to get Indian lands and reported that upon threats of prosecution a number of the whites had returned deeds to the Indian owners. It was intimated today that in the course of investigation some prominent men will be connected with the rejection of bids for Indian timber at the Crookston sale in 1905. Joseph R. Farr testified in Detroit that he had not found in the Indian bureau that the big lumbermen of Minnesota were trying to get this lumber. It has also been reported that Eugene Bruce, the lumber expert of the forestry bureau, had a part in securing the rejection of bids, but the intimation today is that more prominent men were instrumental in preventing the sale.

Continuing the inquiry on the question of competence of Indians, Chairman Graham said to the witness: "We got the impression while in Minnesota that the best way to deal with the Indian was to let him have all his property, and that if he lost it, it would accelerate the process of civilization."

"I agree with that," said Mr. Leupp, "except as to the helpless Indians and the women."

"About how many would dissipate their property?" asked Mr. Graham.

"I should say about 50 per cent," answered the witness.

The inquiry then turned on the legality of Indian councils. The witness said he doubted whether any council was legal.

OROZCO IS DEFEATED

General's Men Driven Out of Chihuahua—Vasquistas Are on Way.

El Paso, March 5.—The city of Chihuahua is virtually in the control of Pancho Villa, leader of the federal forces in Chihuahua. Fighting is still in progress there, but the Villa forces are rapidly driving Orozco's troops out. No further details have been received and it is impossible to estimate the casualties. The dispatches say Villa's force of 800 men succeeded in getting into the city and occupying strong positions. After a fierce battle Orozco's troops, which have defended the city for twenty-four hours, were driven out of several strongholds, but they have not yet been entirely dislodged.

Twelve hundred Vasquistas, with two rapid-fire guns, and two skilled American gunners, are in Sauz, awaiting the arrival of General Ynez Salazar from Juarez. The Vasquistas are commanded by General Emilio P. Campa. They left Juarez last night on three special trains and will proceed to Chihuahua today to wrest the city from Villa. In addition to this force, General Maximo Castillo, with 400 rebels, is rushing to Chihuahua from Villa Ahumada, and Colonel Braulio Hernandez, with 350 Vasquistas, is marching to Orozco's aid.

$40,000 Home for Virginia Elks.

Duluth, March 5.—The Elks' lodge of Virginia has decided to erect an Elks' home in that city this year at a cost of $40,000.

Negress, Leprosy Victim, Dies.

Indianapolis, March 5.—Mrs. Lavina Blackwell, 60, a negress, died at her home here of leprosy after being under quarantine since Dec. 26, 1911, when the nature of her illness was discovered. The body will be cremated.

Packer's Case Nearing Close.

Chicago, March 5.—The government case against the Chicago packers before United States Judge George A. Carpenter probably will come to a close this week.

SUFFRAGETTES RIOT IN JAIL

SING "MARSEILLAISE" AND SHOUT FOR MRS. PANKHURST.

Detroit Women in Mass Meeting Indorse Movement in England.

London, March 5.—A hundred suffragettes, awaiting trial in Holloway jail, engaged in a riotous demonstration lasting two hours. They broke the windows of their cells, sang the "Marseillaise," and shouted to see "Our leader, Mrs. Pankhurst."

Many thousands of police have been ordered to be in the vicinity of parliament square and other elaborate precautions have been adopted against another threatened suffragist demonstration.

A suffragette attempted to start a fire in the general postoffice. The woman carried a bundle of paper and flimsy material, soaked with paraffine, into the public hall and set it on fire near a corner. She then smashed a plate glass window and surrendered herself to the police.

Detroit.—At the conclusion of an address by Sylvia Pankhurst, the British militant suffragette, before a large audience here, a cablegram was sent to Premier Asquith of Great Britain in behalf of the votes-for-women campaign now in progress in London.

In her address Miss Pankhurst charged that Chancellor Lloyd-George of the British cabinet was chiefly responsible for the defeat of the efforts of the women to secure enfranchisement because of his refusal to include women in the manhood suffrage bill.

"Kimmel" Found to be Imposter.

St. Louis, Mo., March 5. — A. J. White, the former convict who alleges he is George A. Kimmel, missing banker of Arkansas City, Kan., and Niles, Mich., is an imposter, according to the decision by a jury in the federal court here. In reporting to Judge Amidson, the jurors declared they had decided the claimant was not Kimmel, but had not yet reached a decision as to whether Kimmel was dead when the suit was filed in 1904. The jurors did not say whether there was any question as to whether they believed Kimmel dead or alive now.

To Re-Open Smelter Case.

Washington, March 5.—The supreme court announced its decision to review the action of the ninth United States circuit court of appeals, which denied relief to the farmers of Deer Lodge valley from the sulphur fumes of the smelters at Anaconda.

Further Lutheran Union Considered.

Madison, Wis., March 5.—A movement is under way for the Union of the Hauge-Lutheran synod embracing 75,000 members with the recently merged United Lutherans and Synod Lutheran bodies.

Annie Yeamans Dead.

New York, March 5.—Mrs. Annie Yeamans, who has been known as "America's grand old woman of the stage," died from a stroke of paralysis.

THE MARKETS

Twin City Markets.

Minneapolis, March 5.—Wheat, May, $1.07¼; July, $1.08⅜; No. 1 northern, $1.08¼; No. 2 northern, $1.06¼; No. 1 durum, $1.05; No. 3 corn, 66c; No. 3 white oats, 50½c; barley, malting, $1.25; No. 2 rye, 87½c; No. 1 flax, $2.02.

Duluth, March 5.—Wheat, May, $1.06½; July, $1.07¼; No. 1 northern, $1.07; No. 1 durum, $1.05½.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, March 5.—World shipments larger than expected pulled down prices today in the market for wheat. Besides the arrival of loaded cars northwest reached a total ahead of last year, the number at Winnipeg especially being remarkable. Cables, too, did not prove very responsive to Saturday's strength here. The weather map continued to show generally favorable conditions and the short interest has been largely cut down. Opening quotations were ¼c down to a shade up. May started at $1.04⅛ to $1.04¼, a loss of ⅛c to ¼c, touched $1.04⅜ and then sagged to $1.03¾@1.03⅞.

Smallness of the decrease in the visible supply led to a further backset. The close was nervous with May at $1.03¾@1.03⅞, a net decline of ⅛@⅜c.

Profit taking on the part of longs made the corn market. At first, however, prices displayed an upward tendency on account of unsetled weather. May opened with ⅛c to ¼c advance at 71⅝c to 72c, but gradually declined to 71¼@71⅜c.

The realizing carried the market still lower. Closing figures easy at 71¼c for May, a loss of ⅜c net.

Demand for oats was limited and there was a feeling of depression in consequence. May started unchanged to ⅛c lower at 53⅜c to 53½c, and descended to 53¼c.

Firmness at the yards gave provisions an appearance of strength at the outset, but offerings increased and the market weakened as a result. Initial sales were at Saturday night's level to 5c advance with May deliveries $15.90 for pork; $9.45 for lard and $8.82½ for ribs.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, March 5.—Cattle—Receipts estimated at 20,000; market steady; beeves, $5@8.85; Texas steers, $4.70@6; western steers, $5.10@7.10; stockers and feeders, $4.10@6.30; cows and heifers, $2.25@6.70; calves, $6@8.75. Hogs—Receipts, 50,000; market generally 5c higher; light, $6.30@6.55; mixed, $6.30@6.60; heavy, $6.30@6.60; rough, $6.30@6.40; pigs, $4.20@6.35; bulk of sales, $6.45@6.55. Sheep—Receipts, 35,000; market steady; native, $3.25@4.85; western, $3.75@4.90; yearlings, $4.90@5.75; lambs, native, $4.50@7; western, $5@7.15.

Costa Ricans Are Friendly.

San Jose, March 5.—The president of Costa Rica, Ricardo Jiminez, is very kindly disposed toward the United States, but is not impressed with the idea of a Central American union. In an interview with the Associated Press correspondent accompanying Secretary Knox, President Jiminez said that the visit of the secretary of state to Costa Rica was an act of great courtesy on the part of the American government and expressed the hope that such visits would be continued.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room.

"Power!" Blackstock laughed harshly. "No, he won't mind," he replied, ironic. "Power's gone already. We had a little falling out and he took one of my rowboats—the only rowboat—and left, without so much's by-your-leave; rowed across to the Vineyard, I guess. In the fog, too—the poor fool. Serve him right if he got carried out to sea and was never heard of again—the hound!"

And still Katherine's expression evinced no indication that she understood.

"You don't seem to like Power much," Coast suggested uneasily.

"No, I didn't like the dog," he said, measuring a drink with the same uncanny accuracy, his prominent and sightless eyes seeming to watch the liquor mount in the glass. "He was a surly devil with a devil's temper. One of my servants—Chinese are the only kind we keep in a place like this—tried to prevent him from taking the boat, and Power turned on him and nearly brained the poor fellow with a rock. We missed him and after a long search found him insensible down on the beach. He's been out of his head ever since—delirious. You may hear him during the night. Hope he won't keep you awake."

He set down an empty glass.

"It takes a deal to keep me awake when my mind's set on sleep," Coast evaded. "I'm sorry about Power's misbehaving, though."

"Well, profit by his example, and don't mix in matters that don't concern you—here, at any rate," said Blackstock insolently. "Kate!"

"Coming." The woman reappeared. "I couldn't find your cane," she said, as she crossed to the man. A gleam of white, a slip of white paper between the fingers of her left hand caught Coast's attention. He sought her eyes and found them meaningful.

With a word of grudging acknowledgment Blackstock took his hat and stick. "Come along, Handyside. We won't need a light; light hasn't any meaning to the blind. You knew my sight was gone, didn't you?"

"One would hardly suspect it." Coast took up his sou'wester and followed the man to the door. The rustle of the woman's gown told him that she was near behind him.

"Oh, I find my way about; I know this cheesebox of an island like the palm of my hand. It's no worse than navigating your own room in the dark."

"Allow me . . ." Coast turned the knob and opened the door; Blackstock bent his head to the roaring wind and shouldered out against its force.

A hand touched Coast's; the slip of paper passed into his palm. For a single instant he looked into the eyes of the woman he loved—looked and read their message of pleading and despair. Then with a sadly negative shake of his head he followed her husband out into the wind-whipped darkness, pulling the door to behind him.

Their shoulders touched as they trudged off. The unavoidable contact turned Coast sick with hatred and loathing. Yet he held himself strongly in hand, crumpling fiercely that tiny slip of paper in his palm with a strange sense of confidence, as it were a guerdon of eventual success.

She had not denounced him. He would save her, he would save her.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Look here, Handyside . . . Voorhis give you any message for me?"

Blackstock stood with his back to the stove in the farmhouse kitchen; hands in pockets, his heavy shoulders lifted, he swayed all but imperceptibly on the balls of his feet. In the dull saffron illumination of two common kerosene lamps, he loomed hugely in the room, overshadowing and dwarfing the two mute, placid Chinese who pattered about, preparing a meal—having been routed out of bed for that purpose.

Coast, tilting back in a kitchen chair on the far side of the table from Blackstock, considered quickly and lied deliberately and whole-heartedly, with full knowledge of the consequences of a misstep. Sooner or later the unmasking was bound to come, whether he will it or no. He was not eager for it yet, but prepared against it at any time. . . . Sooner or later that word would fall from his lips—or from Katherine's—or some untoward happening would precipitate the inevitable—revealing him, an impostor. The hour like the outcome was on the knees of the gods. The sense of fatality was strong upon his soul.

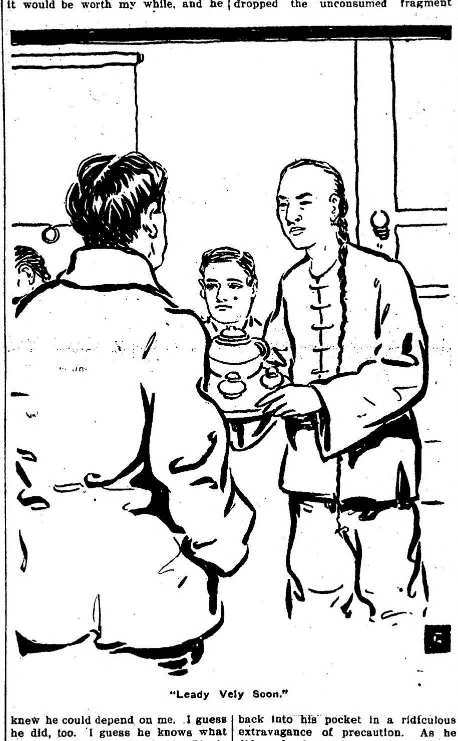
"There wasn't time," he said. "I was off-duty and they rounded me up just in time to catch the midnight train."

"And Voorhis sent no word?" Blackstock demanded incredulously.

"He said you'd be advised by wireless."

"No more than that?"

"Only I'd find this job after my own heart, to do as I was told and mind my own business and see nothing except what you shoved under my nose; it would be worth my while, and he knew he could depend on me. I guess he did, too. I guess he knows what kind of a man you need, Mr. Black, and Mr. Voorhis isn't the sort to pick an operator out of the grab-bag for a special purpose. Isn't that so?"



"Leady Vely Soon."

"If I know Voorhis, it is." Blackstock rocked back and forth on his feet, pursing his full, loose-lipped mouth. "I can tell more about you in the morning," he said; "we'll have a talk and come to an understanding."

"Why not now?"

"Morning will do," said Blackstock decidedly.

For some minutes Blackstock did not speak. Coast glanced up at him, and as if he were aware of that fact the man shook himself out of what had seemed profound abstraction.

"How about Mr. Handyside's supper, John?" he asked.

"Leady vely soon," replied one of the Chinese meekly.

"Hurry it up, then; he's tired. . . . Guess I'll step upstairs and have a look at Chang," said Blackstock. "That's the fellow Power knocked out, you know," he added superfluously as he left the room, moving lightly with quick steps noiseless in his rubber-soled shoes.

Left alone, Coast fell to the food which one of the Chinamen presently set before him. Although up to that time excitement had numbed him to the fact, he had tasted nothing since mid-day, and was now excessively hungry. The meal, plain but well-cooked, proved a great relief from the somewhat monotonous diet of bacon and eggs to which he had been restricted since the previous morning. He took his time over it, however, and toward the conclusion began to wonder what Blackstock found to keep him so long above-stairs.

The dishes were removed and the Chinamen set about washing up, chattering to one another in low, expressionless tones. Still Blackstock did not come down. Coast lighted his pipe. His thoughts reverting to Katherine, in natural course swung back to the slip of paper reposing at the bottom of his pocket.

He looked cautiously round; the servants were intent upon their work, stolidly incurious as to himself, to all appearances; from the upper floor came reiterations of the high-pitched and querulous accents of the wounded man—a sound to which he had become accustomed since Blackstock had left him. He felt, consequently, fairly safe.

Producing the scrap of paper, he stealthily smoothed it out across his knee. It bore a single sentence hurriedly and lightly in pencil:

"Neither your life nor mine is safe if you persist."

Very thoughtfully he twisted the paper into a little spill, lighted it over the chimney of one of the lamps, applied the flame to the tobacco in his pipe, then held it while it burned. . . .

Precisely what was one to understand from that message? That Katherine had awakened to the truth regarding the killing of Van Tuyl—or merely that she mistrusted Blackstock's temper, should he by any chance be led to suspect Coast's true identity? That she knew the truth about Power? Or that through some subtle process of feminine intuition she had divined that Blackstock was not wholly hoodwinked by the attempted impersonification of Handyside, and would, were his doubts confirmed, seek to punish her as well as the impostor for keeping silence?

She had not had time to write more. . . .

The spill burned down until its tiny flame flickered blue and expired within a fraction of an inch of his finger-tips. He pinched out the spark, and dropped the unconsumed fragment back into his pocket in a ridiculous extravagance of precaution. As he did so he became conscious of a shadow bulking large in a corner of his field of vision, and he looked up suddenly, startled to discover Blackstock almost at his elbow. With such catlike lightness and silence the fellow moved!

Coast pushed back his chair from the table, as if to arise, but Blackstock dropped a hand compellingly upon his shoulder and held it there.

"No," he said; "don't get up; you're tired. I'm off—just stopped to say good night. Guess you'll find your room comfortable—if Chang doesn't keep you awake with his jabbering."

"I say, Mr. Black," Coast could not refrain from asking, "how the dickens do you manage to get about with such sureness?" The inquiry was natural; his curiosity was piqued; the thing was not natural. He tried to bring himself back into character. "I don't mean to be fresh, but you're a wonder."

A curious smile dawned on the face lowering over him—a smile of the features only; nothing remarkable, perhaps, since the eyes were dead. "Habit," said Blackstock; "habit and training assisted by a strong feeling for direction. I guess I'm something like the guy in that book by the man who wrote Trilby—d'you remember?—the fellow that could feel the north—turn to it blindfolded? Sort of human compass. . . . Well, that's me. Tell me where I am, and so long as I know the ground, I'll find my way. For instance, I'm going back to the bungalow now—alone. For that matter, I came practically alone; my wife tells me the night's black as a stack of cats."

INCREASE BY GREAT NORTHERN REDUCES RAIL TAX DECREASE

Revenue of State From Gross Earnings Impost Is Only $226,331.49 Lower Instead of the More Than $300,000 Expected by Officials.

With the Great Northern, the last of the railroads to report, reporting an increase in gross earnings of $1,111,274, the state faces a decrease in the 1911 revenue from railroads of $226,331.49. This loss is less than had been anticipated. Earlier reports showed a decrease of more than $300,000.

Most of the larger roads showed a decrease in returns this year, the Rock Island, Omaha, Soo and Great Northern being the only ones of the larger lines to report any considerable increase. The Soo was the largest gainer, due largely to the inlcerase in its lines. It reported an increase in gross earnings of more than $1,500,000. The Great Northern is next in increase. The Omaha increased its business $323,071.05 and the Rock Island gained $33,767.82.

Steel Roads Fall Off.

The principal losses were on the two steel corporation roads on the iron range. These two companies reported a decrease of nearly $7,000,000 in their 1911 business from that of 1910. The Northern Pacific reported a loss of more than $200,000 in its 1911 business, and the St. Paul, Minneapolis & St. Louis and North-Western lines all report losses.

A large part of the gain made by the Great Northern is in the business formerly handled by the iron range roads. The shipments in ore are said to have fallen off but a little less than half in the last year. The Great Northern will pay into the state treasury today $982,788.91, or an increase of $44,450 over last year's tax.

1910 an Unusual Year.

That the conditions this year are about normal and the decrease is due to unusual shipments in 1910 are shown by comparing the figures for the last four years. In 1908 the state received from its gross earnings tax $3,115,027.19. In 1909 the tax amounted to $3,640,568.93. In 1910 it was $3,896,091.74 and in 1911, $3,670,760.25. This shows 1911 $30,000 ahead of 1909, when conditions were normal.

The following table shows the earnings and taxes of the roads in 1910 and 1911:

MILLARD HALL BURNED

Dental Building at University of Minnesota.

Minneapolis. — Millard hall, the dental building at the University of Minnesota, was destroyed by fire at an early hour. It was one of the smaller buildings on the campus, and probably worth about $150,000. The insurance is about half that.

Dean Owre, head of the dentistry department, said that the instruments and appliances in the building, owned by the university, were worth $25,000. There were 240 dental students. The senior and junior classes, about half the total number, owned their own instruments, valued at about $250 each. The 120 freshmen owned instruments valued at about $50 each. The losses of the students will be total, it is believed, as there was no insurance on their property. Mr. Owre, Dr. Brown and other teachers and professors had much personal property, including instruments and books, all burned.

NEW SCHOOL IN VIRGINIA

Special Election May Be Abandoned, as Bonds May Not Be Needed.

Virginia.—Members of the school board decided upon a proposition to erect a new $65,000 north side school building in the north side addition, instead of the Rooney addition, the object being to avoid taking any present risk on account of an alleged flaw in the title to the property in the latter addition. The north side site is of such contour that the board believes it will be possible to use the present plans and specifications without material change and insure the construction of the proposed building this year. Nor is it considered absolutely essential to the school board to issue bonds and the special election may be avoided, in case it is decided to increase the tax levy next year to meet the expense of constructing the building. The assessed valuation of the district is more than $21,000,000 and the extra tax would not seriously inconvenience the taxpayers.

William Rooney, after whom the Rooney addition is named, has proposed through the board, through his attorney, M. H. McMahon, that condemnation proceedings be at once instituted to enable the board to get a clear title as soon as possible. Mr. Rooney offering to pay the expense of the condemnation proceedings.

PIONEERS HAVE DINNER.

Money Creek Family at Reunion Reviews Life for Half Century.

Winona.—A dinner party of the Robinson family at Money Creek was attended by brothers and sisters with their wives and husbands all past the half century milestone in years. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Otis G. Morrison, who recently celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding, and who lived over fifty years on the same farm. Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Philip Todd, who lived on the same farm over forty years, now residents of Money Creek; David Robinson, a veteran of the civil war, and others. The parents of this family came from Maine and were pioneers in Money Creek Valley. They celebrated their golden wedding several years before their death on the farm they obtained from the government.

Bracken Won't Call Health Board to Consider Trachoma Cases.

St Paul.—Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, was at Spring Valley, where he delivered an address. When the board of health met January 9, it set March 19 as its next meeting date because of the proximity of that meeting, no special session will be called to take up the trachoma cases, reported among Indians on the White Earth reservation.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys.

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good-bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K-2075 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

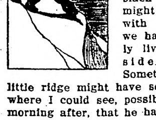
The American Black Bear

by Dan J. Singer

COPYRIGHT BY FIELD AND STREAM



I HAVE spent a good many weeks, even months, at a time, in the various ranges of the black bear, and might really say with truth that we have practically lived together side by side. Sometimes just a little ridge might have separated us, where I could see, possibly the next morning after, that he had been having a fine feast in a blueberry patch.

One night we were a little more sociable. I had just removed the pelt from a coyote, and had intended carrying the carcass away from camp the next day, but left it that night a few feet from my tent. During the night my friend (who, by the way, always reminds me of a good-natured boy with a fur overcoat on), came down and saved me the trouble by carrying it away for me. I did not hear him arrive, for I believe I was asleep, but the telltale tracks were enough to convince me in the morning. And so by having lived with him in his own home, watched, photographed, and studied his ways, I can set down for those who may be interested, some of his characteristics and habits.

The range of the black bear extends from Mexico to Alaska, and they have been met with in nearly every state and territory within the United States; also Labrador, Province of Quebec, Alberta and Assiniboia, British Columbia, and the Mackenzie River basin. All black bears hibernate during the winter months. There are, however, woodsmen in the south who disagree with me on this point, saying they have seen their tracks during every month of the winter, and the mild climate does not force them to lay up in a cave or den as it would in the more severe weather of northern latitudes. I have myself seen bear tracks during the winter months, and even in the deep snow of the northern state. But this is the exception, and I have no doubt that these bears are simply shifting to another sleeping place, having been driven out for one reason or another. Their dens may not have been well chosen, and they possibly became leaky, or exposed to the winds, or some hunter might pass that way with a keen nose and an inquisitive canine that would cause him to roll out in a hurry. It is safe to say all black bears den up both north and south, sometime between November 1 and January 1, depending on the altitude, weather and latitude. They emerge in the spring, usually from the first part of April to the middle of May, according to conditions, the males often appearing some two weeks before the females. It is at this time in the spring, just after they have left their winter quarters, that a bear's pelt is in its prime. During hibernation, as no food is laid up, they, of course, do not eat, nor do they drink, unless they make use of the snow that has fallen about them. Contrary to the general supposition, they are not in a deep coma or hazy condition, for they are easily aroused. It is true that they sleep, but are quick to detect danger and fully equal to the occasion of making off and looking up other quarters if disturbed.

The cunning little cubs (for what deserves the name more than a little woolly, black cub?) are brought forth during hibernation, usually between February 1 and March 1, and it is several weeks before they are able to leave the den with their mother. From one to four cubs may be born—I would say two or three is the average; four is rare, but three is often met with, and a she-bear followed by one cub does not always indicate that the young hopeful had no brothers or sisters, as they may not have survived all the dangers of cubdom. At birth they are ridiculously small, compared with the size of the mother, and weigh but a few ounces. I have never weighed one, but understand that Dr. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological park, has, and their weight runs from 8 to 18 ounces, depending on the number in the litter. Their eyes are closed—they have no teeth, nor have they their little furry jacket as yet. The reason advanced for bears being so unusually small at birth, is that the old bear having remained all winter without food, and not being able to forage for some weeks after the young are born, it would naturally be a great drain to nurse cubs that weighed several pounds. So Nature has thus provided in this way.

Unlike the grizzly, the black bears mate every year, or nearly so. Grizzlys may be put down for about every other year. When the cubs are from six to eight weeks old, they are able to accompany their mother and do so all during that summer. It is usually about berry time before the little fellows develop a grown-up appetite and commence to rustle for themselves. Not very long after this the old bear drives them off to shift for themselves. In some cases they have been found denning the following fall with their mother, but this is unusual.

Now a little bear knows exactly what he wants, and what is good to eat just as well as you do. He knows every root, every bulb, every berry that will make him fat and happy. How does he know this? I cannot say; you will have to ask him. When I say this I have in mind the following case that was brought to my notice: A young cub, only a few weeks old, was caught one spring and fed on milk. He was kept in camp until the following fall when they moved camp down on some bottom lands. Here, while running about, he would suddenly stop, dig up some roots and devour them with a relish. He seemed to be as fully prepared to forage for himself as if he had been taking lessons from his mother all summer. Another much mistaken idea about the black bear is that he emerges from his winter quarters very thin and emaciated (this so far, is true); that he is desperately hungry after his long fast; or is terribly ferocious, and inclined to attack anything on sight, man included. This is not so, although I have often heard it so stated. Not even a black bear with his enviable digestive apparatus can or does indulge in a hearty meal after so long a fast. The organs of a bear are no different from those of a man in this respect, and after their long disuse are only capable of assimilating the daintiest morsels of food—such as grass shoots, tender roots and their like. In fact, at first they show little or no desire to eat, but after a few days they commence to partake again of pretty much everything. I say this because a bear is omnivorous, which means that he eats quite generally everything—both vegetables and meat. They are not as carnivorous as generally supposed, usually being contented with such small animals as ground squirrels and field mice, but still, when the opportunity offers, they have a great propensity for stealing down ever so carefully to a near-by farm and carrying off a fat little shoat. They, too, have a great weakness for sheep, and it is hardly necessary for me to mention honey and sweets, for here we see him again like a good-natured, mischievous boy. The various insects form a long list of goodies for them, and they spend much of their time overturning stones, prying open old stumps and logs, poking their nose and sniffing at every tiny hole or crevice for such dainty morsels as grubs, caterpillars, crickets, and ants. The black bear seems to partake of such a variety of food that it is hard to say just which he enjoys the most. Ants are one of his favorite dishes, and I have no doubt that they consume as many of these as some of the ant-eaters of South America. One of their favorite methods of catching a certain species of ants, which are very vicious little fighters, is to thrust a paw in the midst of one of their hills, and as they swarm over the bear's paw with the purpose of attacking their enemy, they are quickly lapped up.

But what greater picture of contentment can one imagine than a bear in a good-sized blueberry patch? Sitting half up on his haunches and pulling the branches towards him with his paws—fairly shoveling in the berries that help fatten him up for the long winter—they are indeed great berry eaters and will often travel miles to locate a patch, and then will patronize it long and often.

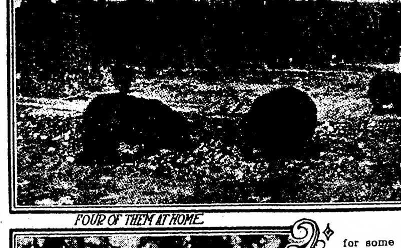
Last fall in the Sierra Madre mountains in northern Mexico I was camped for some weeks on a wild canyon through which ran a small river. Along the banks grew numerous juniper trees and for several miles I could see where the branches had been literally all pulled down by bears in pursuit of the sweet juniper berries. I do not think I have ever seen so much bear sign; it looked as if all the bear in the country had been in on the great feast. It was the latter part of December and they had just recently gone into winter quarters, or we certainly would have been able to make a record on bears if we had cared to. There is another red berry that grows in that section the bear are very fond of, I think the name is manacea It is a low-growing tree and the bears are often given to sunning themselves in these trees.

The black bear prefers his meat well tainted, and, in fact, I do not believe it can be too strong for him. Unlike the grizzly he does not cover over or bury a carcass, but this again is only characteristic of him, for he does not feed, or in fact do anything as systematically or as seriously as the grizzly—much preferring a little mischief to work, and here again we see him the happy-go-lucky fellow. I cannot take space to mention all the fancies of his appetite, but this gives a very good general idea of his diet. I must not omit to say, however, he is something of a fisherman, both for game and for sport, and with a quick stroke of his paw, sends many an unsuspecting fish hurtling through the air to land well up on the bank, where he can once more please his palate.

I have often heard of seven hundred pound black bears; there are none. Between four and five hundred pounds are as heavy as they will ever tip the scales. Bears are very rarely weighed by hunters, and the estimates given of their weight are very often much in excess, but, of course, not always purposely so. Broadly speaking, I would say that the average weight of the average black bear, taking them as you happen to find them, would be approximately one hundred and fifty pounds. I am not speaking of full-grown bears, as one is likely to kill several partly-grown bears to one full grown. A full-grown bear in the spring may weigh but a little over two hundred, and the same bear in the fall might easily be close to a four hundred pounder.

How many of us have gone into the woods in our early hunting days and looked around wondering which would really be the safest tree to shin up in case an old black bear should have designs on us. Now that little sapling over there looks good. They say a slim tree with no branches is the best to nest in on an occasion like this. But for those who do not already know, we will settle that question right here. It does not matter in the least what tree you select, whether it is one some two or three feet in diameter, or just that little sapling; it is safe to say if you can get up, so can the bear. But this is the point; he won't come. No black bear, when given such a fine opportunity to get away, will stick around. Their claws, which are very unlike those of the grizzly, are especially adapted for climbing, while the front paws of a grizzly are especially adapted for digging, being long, and from four to six inches in length, and nearly straight. Grizzlies do not and cannot climb trees. On the other hand, the black bear's claws are shorter, more curved, and thicker at the base, which enables them to go up a huge tree very much as a cat or a squirrel would, and also a slim one just large enough to sustain their weight.

In conclusion would say that I do not prentend to know all about black bears—no one man can; but I have found them sufficiently interesting to have taken a great deal of pleasure in devoting a long study to them, and have here set down only what I know to be facts.



FOUR OF THEM AT HOME.

Family Diary Shows Temperature Kept by Each Generation, Along With Daily Chronicle of Other Events.

Philadelphia.—One hundred and twenty-two years of weather records, kept by three generations of the same family, side by side with comments on men and things long ago passed from memory, form the interesting contents of a large library of diaries, the property of Jacob R. Elfreth.

True to the tradition of his Quaker forbears, this seventy-year-old chronologist of the weather since 1870 has written in black and white the story of the mercury's vagaries as he observed them, and his records stand against the hazy contentions of any "oldest inhabitant" who may venture fictitious tales of how cold it used to be.

The story of the curious diaries which make up this interesting weather history is bound up with the growth of Philadelphia. From 1789 to 1850 Caleb Pierce, a native of Chester county, kept the first records. He was the maternal grandfather of Mr. Elfreth. His diaries were not so complete as those of his son and grandson, but their interest and worth are enhanced by antiquity.

Most of these writings were done at his home, Seventh and Arch streets, where he lived while the Quaker town was booming into her early twenties. He kept a hardware store in Market street above Second, but before he plodded along the cobble stones of a cold winter's morning to open up the little shop he recorded the temperature.

Long before he gave up the writing of his diary Jacob R. Elfreth, Sr., took up the work in 1812. Sixty-eight volumes of nearly uniform size, painstakingly relating the happenings of those often troublous times, are now in the possession of the aged son.

To J. R. Elfreth Jr. the task of keeping these records was then assigned, and he has kept them faithfully since 1870. They, together with the others, will be given to the Friends' Historical society when the last entry has been made, for the present writer is the last in the direct line of ancestry.

Not infrequently he is a historical contributor to the local newspapers; in the Darby Progress he recently published a statement showing that January, 1912, was the coldest within the span of the family records. Among other things he states that the average temperature at 6 a. m. has been 18 degrees. On the 13th the mercury was 8 degrees below zero. On the 14th 6 below; on the 16th, zero."

The years 1815, 1820, 1821, 1832, 1840, 1844, 1857, 1866 and 1881, he states, were especially cold during this month. The coldest days of which he has record, in succession, were February 10 to 15, 1899. The coldest record was New Year's, 1881, which was 22 degrees below.

NO USE FOR CITY MARSHAL

"Golden Rule" Policy of a Kansas Mayor Brings Clean Streets to Town.

Peabody, Kan.—Two months ago Peabody with its 1,800 inhabitants dispensed with its city marshal, because Mayor Sulphin had adopted a "golden rule" policy in dealing with the men given to indulging in drinking parties that caused about all the lawlessness the officer was called upon to quell. Today the absence of the marshal is not felt.

When William Sulphin became mayor he called the town's troublemakers before him.

"You can buy liquor in gallon packages if you want to," the mayor told them, "but you shall not get your friends drunk. Drink your stuff at home, if you will, but drink it all yourself. Now, do by me as you would be done by."

The plea was successful. Instead of paying out good money to a city marshal who has nothing to do, it is being spent to keep the streets clean.

CHINA IS OFFERED MILLIONS

American and British Financiers Have Vast Sum Ready to Pay for Oil and Minerals.

Shanghai.—Two hundred and fifty million dollars was offered for control of the national resources of China. This vast sum will be guaranteed by a committee of American and British financiers, numbered among whom are the interests affiliated with Standard Oil company, the moment the republic of China is recognized by a single world power. In return is asked a monopoly of the development of the oil and mineral wealth of China.

The republican leaders regard the plan fair, but Japanese and Russian financiers working together, are pressing their demands for consideration. They profess to be able to give just as much money as the American-British combination and are backing up their demands with suggestions of interference by both Japan and Russia, should preference be shown the Americans.

The fact that British financiers have united with the Americans, has angered influential Japanese, and the Japanese-English cordiality may be threatened. Realizing this, and also that both Russia and Japan are in strategic positions, where they could interfere at any time in China under the pretext of "restoring order," the republican leaders are sparring for time.

SEE BLACK FOX IN INDIANA

People of the "Knobs" Get Glimpses of a Valuable Fur Bearer—May Be Freak of Ordinary Species.

Louisville, Ky. — Residents of the "Indiana knobs," opposite this city, have caught glimpses of a rare black fox, whose fur is the most valuable of any of the North American foxes, and an old fashioned hunt is being organized by sportsmen in the hope of catching it. The black fox is a native of Alaska, and it is thought this one may be a freak of the ordinary species. A year ago a Canadian silver fox was captured among the knobs and its fur was sold in this city for $300.

WALK 30 MILES TO MARRY

Kentucky Mountaineer Runs Away in Blinding Snowstorm With 12-Year-Old Cousin.

Whitesburg, Ky. — Thirty miles through a blinding snowstorm, with mountains to cross and angry parents behind them, came James Coombs, Jr., and Miss Virgie Coombs, his cousin, to be married. They routed the clerk of courts from his bed early to give them a license and then persuaded the Rev. James E. Bradford to unite them.

Later in the day they left Whitesburg on the trip back to the Perry county line, where they have both spent all their lives.

The bridegroom is 20 and his wife has just passed her twelfth birthday. The bride wore dresses which came just below her knees.

Hoboes Starve in Prison.

Metuchen, N. J.—Three men who dropped off a freight train here and asked for a place to sleep were hauled out of the town lockup a few days later in a state of collapse from cold and starvation.

They had been completely forgotten after having been lodged in the jail, in an out-of-the-way part of the village. Groans heard by a passerby led to an investigation. After being thawed out and cared for, they took the first train out of town.

Earth Is 710,000,000 Years Old.

Paris.—Prof. John Bosler, after examining various kinds of rock, has decided that the earth is 710,000,000 years old.

Our Trade With England

United States Has Sold Twice as Much to Great Britain as Americans Bought.

Washington.—More than a billion dollars' worth of merchandise passed between the United States and British territory in the ten months ending with October, for which statistics have been compiled. The bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor reports that exports from the United States to British territory in the period named, aggregated $759,000,000 and imports therefrom $383,000,000, thus indicating that for every dollar's worth of merchandise imported from the territory in question two dollars' worth of American products are exported thereto.

To the United Kingdom, the largest British market for American products, our ten months' export increased to $419,000,000 in 1911; those to Canada, from $201,000,000 in 1910 to $249,000,000 in 1911. Australia and New Zealand rank third, with a ten-months' total of $40,000,000. To British Africa the ten months' exports increased from $12,000,000 in 1910 to $13,000,000 in 1911; those to the British West Indies from $9,000,000 in 1910 to $10,000,000 in 1911, and those to India, $4,750,000 in 1905 to $6,500,000 in 1910 and $9,000,000 in 1911.

The remaining British communities, which show in each case a total in excess of $1,000,000 in the ten months, include Hongkong, in which our exports in ten months were valued at $7,000,000; Newfoundland and Labrador, $4,000,000; the Straits Settlements, $1,750,000; British Guiana, $1,500,000; British Honduras, $1,750,000, and Aden and Bermuda, each about $1,000,000.

To Gibraltar the total was about $400,000; to Malta, Goza, etc., about $200,000, and to British China, the Falkland islands and miscellaneous other British possessions as a whole, about $300,000.

Raw cotton, meats and breadstuffs form the bulk of the exports from the United States to the United Kingdom though certain manufactures, such as agricultural implements, leather and machinery, are important articles in the yearly sales to that country.

SCARED COW KILLS WOMAN

Freight Train Frightens Animal as Pioneer Resident of Redwood, Cal., Is Passing.

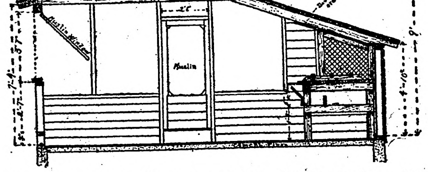
Redwood City, Cal.—The mad plunge of a cow, which was excited by a freight train, has resulted in the death of Mrs. August Grimenstein, a pioneer of this place.

Mrs. Grimenstein was walking through a pasture as the train passed, when the cow flashed past her and its stake, which it had pulled up, caught in her dress. Mrs. Grimenstein was thrown to the ground and concussion of the brain resulted.

Mrs. Grimenstein was 58 years old and had lived in Redwood for the last twenty years. She is survived by six children.

INEXPENSIVE POULTRY HOUSE FOR MEDIUM-SIZED FLOCKS

Practical Plan of Building Suitable for Farmer or Villager Where Comparatively Small Number of Birds are to be Kept—Concrete Plays Important Part in Construction.



Cross Section of Laying House 18 by 40 Feet. Showing Partition, Door, Frame, Windows, Cement Floor, Nests, Roosts, Dropping-Board, Etc.

The poultry house shown in the illustration is planned for the farmer or villager of moderate means, who wishes to keep one or two fair-sized flocks of fowls. Should a house with a larger capacity be desired the building could be made longer.

The foundation wall is of concrete, 18 inches high. It extends ten inches below the surface of the ground, where it is eight inches thick and eight inches above the ground, where it is six inches thick. In mixing the concrete, one part of cement was used to six parts of sand.

The floor is 18 by 40 feet, and contains 720 square feet of space, divided into two equal pens. If Leghorns are to be housed, the structure will shelter 180 birds, 90 in a pen, with an allowance of four square feet to each. Of Plymouth Rocks, 164 may be housed, allowing 4½ square feet to each.

The studding is seven feet high in front and 4½ feet in the rear. The roof is of the combination type, rising to a height of nine feet at the peak. Its rafters are of 2 by 6 lumber, 14 feet long on the rear and seven feet long on the front slope. Each is tied by a 1 by 4 board running from the top of the plate in front to the 14 foot rafter running from peak to rear and high enough not to incommode the attendant. With the rafters thus tied, supports are not needed in the center. Upon the rafters are laid the roof boards and roofing, in detail the same as in the house of hollow tile described above.

All sides of the building are of No. 1 six-inch drop siding. In each end there is a door, swinging outward, and placed as near the center as possible, thus making it handy to either window, nests or roosts.

The partition between the two pens is of matched lumber for the first three feet from the floor, and of muslin thence to the ceiling. For five feet from the north wall around the broody coop it is tightly boarded, to protect the fowls against any possible draught while roosting.

The partition door is hung in the middle, on double-acting hinges, and swings either way.

The dropping boards, roosts and broody coops are located on the north side. They are surrounded by double walls to guard against draughts.

The nests are built in sections of six. The bottoms are of one-inch diamond mesh poultry fencing, and are self-cleaning. The fowls enter from the rear and the eggs are taken out from the front.

FARM VILLAGE IS SUGGESTED

There Is Nothing Impractical in Plan and It May be Easily Accomplished—Betters Conditions.

(By S. C. MILLER.)

Isolation, lack of society and utter loneliness, the three great causes of dissatisfaction with farm life present a not very difficult problem—if it is really a problem at all. It is a rather serious and very unpleasant condition which can only be relieved in one way —in getting together. The only cure for loneliness is company. As long as farm houses are widely separated as they now are farm folk will continue to be lonely and suffer all the distress of isolation. The telephone has helped some. Relatives and neighbors can hear each other's voices at all times and in all weather even if they cannot see each other's faces. It facilitates the transaction of business between farms and the market places; but in this respect it may be questioned whether it does not in a way add to the isolation of farm life because it does away with the necessity of personal meetings and this pervents that friendly intercourse between neighbors and merchants so necessary to relieve monotony and which tends toward contentment.

So, that even giving the telephone and trolley and even the automobile all the credit that is due these factors of social life they do not begin to cure the condition.

It has been suggested that the farmers of the future will live in villages or camps and go to their outlying farms in the morning, returning only at night after the day's work is done. There is nothing impracticable in this plan but on the contrary it may be easily accomplished.

A section of land generally contains from four to ten families whose homes are placed as far apart as possible. By bringing all the houses of the families to one common center the nucleus of a village would be formed which might later include the families of adjoining sections and form a compact village of from fifteen to thirty families.

If the village was located in the center of farm sections no individual would have to travel more than a mile to reach the most distant farm, and this journey twice daily would cut small figure compared to the advantage of social life in the village.

Among the advantages of farm-villages life as compared to the present system of isolation it may be suggested the economy of labor on the partial or complete co-operation of farm work; the obliteration of the line fence, the barrier that has so long stood between harmonious relationship between neighbors and even provoked internal and deadly feuds; a central heating system, effective drainage and sanitation, the beautifying of home surroundings and all the manifold comforts of life possible in modern methods of building which are not entirely practicable in scattered farm homes.

TESTING FOR ACID IN SOIL

Practical Method Recently Demonstrated by Member of New Jersey Experiment Station.

Those who use lime have found litmus paper useful in determining whether the soil is acid or sour, and, therefore, in need of lime, says the Farmer. But there is often some uncertainty as to the result, because when used in the usual manner of placing the paper in a sample of soil and pressing the soil particles against it, the paper would often be so much stained by the soil that it would be difficult to tell whether it had turned red or not.

At a recent farmers' institute Mr. Blair, of the New Jersey experiment station, showed a better method. A piece of blue litmus paper was placed in the bottom of a glass, then covered with white filter paper. The soil to be tested was placed above this and a small quantity of pure water poured over it. The soil used in this case was known to be acid or sour, and the water carried a portion of the acid through the filter paper and turned the litmus paper red, as could easily be seen through the bottom of the glass vessel. The filter paper kept the soil from coming in direct contact with the litmus paper, and there was no staining. Soil not sour, and, therefore, not in need of lime, treated the same way does not turn the blue paper from its original color. Both filter paper and litmus paper can be secured for a few cents at drug stores.

DRILLING WELL ON SLANTING ROCK

Trouble May be Overcome When Drill Pushes to One Side by Mixture of Cement and Stone.

When a slanting rock is struck in boring a well, the drill will push to one side and not enter the rock on a straight line, says a writer in the Popular Mechanics. This trouble can be overcome by mixing some cement and fine stone and pouring it into the hole. Allow the cement to set 24 hours, and the drill will cut through the concrete and stone in a straight line.

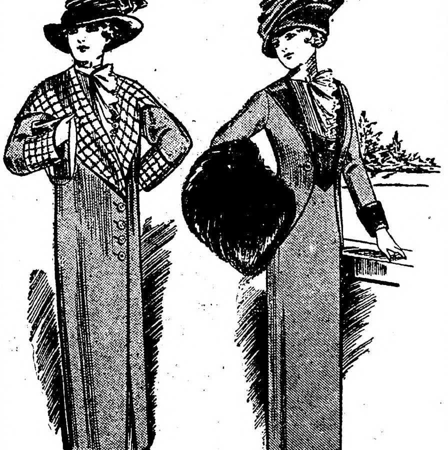
Coat and Costume



DARK green cloth with reverse side in blue and green plaid is used for this very useful coat. The large collar, which is pointed on sleeves and center back, has the plaid outside, so have the turn-up cuffs. Horn buttons form fastening below collar. Hat of dark green straw, trimmed with spotted ribbon. Materials required for the coat: 5 yards 50 inches wide, 4 buttons, 4½ yards satin 22 inches wide for lining to hips.

Cloth Costume.—Almond-colored cloth makes up well in this style. The skirt is quite plain and short. The coat is one of the newest designs, cut like a man's morning coat, the collar and turn-up cuffs being faced with black satin. The double-breasted waistcoat is also of the black satin; a black satin button with simulated buttonhole trim each side front of coat. The toque has a crown of folded almond-colored silk with brim of black satin. A bow of black ribbon trims the side. Materials required for the costume: 5 yards 46 inches wide, 1 yard black satin 22 inches wide, 4½ yards satin 22 inches wide for lining coat.

CHEAP TONIC FOR THE HAIR

Preparation That Will Increase the Growth and Impart Beautiful Sheen to Tresses.

Eagerly the eyes of a woman will scan the pages of papers and magazines for the thousand and one little helps, especially those that are for beautifying the complexion or hair, or to remedy some physical defect. It sounds very good, and so it is, but when one mentally calculates the price of the much desired, it is with a sigh that the article is cast aside.

There is nothing more beautiful than a woman's hair. It fulfills a mission when ugly features are beyond repair, for angularity and sharpness is softened with a delicate frame of beautiful hair around one's face.

It is not possible to change the color without injurious results, and nature provides the shade of hair which best suits your complexion. But when it is dead looking, dusty appearing, broken, not properly arranged it destroys the best appearance in the world.

Let the hair be ever so tawdry, broken or dull of appearance this preparation will increase its growth, impart a beautiful sheen and change its dull, dead appearance. Boil a double handful of sage with one-half teaspoonful of salt and sulphur in one quart of water. Use leaf sage. Strain it into a large bottle, add as much quinine as you can hold on the end of a knife blade and put into the mixture 5 cents' worth of bay rum and 5 cents' worth of witchhazel. Apply it to the scalp with a medicine dropper. If the scalp is dry use a very little vaseline on the hair. The liquid will "cut" the grease. This is good.

RIBBONS ON LACE CANVAS

Lovely Work Possible When Care is Taken to Secure Properly Suitable Colors.

Very lovely work can be done with ribbon, wide and narrow, self-colored or shaded, on some of the very pretty lace canvases so easily procurable in most fancy shops. The sort of articles best suited for this work are sachets, cushion covers, table centers, nightdress cases, etc.

The lace canvas on which many examples has been worked is ecru in color and somewhat stiff.

Care should be taken never to let your ribbon, be it wide or narrow, get twisted.

Especially if the whole of the canvas is not threaded with cross lines of ribbon, it is necessary to line your work with a suitable color to show under it.

China Silk for Petticoats.

Women in increasing numbers are turning to china silk as the solution to the present petticoat problem. It outwears the usual petticoat silks and satins by far, and if of an ordinarily good quality, will launder without the damaging effect. Not the smaller of its advantages is its light, supple nature, which does not permit the tiniest suggestion of clumsiness, and moreover, it can be had in any suit or dress shade.

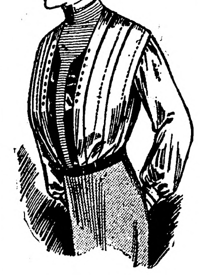
ENGAGED GIRL'S PRETTY IDEA

Will Announce Coming Marriage to Her Friends at a Typical Cupid's Luncheon.

A charming maiden who has yielded to Cupid's earnest pleading is to announce the fact to her friends in this pretty way: Eight of her nearest and dearest girl chums are to be bidden to a luncheon. The table is to be done in pure white, the centerpiece of bride roses, the candles white with white silken shades. At each plate a pink bridesmaid rose, except that of the hostess, where a pure bride rose will tell you the story. The place cards are to represent brides, the face being a photograph of the real bride. The favors are to be white suede card cases containing the cards of the happy girl and the lucky man. Can you imagine anything sweeter?

In the evening the girl's mother is to issue cards for a dance to which all the gay circle of young people will be asked, and the cotillion figures are to be symbolic of the good patron saint who presides untiringly over "affaires de coeur." There will be necklaces and fobs of tiny silver and gilt hearts. Hearts will be represented in fans, cups, aprons and cushions. One figure will be especially attractive: Red fencing hearts for the girls, bows and arrows for the men. The ices and cakes will all be hearts, with a plentiful supply of gilt Cupids with arrows.

ONE OF THE NEWEST BLOUSES



New Dollies Are Thin.

Dollies as thin as gossamer are now being used with crystal glasses and dainty china. The latest importations of these are fine as cobwebs. Each disk is embroidered with the finest linen floss, and while the pattern seems to cover the bit of tissue it by no means gives it a thick look. The finger bowl set which expresses the newest style in the perfectly appointed table is of sheer bolting cloth finished on the edge with a tiny embroidered scallop and garland of microscopic flowers worked in a trellis design.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD

NEW SWITCH IS AUTOMATIC

Device for Controlling Electric Currents Made Movable by Hand in One Direction.

In describing an automatic electric switch designed by John L. Polk of Menands, N. Y., the Scientific American says:

This automatic switch is for use in controlling electric currents, the switch in one of its movements being automatic, and also sluggish in its action. More particularly stated a switch is provided having a lever movable by hand in one direction and movable in the opposite direction by the action of a spring and against the cushioning pressure of a dash pot for the purpose of retarding the movement or rendering it sluggish, the idea being that when the switch lever is in one of its extreme positions it closes one electric circuit and a few moments afterward opens that circuit and automatically closes another. A plan view is shown herewith complete, the lever occupying its extreme position to the left and closing one of the circuits.

NEW ELECTRIC TRUCK-CRANE

Designed Especially for Unloading, Loading and Transporting Heavy Loads for Short Distance.

An electric motor-truck crane, designed for unloading, loading and transporting the loads for short distances in yards and shop buildings is shown in this illustration while transporting a one-ton load, says the Popular Mechanics. The hook of the swinging crane, which is mounted on the front end of the truck, is raised and lowered by a hoist of one-ton capacity mounted just back of the crane, the motors driving the hoist and the vehicle being operated from a battery on the rear end of the truck.

When material is to be unloaded and deposited within a 6 to 8-ft. radius, and this action does not require the material to be moved vertically more than 10 ft., the truck is run into position, the brakes are set, and the truck remains stationary, the boom of the crane moving back and forth between the picking-up and deposition place. When material has to be transported to a distance in the warehouse or yard, the track picks up the load from the railroad car or wagon, conveys it to its destination, and sets or piles it where desired. The short wheelbase permits the driving of the machine about warehouse and shop aisles.

Treatment of Sciatica.

Electricity was formerly the mystic remedy of the quack, but since electrical apparatus has become so essential for X-ray work more serious attention has been given by regular physicians to the physiological effects of this powerful agent. Among the notable results has been an electrical method of arresting the degeneration of the arteries so common in premature old age. A new announcement is that of Doctor Labordie, a French medical man, who gives details of a method of treating sciatica by ionization with sodium hyposulphite and shows what appears to be an effective cure for a painful disease. The effects are attributed in this treatment to sulphur oxide from electrolytic decomposition instead of the direct action of the electric current itself.

Electric Light Signals.

Several tunnels on the Southern Pacific are equipped with automatic electric lighting devices When the train is within a hundred feet of the tunnel the lights go on, warning pedestrians and affording light for the engineer.

Electricity in Dyeing.

Among the tasks imposed in recent years upon that busy servant of man, electricity, is the acting as an assistant in the operation of dyeing.

TELEGRAPH QUICK AND CHEAP

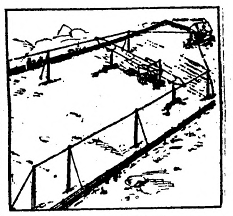
Johnson-Varley System of Communication Promises to Supersede Slow Morse Signalling.

A revolution is promised in the new Johnson-Varley system of tuned cable, wire, and wireless telegraphy. At a private press exposition its principles were clearly elucidated by Mr. Varley and Mr. Johnson. The system is based upon the well-known law of syntonic synchronism. This supersedes the slow Morse signalling by a system of tuned reeds representing letters and numerals sent from a type keyboard and received at the other end by a similarly tuned type recorder. In all there are 49 differently tuned signals to each machine, and the whole of these range within one semitone. To show that the rate of vibration of these reeds is uninfluenced by variation of temperature a reed was placed in boiling water while the one that was tuned to it was kept out of the liquid, yet on vibrating the latter the former was seen to oscillate in a like manner. The advantages claimed for the new system are: 1. That messages can be sent four times as fast as by the Morse code with one transmitter. 2. Several transmitters can work at the same time over one cable in both directions. 3. Practical elimination of skilled operators. 4. As a result cheaper rates and increased speed. The Johnson-Varley system also makes possible secret wireless telegrams, and all interference of one message with another is prevented by its use. The tuning of the reeds—by a mechanical process, not the human ear—is absolute and definite, and we might say illimitable, as the fraction of a vibration per second makes all the difference in the world.

ELECTRICITY HANDY ON FARM

Montana Man Secures Patent on Apparatus for Operating Plows, Harrows and Other Implements.

Interest in the application of electricity to the farm recently manifested itself in a patent upon a system for distributing electricity to operate apparatus such as plows, harrows and other farm implements used in the fields. The patent is issued to Charles S. Doney, Columbia Falls, Montant, says the Popular Electricity. The illustration conveys something of the inventor's idea, which is to run wires out from the dynamo and on each side of the field. Across the field and between these two wires runs a pair of wires constituting a movable trolley from which a motor driven traction engine will take current by means of a second trolley, the whole outfit being moved up the field as the ground is prepared by the plows, harrows or drills.



Novel Electrical Distribution.

New Fire Alarm Indicator.

A new alarm indicator for fire engine stations has three panes, behind which incandescent lamps can be so arranged as to show the signaling box by numeral or special signs. The apparatus can be worked by hand or automatically by the usual Morse alarm signals. To save the time necessary for finding on a chart the spot from which the alarm was sent, it is proposed to use a translucent map that would be illuminated by the alarm, and would have all boxes of the fire department area marked by numbered disks. The call would also show a red light behind the disk for the signaling box and another for the station, so that the best route to the fire would be seen at a glance.

ELECTRICAL NOTES

The signal corps has nine wireless stations in Alaska.

It is claimed there is less shrinkage of meats when cooked by electricity.

The General Electric company will supply forty electric mules for the Panama Canal.

A signal will pass over the 2,700 miles of the Atlantic cable in three-tenths of a second.

New York is installing additional high-pressure motor-driven fire pumps in two of its pumping stations.

There are 71 armored telephone cables leaving Manhattan island with a total of 13,561 paid conductors.

Berlin employs more than 100 storage battery driven electrical machines literally to scrub its well kept streets.

The Omaha Light & Power company uses a portable motor-driven pump for pumping water from the underground conduits.

The city of Hamburg will build a three mile monorail railroad to test the availability of the plan to the municipal traction system.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

And Numbness in the Hands and Arms.

This Iowa Woman Was in a Serious Condition and Her Cure Will Interest Many.

A cure of unusual interest and importance is related by Mrs. J. H. Morgan, of Correctionville, Iowa. After being a hopeless sufferer from sick headaches, she is now entirely free from attacks. She tells of her cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as follows:

"Some years ago I was in a terribly nervous and run-down condition and suffered greatly from nervous headaches. I was treated for three months by a specialist in Chicago, who advised me to wear glasses, but he did not help me. My head seemed as though it would burst, and I had frequent dizzy spells. I was in despair of getting well until I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and began taking them. A few boxes cured me and since then I have used them as a family medicine.

"Before the birth of my last child I suffered untold agony with pain and numbness in my hands and arms up to the shoulders. My hands were so swollen and the muscles so sore that I could hardly dress myself. For a time I could not close my left hand. During the day if I kept moving the pain did not seem to be so bad, but my hands were always numb. I again used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and found them good for this trouble also, as they entirely relieved me."

Unless properly treated sick headache is a disease of many years duration, as it occurs before the twentieth year in two-thirds of the cases and recurs with more or less regularity until the fiftieth year or later. It is usually hereditary and is probably directly caused by a defect in the process which changes the food we eat into blood. Most sufferers are troubled with obstinate constipation which makes it necessary to use a laxative.

An ideal combination treatment is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and the new laxative pills, Pinklets. This treatment is fully described in a little booklet, "The Treatment of Sick Headache," which is free on request, together with a sample of Pinklets, the little laxative pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

THEN ALL WILL PRAISE.

A Beautiful Decline.

Ollie James, the gigantic and genial congressman and senator-elect from Kentucky, was in conversation the other day with a Washingtonian when the latter made certain inquiries with reference to a mutual friend from he had not seen for a number of years.

"And how does Colonel Prescott spend his declining years?" he asked.

"Beautifully, sir; beautifully!" answered James. "He has a fine farm, sir. A string of trotters, sir. And a barrel of whisky 16 years old—and a wife of the same age, sir!"

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to See That Coffee Poison Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning, and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and have suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110.

"I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day, a woman doctor advised me to drink Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum, and gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and am still gaining, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough, I expect, to get the coffee poison out of my system.

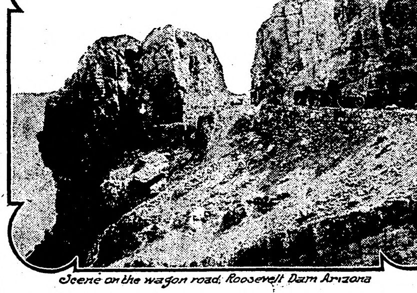
"Now that a few months have passed since I began to use Postum, I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that relieved me.

"Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ARIZONA THE 48TH STATE ☆



Scene on the wagon road, Roosevelt Dam Arizona

ARIZONA, whose entry as the the forty-eighth member of the Union, and completed the nation of states from ocean to ocean, has had a history probably as turbulent and trying as any state in the Union. The struggles of the Pilgrims of Massachusetts, the Hollanders who colonized New York, the Quakers who settled Pennsylvania and the English who brought civilization to the Virginia shores were no hardier than those of the pioneers of Arizona. They were killed by Indians, robbed by lawless people of their own nationality, starved upon the deserts, frozen in the snow-capped mountains and bitten by poisonous reptiles.

They had no government for many years and fought as hard to get territorial rights as they have been fighting for the past ten years to get statehood rights. They were on the point of rebelling at one time and even went so far as to establish a territorial form of government of their own despite the expressed desire of congress, exemplified in its refusal to grant a territorial government, that they should remain a part of New Mexico.

Their nearest peace and judicial officials were then four hundred miles away, at Mesilla, N. M., and their law was the law of the strongest against the weakest. At one time all of the present state of Arizona was the county of Arizona, attached to New Mexico for purposes of administration only.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles, General Lawton, General Crook and many other noted men of the United States army gained their first fame in campaigning in Arizona. It was from Arizona that the only raid of United States troops was ever made into a foreign country not then at war with us; the soldiers were after Indians who had been killing and robbing in Arizona. The history of Arizona is thrilling from its inception to the present day.

The origin of the name Arizona is not definitely known. Bancroft, the historian, and some others have insisted that the name is from a supposed Pima Indian word, "Arizonac," although Bancroft admits that the aboriginal meaning of the term is not known." The historian treats as "extremely absurd" the suggestion that the name is of Spanish derivation, and he apparently bases that conclusion upon the fact that there is no similar word in Spanish.

But it is possible that "Arizona" may have had its derivation from the Spanish words arida zona (arid zone). The well-known tendency of uneducated speakers of Spanish to leave off the last syllables of words ending in vowels and their tendency to run words together would easily transform arida zona into "Arizona."

First True Exploration.

It was about 1527 that Cabeza de Vaca turned his wandering footsteps to the Hopi and Zuni villages in the northeast, gaining Mexico at last by way of the friendly Pima settlements along the Gila.

It was in 1540 that Vasco de Coronado, governor of Mexico, lured by the golden tales of a monkish traveler, started northward on the first true exploration of that mysterious land. He sought the fabled Seven Cities of Cibola, where gold and precious gems paved the streets. Though he did not find the object of his search his expedition led to Spanish settlements and agriculture, and mining had some development.

Back again into barbarism was Arizona plunged by the Mexican war for independence, and not until the Gadsden purchase, in 1848, did the firm hand of governmental authority again take hold. Even then, however, all that was known of Arizona was a narrow strip within which the Southern Pacific railroad now runs and along which flowed the tide of travel from the eastern states to the gold fields of California.

Treachernous Indians of Long Ago.

When the white man first came to Arizona there were approximately 40,000 Indians within the borders of the territority. The principal tribes were the Navajos, Hopis, Wallapais, Chemehuevis, Havasupias, Mohaves, Pimas, Maricopas, Yumas, Papagoes and Apaches, of which there were several groups or divisions. The Navajos perpetrated several massacres in the early days, but it was not long before all the Indians except the Apaches had been subdued

Tricky and cruel, the Apaches held out for many years against the inroads of the whites upon their ancient hunting grounds. Such leaders as Cochise, Geronimo and Natchez led the Apaches against famous American generals like Nelson A. Miles and George Crook. A reward of $5,000 was once offered for Apache Kid, but was never claimed.

Up to 1874 the Indians terrorized large sections of the territory and kept out immigration and capital. In that year all the Apaches that could be rounded up were placed on the San Carlos reservation. It was supposed that an end had been put to the Indian troubles, but raids in 1882 and 1883 shook the feeling of security.

In the year 1883 there were 25,000 Indians in the territory occupying lands reserved for them by the general government. The government was supporting about five thousand of them.

In 1882 the Chiricahua, White Mountain and San Carlos Apaches broke out in open rebellion. On the morning of April 19 Loco's band broke out at San Carlos and after killing the chief of police started up the valley of the Gila, killing at least sixty white settlers.

Then for six years Arizona was the scene of a merciless Indian war. In 1883 Geronimo became chief of the Apaches. He massacred settlers and burned ranches almost at will. After each raid he would escape to the mountain fastnesses of Mexico where the United States soldiers could not pursue him. Finally permission was secured from Mexico for soldiers to cross the frontier in pursuit of the Indians. In 1888 Captain Lawton, serving under Gen. Nelson A. Miles, surrounded Geronimo's warriors and made them prisoners. The whole tribe was taken to Florida and later transferred to Fort Sill, Okla., as prisoners of war.

There Geronimo remained until his death, three or four years ago, and the remainder of his band is still there. All desire to return to Arizona and it is possible that sometime the government may see fit to grant them their wish. Today they are as peaceful and placid as any Indians, having seen the folly of resisting the whites.

Of course there were bad men and gun men in Arizona in her early days. Stage and train robberies were by no means uncommon and excited only passing comment. Finally train robberies became so frequent that in 1889 the penalty for that crime was fixed at death. In the same year the legislature passed a law providing a fine of $25 for any one carrying concealed weapons.

It was not until after the penalty for train robbing had been fixed at death that Arizona became really peaceful. Now there is no train robbing any more, and as the day of the stage coach is practically passed the stage robber is extinct.

Until 1907 everything was wide open in Arizona. Gambling was unrestrained and, except where municipal laws prevented, women and minors were allowed in saloons. In that year the legislature responded to an urgent message from Governor Kibbey and to pronounced public sentiment and passed a rigid anti-gambling law that closed such games.

Starling Going South.

Reports received at the department of agriculture state that the English starling, whose progress in this country has been watched with some uneasiness, has got as far south as Newport News.

This is one of the imported birds that it is feared will rank with the English sparrow as a pest. It does no particular harm in England, but it was introduced into Australia a number of years ago and there it has been a serious menace to the wheat crop.

Its only redeeming feature is that it is a much larger bird than the English sparrow, and therefore likely to be easier to handle. The birds were started in this country in New England and worked south slowly. For several seasons they seemingly were stationary in the latitude of Philadelphia.

Brazil Fosters Agriculture.

During the first six months of last year the Brazilian government distributed sixty-one tons of seed among farmers and institutions besides a number of books containing advice.

The Criticism of Missions

By Rev. Edward A. Marshall,
Director of Missionary Course,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

It is natural to expect that missionary work will be criticised when one considers the great variety of people interested and the many different views promulgated. There are three or four hundred societies belonging to scores of denominations now working in the field. They have over 20,000 missionaries in active service and are spending more than $30,000,000 annually on the work.

It would be unfair to say that criticism must be prohibited and that no critical questions would be answered. The critic could justly reply that since he was unable to learn how his money was being spent, he would cease to contribute. On the other hand the critic must be fair to the society and worker who naturally expect him to know what he is talking about before he speaks.

Of course there are different kinds of criticism just as there are different kinds of people. One speaks with a view to helpfulness, another criticises because he desires to find reasons to excuse himself from responsibility while a third may talk against the work because he is not content to sanction the use of any ecclesiastical harness or work in harmony with his fellows on any task.

However the person who wishes to be accorded a hearing on missionary work (or any other work) should comply with certain rules, which, if observed will make him an aid to the building up of that work in some substantial, beneficial way.

I. The critic must be a Christian. A man out of Christ looks at the subject from the wrong viewpoint. He naturally thinks it unnecessary to send the gospel to the heathen if he has refused it himself. Neither can he be expected to support a teaching he does not himself believe.

II. The critic must be a soul winner. That is, he must have some adequate realization of the value of a lost soul and must have tried to bring souls to Christ.

III. The critic must be an honest student of missionary work. The great task of missions cannot be learned by intuition. It involves matters touching the personal life and liberties of thousands and the purses of millions. It deals with the deepest principles of organization and requires a broad knowledge of the working value of policies and methods. Therefore the person who would dictate standards for the adoption of missionaries must know whereof he speaks.

IV. The critic should have visited the mission fields or talked freely with missionaries. Theory is one thing and practice is quite another, especially when the theory is created in America, but has to be applied in Africa. Parents find that the course of training applied to one child is sometimes worthless when applied to another, even though the children be in the same family.

Then again, if a person is capable of offering criticism he must see that it is cautiously and wisely given, because:

I. It is unwise to criticise what God has especially commanded. The person who criticises the work of missions must remember that he is dealing with the triune God. Every person of the Godhead is vitally interested, and is also a personal participant in the work of saving the heathen. Therefore the critic stands on perilous ground before his Creator.

II. There are 20,000 missionaries who have believed enough in missions to be out on the field today. The critic who remains at home in a well feathered nest must realize that it is no small thing to put his inexperienced judgment up against the actual labors of consecrated thousands whose universal testimony is that "missions pay."

III. The transformation of the heathen, which has taken place during the past 100 years, overwhelmingly answers all those who would say that the work is not worth while. Anyone who has watched the evolution of tribes and nations by the process of divine regeneration; who has seen annihilating customs become only items for the historian, and the number of printed languages leap from fifty to more than five hundred, through missionary toil, has surely felt his thoughtless criticisms grow cold on his lips.

These things make a wise man careful in his judgment for he realizes that his influence may mean the weal or woe of some of his fellowmen, both at home and abroad. The man who is not both wise and careful in his speech cannot of course expect men who are in the thick of the fight to leave their posts and come back to where he reclines comfortably in the barracks in order to answer his idle words.

THE WINNER.

She—Speech is silver and silence is golden.

He—But the man with the most brass gets the tin.

HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itch dreadfully. When my hands first started to get sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything the matter with my skin. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment.

"My doctor said he didn't think it would amount to anything. But it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for thanks to them I was cured, and did not have to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the skin trouble." (Signed) Mrs, Mary E. Breig, 2522 Brown Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura." Dept. L, Boston.

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."—Mrs. JENNIE GREEN, Covington, Mo.

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

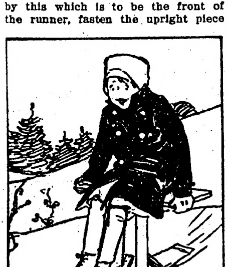
For the LITTLE ONES

SKIPJACK IS EASILY MADE

Any Bright Boy With Few Simple Tools Can Knock One Together Within Short Time.

With a few simple tools any bright boy can knock a skipjack together within a half-hour's time.

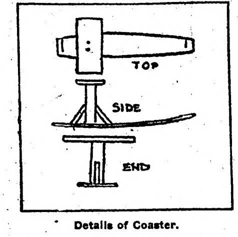
The sketch gives a general idea of its construction and use. Procure for the runner a stout barrel stave free from knots or cracks. In order that this may pass quickly and smoothly over the snow it must move with the grain of the wood, and not against it. When you have determined by this which is to be the front of the runner, fasten the upright piece to support the seat about one-third of the distance from the rear. This upright should be of two-inch by four-inch stuff about 15 or 16 inches high. A short piece to brace, it should then be fastened both front and back. A board about 18 inches long and 6 inches wide will complete the seat and your skipjack is ready for use.



A Skipjack.

Let the first trial be over a short slope. Seat yourself firmly, lift both feet from the ground and away you go. Only a slight movement of the body is necessary to keep the runner on the track, and you will quickly acquire this knack after a few trials, and a longer and swifter coast can then be essayed.

It is fun for a number of boys to start to make these sleds at one time, so that each can help the other over the hard places, and contests in which all can take part can be planned. When boys use different sleds or coasters their skill in managing them is not always to be determined, because some of the boys have much better coasters or sleds than the others, or because they have been able to spend more money for their equipment; but when boys have all homemade sleds like this one no one has any advantage over the others unless it be that he has worked harder to make his coaster better or is really more skillful in managing his strange vehicle.



Details of Coaster.

Puzzling Questions.

If a goose weighs ten pounds and half its own weight, what is the weight of the goose?

This is simple, but many a wise one has been caught napping and answers at once fifteen pounds, though a little thought will bring twenty pounds, the correct answer.

A train starts daily from San Francisco to New York and one daily from New York to San Francisco; the journey lasts seven days. How many trains will a traveler meet in journeying from San Francisco to New York?

It looks as if the traveler must meet seven trains and that is the answer that nine out of ten will give if the question is new to them.

The fact is overlooked that every day of the journey a fresh train is started from the other end, while there are seven on the way to begin with; the traveler will, therefore, meet fourteen trains instead of seven.

No "Sing" in Guide.

Little three-year-old Clara was very fond of practicing on the piano. Her mother, not wishing to have her music subjected to Clara's vigorous treatment, removed it one day and placed a railway guide upon the piano rack. The infant prodigy soon discovered the difference, however, and throwing it to the floor, she exclaimed: "Mamma, me tan't sing out of zat; zey ain't no sing in it."

COASTING.

Coasting, coasting down the hill,
When the evening's nice and still.
When the moon shines in the sky,
And the coasters shout and cry.
At their play, and snow is deep,
With an incline smooth and steep;
When the sleds and old "bobs" go
Like greased lightning o'er the snow.
Then it is that fun is had,
By the little lass and lad,
Ah, we know their joy, for, lo!
We were children—long ago!

SIMPLE MACHINE FOR BOYS

Will Transform Right and Left Motion Into Rotary Motion of Other Without Being Seen.

Probably you know that every machine, no matter how complicated, simply transforms one kind of motion into another. The locomotive transforms the straight push of the piston rod into the rotary motion of the driving wheel. A sewing machine transforms the push of the foot into the rotation of a wheel, and that again is transformed into the prick of the needle.

Here is a little machine that any boy can make which will transform the right and left motion of one hand into a rotary motion of the other without his knowing it, says the New York Sun. Take a short piece of lath and cut some notches in the edge with a penknife. Then cut out a little disk of stiff card, color it if you like and stick it on the end of the lath with a stout pin.

Now hold the end that is further from the disk with your left hand and rub a penholder or a round pencil up and down the notches. You will find that the disk will begin to spin, no matter how steady you try to hold your left hand, which shows that you must be moving it in a small circle or the disk would not spin.

SPOTTED DOG AT A BARGAIN

Chauncey Depew Bought Animal from Circus Man, but Neglected to Get Umbrella With It.

Chauncey M. Depew has a keen sense of humor and loves to tell good short stories. The following one is a fair specimen, which, although not a new one, is very funny:

"When I was quite a young lady, about fourteen years old, my father lived on an old farm up at Poughkeepsie. One day I went to town to see the circus, and while there I saw for the first time one of those spotted coach dogs. I bargained for it with the owner, and trotted him happily with my new possession. When my father saw it his good old Puritan face fell, and he said sadly:

"'Why, Chauncey, we don't want any spotted dogs on the farm! It would drive the cattle crazy.'

"I succeeded in obtaining permission to keep him, however. The next day it was raining, and I took the dog out in the woods to try him for a coon. The rain was too much for the spots, and when we returned home they had disappeared. I hastened to town and hunted up the man who had sold him to me.

"'Look at the dog, said I; 'his spots have all washed off.'

"'Great guns, boy!' exclaimed the dealer, 'there was an umbrella went with that dog. Didn't you get it?'"

GREAT STRENGTH OF SNAILS

Hitched to Toy Wagon by Harness Made of Twine They Will Pull Weight of One Pound.

Take a pair of snails, and improvise a form of harness out of fine twine or thread. To this attach a toy wagon or model lorry. IS THE PAIN THERE?

Then Your Kidneys May Be Weak and in Need of Quick Attention

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Backache is enough cause to suspect the kidneys. The kidneys are in the small of the back. Congested kidneys swell and throb. The back naturally aches. It hurts to bend or stoop or to sit down.

Kidney trouble may come on all unnoticed. A cold, a chill, a fever, a strain or irregular habits may start it While sick kidneys can be cured in the beginning, it is a serious matter when dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease sets in.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made a reputation in the cure of backache, and kidney and bladder ills. The best proof is the testimony of the users. Here are two typical testimonials. Thirty thousand others are being published in the newspapers. A postage stamp will bring you reports of cases nearer home.

Cured of Serious Case at a Critical Period.

"I suffered so severely from pain and soreness over my kidneys," says Mrs. Remington, "that it was a task for me to turn in bed. My kidneys acted very freely but secretions were retarded and scalded in passage. I was weak and much run down.

"After taking other remedies without benefit, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was completely cured. I was going through the critical period of a woman's life at the time, and after using Doan's Kidney Pills there was a miraculous change for the better in my health."

SHELDON SMITH.
Prop. Arlington House, Woodland, Cal.
Cured of Serious Case and Feels Like a Boy, Despite His 76 Years.

"Three years ago I was almost helpless," said Mr. Smith, "Kidney secretions scalded terribly and obliged me to arise ten to twelve times a night. My left limb became so stiff and sore I could hardly walk—just hobbled around with a cane.

"I had almost every complaint that diseased kidneys produce and Doan's Kidney Pills cured them all. At the age of 76 I feel like a boy, and enjoy health and comfort. Can anyone wonder at my gratitude?"

SUCH A POOR INHERITANCE

Tears of a Rival Attorney Were Explained, Not in Too Friendly a Fashion.

At the trial of Horne Tooke, Lord Eldon, speaking of his own reputation, said:

"It is the little inheritance I have to leave my children, and, by God's help, I will leave it unimpaired."

Here he shed tears, and to the astonishment of those present, Mitford, the attorney general, began to weep.

"Just look at Mitford," said a bystander to Horne Tooke, "what on earth is he crying for?"

Tooke replied:

"He is crying to think what a small inheritance Eldon's children are like to get."

Catarrh of the Lungs Threatened Her Life

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna.

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me.

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it.

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me.

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment.

"The report spoiled the speech. It was like old Hiram Earwig's account of Daniel Webster's last words. Webster, you know, as he lay dying, uttered the profound and significant sentence, 'I still live.' Well, Hiram Earwig of Skeeter Beach said to a visitor from the city:

"'Yawp, life's onsartin. Wot wuz it that that New Englander said—Webster, I think? Yawp, it wuz General Dan Webster. He got off a good thing just afore he died. He riz up in bed an' says, says he:

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Now's the Time—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Do You Feel This Way?

Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Cement Talk No. 4

It is a common saying nowadays that the use of cement is in its infancy. Most everybody believes that cement is a wonderful material, with almost unlimited possibilities in building construction. Nevertheless it is probably true that only a few people have actually bought any cement and made something out of it. Every day they see handsome and durable concrete structures, such as sidewalks, posts, steps, foundations, floors, bridges, silos and buildings. They appreciate the many advantages of concrete, but still, when it comes to building small objects in their place, they will use wood, because they know how to build out of wood and they think it takes an expert to build of concrete. Wood is costly and not nearly so durable and satisfactory as concrete. Concrete construction is easy, not very expensive and lasts forever. Come in and have a talk with us. For concrete work we sell Universal Portland Cement, the highest grade of Portland cement made.

ALEXANDER POPE WAS RIGHT

The proper study of mankind is man.—Alexander Pope.

MR. POPE, who was writing poetry about 200 years ago, was exactly right in his declaration quoted above. If you would study man you must study his deeds.

WHERE WILL YOU LEARN ABOUT THEM EXCEPT IN THE NEWSPAPERS?

These accurate histories of the world's affairs tell what man is doing everywhere, whether it is flying through the air, stealing a million dollars, laboring for world peace, plotting to overthrow a government or to establish one, committing a murder or trying to escape punishment for one already done, making a political speech or watching the antics of a comet.

NOTHING THAT IS INTERESTING OR IMPORTANT ESCAPES THE DRAGNET OF THE NEWSPAPERS.

News that literally costs thousands of dollars to collect is printed and given to the reader for a cent or two. Can you, can anyone, afford to miss such a mental treat and financial bargain?

TAKE THIS PAPER.

Solving a Difficulty.

A painstaking mother of two children was attempting to give them a serious idea of her anxiety to make them good and to make plain to their minds the gravity of the task before her. Overcome with the impossibility of ever attaining her mother's ideal, three-year-old Frances answered in all earnestness, "Don't try to make us good, mother; just shoot us."—Everybody's.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Under the heading, "Who's afraid of the People?" the Duluth Herald says:

In Chicago presidential preference primaries have been ordered held April 9, when the regular city primary election takes place.

The local Roosevelt committee has guaranteed the expense of the primary, thus doing away with the only obstacle, and the local Wilson followers are heartily for it.

Meanwhile the local Taft committee is talking of getting out an injunction to prevent the primary on the ground that it is illegal, and the anti-Wilson Democrats of Chicago are loud in their protests against it.

Wherever a Republican state committee shows a majority in favor of Taft, it shows about the same majority against the presidential primary.

Who's afraid of the people? And why?

The big daily papers have started after Roosevelt with a whole bunch of axes, which will help his cause materially with the common people.

William J. Bryan has started on his regular quadrennial, political speech-making tour, and seems to be still The Democrat who can draw crowded houses.

Progressive and stand-pat republicans, democrats and socialists, all are trying to ride into power on good populistic platforms. Changing the ownership of the planks has not affected their platform value.

In these days of rapid progress the Man on Horseback is likely to be run down by the Man-in-the-Car.—Minneapolis Journal.

The roads will be awfully muddy this year, and it's a funeral car, anyway.

THE SUCCESSFUL MAN.

I notice that most successful men are those whose minds are always cool, who, no matter how swift the movements of their bodies, are able to deliberate coolly and to produce calm, sober judgment even under disturbing circumstances. It is not the man who reaches the corners first who wins, but the man who knows exactly what he is going to do when he reaches the corner.—Governor Charles E. Hughes.

HELP TO PROMPTNESS.

Anxious Voice Over the Phone—Doctor, please hurry over to our house. One of the family has suddenly been stricken with a fainting fit. Is there anything you want ready when you get here, so that there will be no time lost?

Notice of Contest.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
United States Land Office
Crookston, Minnesota, February 16, 1912.

To Andrew Olson, of Cass Lake, Minnesota, Contestee:

You are hereby notified that Charles H. Rossman, who gives Thief River Falls, Minnesota, as his postoffice address, did on January 22, 1912, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead, Entry No. 8443, Serial No. 03318, made September 19, 1905, for the S½ ¼ Section 3, Township 153 N., Range 41 W., 5th prin. Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that said Andrew Olson has never resided upon, cultivated or improved said land; and more specifically, that he has not resided upon, cultivated or improved said land during the six months last past; that his absence from said land is not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States.

You are, therefore, further notified, that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed to by you, and your said entry will be cancelled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person, proof of such service must be either the contestant's written acknowledgement of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the postoffice to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.

You should state in your answer the name of the post office to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

FIND PLEASURE IN WORK.

Most of the work of the world is drudgery. I have seen President Roosevelt performing all day nothing but drudgery, but he didn't realize it was drudgery. The men who succeed do not know that they are performing drudgery. Don't work for wages. Work for the accomplishment of something. God put into the human mind a desire to do something. It is godlike. God made the world; we must make or do something.—Leslie M. Shaw.

OUT OF HER LINE.

The horny-handed son of toil who had just inherited a fortune went to see a manicure.

"Can you do anything with these, ma'am?" he asked, exhibiting his hands.

"Yes, sir," she said, "after you've gone to a surgeon and had those cracks sewed up. I don't meddle with jobs that belong to the regular practitioners."

HER FAULT.

"If I have a fault," said Mr. Henpeck, "it is that—"

"If you have 'a' fault?" Mrs. Henpeck broke in. "Ha, ha! Excuse me for laughing. If I have a fault it is that I sometimes permit my sense of humor to get the better of me."

PAYING THE PIPER.

Knicker—War is getting too expensive to be indulged in.

Bocker—Yes; the presents I have to make my wife after we quarrel bankrupt me.

Election Results

Tuesday was election day in all townships and villages in the state. License or no license was voted on in most of the villages with varying results.

Argyle, Oslo and Middle River all went wet, while Badger, Greenbush, Fosston, Hallock, Karlstad, McIntosh Roseau, Roosevelt and Stephen, all went dry.

Results of the local town elections are slow in coming in, but we will publish all that are available in our next issue.

In Church Circles.

The Ladies Aid will meet with Mrs. Carl Larson on the 20th inst. All welcome.

Let all turn out and hear the noted lecturer, Rev. O. N. Fosmark, of Grand Forks, N. D. He will give his lecture on "Den Lutherske Kirkes Fortrin" on March 25th at 2 P. M. in the Lutheran church at Holt! All welcome.

Mrs. Carl Dahl, Miss Hilda Dahl and Rudolf Dahl came in from Mud Lake on Wednesday and went down to Thief River Falls on a shopping expedition.

Arvid and Tony Carlson were at Greenbush to look over an automobile with a possible view to buying. Pete Anderson went along to give good advice and assistance if necessary.

S. Ole Anderson was at Middle River Wednesday to make final proof on his homestead in section 1, of Agder township. Generius Olson and Nels Gudvangen went along as witnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Payne and the children were at Nielsville this week to attend the funeral of Mrs. Payne's grandmother, Mrs Christianson, who died last Sunday at the ripe old age of 86 years.

A special school election was held in northern Mud Lake township on Tuesday and the following officers were elected: E. E. Piche, chairman; Rudolt Dahl, treasurer; C. Bergum, clerk.

Algot and Charles Skoglund, of Minneapolis, brothers of Mrs. John Engstrom, have purchased a quarter section farm in sections 1 and 12, of Holt township. The deal was made through the Holt State Bank.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

Every User a Booster

Skim Cleanest
Turn Easiest Are Simplest
Most Sanitary Last Longest

That is a strong statement but we'd make it stronger if we knew how, because we are sure that the De Laval will more than make good every claim.

We don't ask you to take our "say so." We prefer to let the machine itself talk for us.

Why not let us set one up at your house? You can test it yourself alongside of any other machine you like for capacity, cleanness of skimming, and ease of operation.

We don't ask you to buy a De Laval upon "claims." We do ask you to be sure and give it a fair trial before you purchase any cream separator. Don't put it off. Do it now.

Auction Sale.

There will be a big Auction Sale at the Olaf Iverson place, section 30, two miles west of Holt, on Friday, the 22nd inst, beginning at 11 A.M.

The list of property to be sold includes horses, cows, young cattle, chickens, wagons, buggy, drill, disc, binder, mower, hayrake, and a lot of other farm implements.

The terms of sale will be as usual, with O. C. Brenna, auctioneer, and B. L. Backe, clerk.

Pressure of other work compels us to leave out all news sent in by our correspondents this week, but we will publish same next issue.

K. O. Flakne was here Monday on his way home from Beltrami, where he has just disposed of two nice quarter sections of land at a good price. He says he will in the very near future put in a good general store on his homestead in section 8, of Mud Lake township.

HOMELESS DOGS IN PARIS.

Paris, like Constantinople before the revolution of the Young Turks, numbers its stray dogs by the thousands. The statistician of the Excelsior estimates that 20,000 are annually found in the French capital and half of them taken to the city's pound. Of this 10,000 about 7,000 are executed, 1,500 returned to their owners and 1,500 turned over to the hospitals for vivisection experiments. But there remain 10,000 who escape government regulation and find new masters or succeed in leading a vagabond life. Too speedy surrender of dogs to the vivisectionists has just called forth from M. Lepine, the police dictator of Paris, an order that all dogs which fall into the hands of the authorities shall have four days of grace.

CHINESE IN CUBA.

There are close to 12,000 Chinese in Cuba and the census of 1907 recorded the fact that 40 Chinese women were inhabitants of Cuba. Before Cuba became a republic it cost every Chinaman who entered $2 to get his entrance ticket. Now Cuba bids him welcome with little expense.

He has to furnish a photograph of himself and stand inspection much as a man entering a penal institution. The system employed by Chief Menocal is similar to the one used at all United States ports.

The Chinese legation is always represented at the immigration office when Chinese come and go, so that a double check is placed on the travelers from the far east.

TENNYSON'S CLAY PIPE.

Tennyson was an unwavering devotee of the clay pipe. "I take my pipe," he wrote to a friend in 1842, "and the muse descends in the fume; not like your modern ladies, who shriek at a pipe as if they saw a 'splackmuck'"—"splackmuck" being the word which the dwellers in Brobdingnag applied to a man.

When invited on a visit to Mr. Gladstone in 1876 Tennyson wrote: "As you are good enough to say that you will manage anything rather than lose my visit, will you manage that I can have my pipe in my own room whenever I like?"—London Daily News.

INDIAN GAMBLING.

Ishi, the last of the Deer Creeks, gave exhibitions of aboriginal gambling with his friend, Ansichamnana of the Yuki tribe.

When Ansichamnana and Ishi gamble with their sticks and bones the observer is forced to concede that for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain "the heathen Chinee" is not in it for a minute.

With the Indians gambling is a mental process, much the same as mind reading. In principle their game is similar to the childhood play of "button, button, who's got the button," but it is a serious business when two or three hundred people are watching to applaud the winner.—San Francisco Call.

SENSATIONAL.

"You know Smith pretends to be such a very upright and high-principled man."

"Yes?"

"Well, he was caught yesterday taking a well-known young married woman out to dine."

"Who was she?"

"His wife."

THE FOUNDATION of future financial independence is a growing Bank Account. Place your earning and watch it grow. We pay a liberal rate of interest on time deposits.

Why you should bank with HOLT STATE BANK:—

We can with pleasure assure you of the entire safety of your funds under our care. Our Cash is protected against any possible loss thru burglary or hold-up robbery by ample insurance and any loss thereby would be promptly replaced. We are organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota which now require two examinations yearly by the Examining Committee, four printed reports, two examinations yearly by a capable Bank Examiner. Also the bye-laws, require that the active officers be bonded and be personally responsible for all moneys or valuables left under their care which assures a straight and honest administration of its affairs. And further, our loans are so drawn that payment is assured at maturity either by the pledging of personal property or real estate, or by some responsible party of good financial standing acting as guarantor.

Our cash resources have increased $25,000.00 during the season 1911 and we want a like amount of increase during 1912. Affording our patrons absolute protection and safety and conducting our affairs in a business-like way are factors which lead to our success, and under these conditions we feel entitled to a generous share of your business during 1912.

Grain dealers from Duluth to New Orleans and from Kansas City to New York, are in Washington to confer with officials of the department of agriculture on the recent rulings relating to sulphuring of oats and shipment of hot corn.

Major General Arthur Murray, U. S. A. commanding the western division, has been ordered from Washington to his station at San Francisco.

The house unanimously passed a resolution calling for an investigation of the alleged "shipping trust" by the committee on merchant marine and fisheries.

HEALTH FOR THE CHILD.

The careful mother, watching closely the physical peculiarities of her children, soon learns that health is in a great measure dependent upon normal, healthy, regular bowel action. When the bowels are inactive, loss of appetite, restlessness during sleep, irritability and a dozen and one similar evidences of physical disorder are soon apparent.

Keep the bowels free and clear and good health is assured. At the first sign of constipation give the child a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bed-time and repeat the dose the following night, if necessary. You will find the child will quickly recover its accustomed good spirits, and eat and sleep normally.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable to salts, cathartics and purgative waters which are harsh in their action. Syrup Pepsin acts on the bowels easily and naturally, yet positively, and causes no griping or discomfort. Its tonic properties build up the stomach, liver and bowels, restoring their normal condition.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this remedy, send for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. He will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Father Now in Second Place.

She was a prim miss of thirteen who stood before the rector of a well known New York Episcopal church and looked him squarely in the eye. "Please repeat that fifth commandment again," he said, for he was catechising her with regard to her knowledge of the Scriptures apropos of the coming confirmations. "Honor thy mother and thy father, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee," was the response. "Honor thy mother and thy father," mused the rector. "Who taught you that?" "Mother," was the response. "These are certainly suffragist days upon which we have fallen," remarked the minister. "Father used to come first."

Humorous Thrust.

"How—"

The savage chief held a glittering spear near the captive missionary.

"—do you like this?"

His tone was not facetious, but the captive was undismayed.

"Well, if you ask me—"

He glanced at the weapon, the propinquity of which was not comforting.

"—it goes against my stomach!"

Unfortunately, however, the captive was in a locality where there is no market for humor, and the end came soon.

The Biblical Injunction.

A Washington clergyman made a call of consolation upon a woman who had suffered a sad bereavement. "I hope," said the pastor, "that in your bitter trial you have found some ray of comfort from the Scriptures."

"Indeed I have, sir," was the confident though fearful reply.

"That's grand, sister," was the sympathetic observation of the minister. "May I ask what passage of the Good Book helped you most?"

"Grin and bear it."

A Mean Insinuation.

Maude—I've something to tell you. I'm engaged to Jack.

Ethel—I am not surprised. Jack never could say "No."

FROM THE NORTH COUNTRY

Where the Winters Are Cold and the Snows Deep.

Writing from the vicinity David Harum made famous, a man says that he was an habitual coffee drinker, and, although he knew it was doing him harm, was too obstinate to give it up, till all at once he went to pieces with nervousness and insomnia, loss of appetite, weakness, and a generally used-up feeling, which practically unfitted him for his arduous occupation, and kept him on a couch at home when his duty did not call him out.

"While in this condition Grape-Nuts food was suggested to me, and I began to use it. Although it was in the middle of winter, and the thermometer was often below zero, almost my entire living for about six weeks of severe exposure was on Grape-Nuts food with a little bread and butter and a cup of hot water, till I was wise enough to make Postum my table beverage.

"After the first two weeks I began to feel better and during the whole winter I never lost a trip on my mail route, frequently being on the road 7 or 8 hours at a time.

"The constant marvel to me was how a person could do the amount of work and endure the fatigue and hardship as I did, on so small an amount of food. But I found my new rations so perfectly satisfactory that I have continued them—using both Postum and Grape-Nuts at every meal, and often they comprise my entire meal.

"All my nervousness, irritability and insomnia have disappeared and healthy, natural sleep has come back to me. But what has been perhaps the greatest surprise to me is the fact that with the benefit to my general health has come a remarkable improvement in my eye-sight.

"If a good appetite, good digestion, good eye-sight, strong nerves and an active brain are to be desired, I can say from my own experience, use Grape-Nuts and Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

PANAMA BILL PROVIDES TOLLS

MEASURE AGREED UPON WOULD AUTHORIZE PRESIDENT TO OPEN AND OPERATE CANAL.

AMERICANS ARE FAVORED

Boats Controlled by Railroad Interests Prohibited From Using Channel—Other News of Congress.

Washington, March 11.—The bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and the operation of the canal was agreed to by the house committee on interstate commerce. It would give to the president authority to fix tolls within certain limitations, a maximum of $1.25 a ton being prescribed with a minimum not below an amount sufficient to maintain and operate the canal. No preference would be given to American ships.

The bill would authorize the president to open and operate the canal and to make rules for the government of the canal and fixe the tolls.

Prohibition Clauses.

The prohibition clauses, summarized, include:

That it shall be unlawful for ships to pass through the canal which are "owned, leased, operated or controlled by any railroad company engaged in interstate commerce or by any other corporation in which such railroad company has any interest whatsoever, or by any other person, association or corporation with intent to restrain or prevent, or with the effect of restraining or prevention of competition through the Panama canal, either between ships, ship lines and ship companies, or between ships, ship lines or ship companies and railroads."

The Government.

That it shall be unlawful for any ship to pass through the canal if the owner "shall be engaged in any agreement, combination, ship ring or conference with intent to restrain or prevent, or with the effect of restraining or preventing competition through the Panama canal among ships, ship lines or ship companies, or between railroads and such ships, ship lines or ship companies."

The bill would establish one United States district judge with magistrates and bailiffs in the various towns throughout the zone and would provide jury trial on demand in all criminal cases and cases at law. The district court would have appellate jurisdiction with the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans. Extradition of criminals also would be provided.

Democrats Would Hasten Legislation.

Curtailment of the Democratic tariff revision program with a view to "speeding up" congress to permit adjournment before the national conventions is now the expressed aim of the Democratic majority in the house. Republicans and Democrats in the senate and house are chafing over delay in actual legislation that threatens to crowd congress later on. Democratic Leader Underwood of the house, chairman of the ways and means committee, indicated that the wool tariff revision bill, which is to be reported probably within ten days, will be the last of the revision measures at this session of congress.

Senator Smith of Georgia, who was secretary of the interior under the last Cleveland administration, is leading an attack on private pension bills and says many of these are for the benefit of deserters.

Replying to these allegations, Senator McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the senate pension committee, says that the only basis for such a charge is the fact that in a few instances where congress has by special legislation removed the charge of desertion and given an honorable discharge to a soldier, such soldier is granted a pension by the pension bureau, if it is disclosed that he is entitled to such pension as a result of disabilities incurred in the service.

There are now pending in the house committee on pensions, of which the Democrats now have a majority of the membership, more than 30,000 private pension bills. In a great majority of these cases, the committeemen say, the private pension bills are proposed because under the general pension laws these soldiers or their widows are not entitled to either pension or increase of pension under the general law and special reasons exist why such pension should be granted.

"WHY SHOULD I USE CUTICURA SOAP?"

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston, for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

Acme of Laziness.

A story is told of a man who held the Kansas record for laziness. As he was too lazy to do anything at all, his neighbors finally decided to bury him alive. They laid him in the bottom of the wagon and started for the cemetery. On the way they were met by a man who asked what they were doing with that man.

"He won't work, and he has nothing to eat, so we are taking him to the cemetery to bury him alive," was the reply.

Touched with pity, the stranger said:

"Friends, I have a sack of corn here that he is welcome to."

Hearing this, the lazy man raised his head long enough to inquire:

"Is it shelled?"

"No, it isn't, but——"

"Drive on," interrupted the doomed man as his head disappeared from view.

SEVEN LIVES LOST IN FIRE

EXPLOSION IN BURNING WINNIPEG FACTORY BUILDING.

Half Million Loss in Cleveland Fire—Brooklyn Chemical Works Loss is $200,000.

Winnipeg, March 12.—Seven persons are dead, one is possibly mortally injured, and a number suffered serious injuries as the result of an explosion during a fire in the rear of the Radford, Wright Co. wholesale sash and door factory. Captain Dewitt and six firemen were training hose on the back of the building where the fire, supposed to be the work of an incendiary, had started in a lean-to annex, when the back wall was blown out, the little party going down in wreckage which also caught and overwhelmed several spectators and passersby.

Until the explosion came the firemen appeared to have the situation under control. For a time afterwards it was a question whether the adjoining buildings, including the International Harvester company's big warehouse, and the Stuart Machinery company's plant, could be saved, but the fire walls proved effective and with the help of the high pressure plant the fire was brought under control. Neighboring buildings, however, suffered considerable loss from water and smoke.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined. The sash and door factory is a total loss, but was fully insured. The loss to the Radford, Wright company is $50,000, fully insured.

Brooklyn Has a $200,000 Fire.

New York.—A loss estimated at $200,000 was caused by fire which destroyed the Wiarda Chemical works in Brooklyn. During the fire there were many violent explosions which imperiled the lives of the firemen and drove a score of families from homes in the vicinity.

HARD QUESTION FOR MOTHER

Inquisitive Little One Sought Information That Has Puzzled the Wisest of Men.

Four-year-old Dorothy, being in a thoughtful mood, wished to know what she would be when she grew up. Her mother told her she would be first a young woman, then perhaps a married woman, an old woman, a grandmother and a great-grandmother.

"And after great-grandmother, what?" Dorothy inquired.

"Then you will die. Your soul will go to heaven to live forever, and the rest of you will be put under the soft grass and flowers."

"Oh!" said Dorothy, and asked no more questions at the time. When her mother was undressing her for bed that night, and the rosy little figure stood uncovered, Dorothy said eagerly:

"Mother, will you show me just what part of me will go to heaven to live forever and what goes under the flowers?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

"Sir," she said angrily, "you are going too far!"

But she didn't object to accompanying him as far as Schenectady.

AMUNDSEN PROOFS ARE ACCEPTED

BRITISH SCIENTISTS CONFIDENT NORWEGIAN EXPLORER'E RECORDS ARE COMPLETE.

NO WORD FROM JAPANESE

Report From Scott Is Awaited With Interest—Announcement Made That Amundsen Will Investigate North Polar Region.

London, March 11.—No question of proofs will be raised so far as Captain Roald Amundsen is concerned when he reaches civilization. The captain landed from the Fram at Hobart, Tasmania, for a brief period and made it plain, that he will not wait long to submit his proofs that he actually discovered the pole, but will send them to the various geographical societies on the near future.

The fact that no word has been received from Captain Scott is accepted by the majority of English newspapers as meaning that Amundsen arrived at the south pole first. It is believed, however, that Scott has by now also reached the pole, although there will be great anxiety until he reports.

There seems to be a general acceptance from Englishmen that the Norwegian did exactly what he said he did in the cable dispatch received by his brother, which stated that he spent three days at the pole, that he did this to prevent any question of his success.

Observations taken on three days in succession at high noon, it is said, could not well be said to be faked, and there can be no question made such as was raised for a time in connection even with Dr. Cook's proofs among certain scientists.

Nothing From Japanese Expedition.

The Hobart dispatch to the Daily Express says that Amundsen, after meeting Captain Scott in the Bay of Whales on Jan. 19, 1911, camped with nine men in longitude 164 west and latitude 78. It is said that he saw and knew nothing of the Japanese expedition.

A special dispatch to the Star from Hobart says when the question was bluntly put to Amundsen whether Captain Scott reached the south pole, the Norwegian explorer positively refused to answer it.

Leon Amundsen says that his brother will now attempt to reach the north pole, and that his ship, the Fram, wil be sent to San Francisco, where the explorer will go in 1913, after making a lecture tour through Australia and Europe.

That Scott probably discovered the empty Norwegian tent, with the flag of Norway flying, abandoned in the limitles wastes of ice, and snow at the lowermost end of the earth when he reached his long-coveted goal, is considered nearly certain. All that could then be done by him, of course, would be to plant his own flag, verify his observations and start back.

Dogs Given Great Credit.

There is a general feeling to give Amundsen's dogs great credit for his trip. Their work was wonderful and shows explicitly what is possible for a well-trained pack when handled by men who know just how to get the last bit of speed and strength out of them. The wonderful dash to the coveted goal, the surmounting of mountains of ice, as related by the intrepid explorer, brought conviction to all of the scientists. So certain are the Englishmen that Amundsen reached the pole and that he was first there that King George personally ordered congratulations sent to King Haakon today.

All of the geographical discoveries reported by Amundsen are said by the experts here to be of the utmost importance. The value of the Norwegian's discoveries, Shackleton says, cannot be overestimated.

CANAL BILL IS AGREED TO

Gives the President Authority To Fix the Tolls.

Washington, March 11.—The bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and the operation of the canal was agreed to by the house committee on interstate commerce. It would give to the president authority to fix tolls within certain limitations, a maximum of $1 25 a ton being prescribed; with a minimum not below an amount sufficient to maintain and operate the canal.

That Houn' Dawg Again.

New York, March 11.—The houn' dawg song, which Missouri minstrels have nominated a campaign hymn, was not born in the Ozark mountains, as the followers of Champ Clark have asserted. According to musicians here, it is an old German cradle song written prior to 1499. Here are the words in the original German:

"Jedes mal ich ins dorfchen komm,
Stossen die jungens mein hund herum,
Mir ist's egal was sonst sie thun,
Sie burfen nicht stossen mein hund herum."

Lead Production in 1910.

New York, March 11.—A preliminary report gives the production of primary refined lead in the United States in 1910 as 470,380 short tons, or 22,268 tons more than in 1909; and the 1909 production was a record output, 448,112 tons.

DREADED ATAXIA

What Active Treatment With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Accomplished in a Recent Case.

Mr. Francis M. Poole, a harness maker, of Garvin, Lyon Co., Minn., says: "My illness started in 1902, with sharp pains all through my limbs. At first I thought it was rheumatism but the pains kept getting more and more severe and I grew steadily worse. Later a numbness came over my feet. It gradually extended up my legs to my spine and waist. By this time I had lost all control of my legs. Next my bladder and bowels were affected and I lost all control of them. At this stage of the disease I was perfectly helpless and from November, 1905, to April, 1906, I was confined to the bed. My memory was so affected that I thought I would lose my mind. I looked just like a dead person. My lips and finger nails were blue. I suffered with terrible sharp, shooting pains and could get relief only from the use of morphine.

"I was treated by five St. Paul doctors. All of them pronounced my case locomotor ataxia. One said I could not live a year and another told my wife all he could do for me was to give medicine to relieve the pain. I was discouraged and, when my brother-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I did so willingly for he had read of their curing a case similar to mine. I started to take the pills in March, 1906, while I was still confined to bed. I took several boxes when I felt a slight change for the better and had a healthier look. I was finally able to go to the country but kept on with the treatment. The bluish color left my lips and my eyes became brighter. I took the pills a long time and the next spring in May I could walk around. In June I went to work although still weak. I kept on gaining and am now working without the return of a symptom of my former trouble and without losing a days' work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People absolutely cured me and I want all fellow sufferers to know of my wonderful recovery."

Those who are interested in the treatment which cured this case should have our booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System," which will be sent to every nervous sufferer upon request.

A Mild Suggestion.

"Why," asked the benevolent trust magnate, as he wiped away a furtive tear of regret, "oh, why is the world so down on us?"

"Perhaps," suggested his friend, "it is because you persist in holding it up."

TAFT BLAMES PROGRESSIVES

FOR CUTTING BEST FEATURES FROM ARBITRATION TREATY.

McKinley Committee Analyzes the Vote in States Where Governors Favor Roosevelt.

Washington, March 11.—The resentment that is shown in the ranks of the supporters of President Taft over the insurgent coalition with the Democrats which brought about the defeat of the peace treaties was manifested in a statement given out by the Taft managers. They do not hesitate to charge that Senator Dixon, manager of the Roosevelt forces, had much to do with bringing about the weakening of the treaties and putting the instruments through in such form as to make what promised to be a great forward move for universal peace result in almost nothing calculated to promote that end. The Taft headquarters statement says:

"The cry for the renomination of Theodore Roosevelt for a third term comes primarily from a small minority of the Republican party, combined with an immense Democratic demand for his renomination, on the theory that Mr. Roosevelt is the easiest Republican candidate for president to defeat.

"It also affords positive proof of what has been known to political students for many days, that the so-called newspaper polls favoring Mr. Roosevelt are polls padded by Democrats interested in assisting the Republican party to nominate its weakest candidate at the Chicago convention in June."

Another Taft headquarters statement discusses the Taft vote in the several states where governors have declared for Colonel Roosevelt. It says:

Taft Vote by States.

"In the first place one of these governors, Carey of Wyoming, was elected as a Democrat. The seven states are Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, Nebraska, West Virginia and Wyoming. The total Republican vote cast for president in 1908 throughout the country was 7,678,908. In the election of 1908 these seven states polled a Republican vote of 1,218,860. Therefore, assuming that these seven governors do represent all the Republicans who voted in their own states in 1908 (which they do not by any means) they would represent 15.87 per cent of the Republican vote of the country. Therefore, less than 16 per cent of the Republican vo of the various states is represente in the request to Colonel Roosevelt that he be a candidate. In view of recent developments in several of these states it is perfectly obvious that not even 50 per cent of the Republican votes cast in these states sustains the attitude of the governors of these states, so that, being very liberal, it is quite accurate to state that less than seven per cent of the total Republican vote cast in 1908 sustains the attitude of the seven governors."

Reviewing in detail the votes cast for the different governors, compared with the Taft vote in 1908, it is said that the seven governors had a plurality of 154,799, while President Taft had a plurality of 299,880, giving President Taft 145,081 more votes than the entire seven governors received. The governors polled 51 90 per cent of the total vote cast and President Taft 54.53 per cent of the total vote cast.

Robber Suspect Rearrested.

New York, March 11.—John McNamara, alias "Australian Mack" who was arrested here recently on a charge of robbing the bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B. C., of $241,000, was released by a United States commissioner because of lack of evidence. McNamara was rearrested on a charge of having broken into a garage in New Westminster on the night of the robbery and stolen an automobile in which the bank burglars made their escape later. He will be given a hearing March 14.

Too Thin.

"The greatest curiosity I ever came across in the course of a long experience," said the first broker, "is a man who comes into our office every day, watches the ticker like a hawk for five hours, and pays cash for everything he buys."

"I can beat that by a mile," replied the second broker. "A man came into our place a while ago and started to trade actively in Reading and Union on a five-point margin. He had $5,000 when he began. In six months he had $50,000. Then do you know what he did? He put his money into first mortgage bonds—and quit."

The first broker looked almost dazed. "I hate to do it," he murmured, "but I've just got to. You're a liar!"—Puck.

Shot With a Knife.

Years ago in a stock performance of a famous old melodrama, the villain, Charles Wolcott, suddenly discovered that he had left his revolver in the dressing room. In much confusion, he fumbled in his pocket and found a penknife which, he figured, would do just as well for the bloody deed. Imagine his consternation when, after plunging the blade into the hero's breast, that player failed to change his lines and screamed at the top of his voice: "Heaven forgive you! I'm shot."

Counterfeiter Gets Stiff Sentence.

William Fink, a Brooklyn, N. Y., dealer in drugs, was sentenced by the New York Court of Special Sessions, to imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labor, for four months. The charge was counterfeiting the trade-mark for Carter's Little Liver Pills, in violation of the penal law.

The Carter Medicine Company detected the counterfeit before any quantity of the spurious goods had been placed upon the market. In sentencing Fink, Judge Deuel laid special stress upon the injury done to the public when a remedy so well known as Carter's Little Liver Pills is counterfeited and put on the market. He imposed the sentence not only as the proper punishment of Fink himself, but in order to deter others from the commission of like frauds in the future.

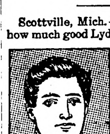
MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health—Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.



Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

Backache
Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:
"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. After taking your 'Favorite Prescription' for about three months can say that my health was never better."
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
Is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. Tones and builds up the nerves. Do not permit a dishonest dealer to substitute for this medicine which has a record of 40 years of cures. "No, thank you, I want what I ask for."

Cement Talk No. 5

For good concrete work—clean, sharp sand and gravel or crushed stone should be used with plenty of water and plenty of cement of good quality. Poor concrete work is very frequently due to the use of dirty sand and gravel, the use of too little water and sometimes to the fact that not enough cement is used. For most concrete work, a mixture of one part cement, two and one-half parts sand and five parts gravel or crushed stone will do. By increasing the proportion of cement, the concrete will be stronger, provided the mixing is properly done. If Universal Portland Cement is used in the concrete work, you may be sure that you have cement of the highest quality made. Let us figure with you when you need any cement for concrete. We handle Universal.

ALEXANDER POPE WAS RIGHT

The proper study of mankind is man.—Alexander Pope.

MR. POPE, who was writing poetry about 200 years ago, was exactly right in his declaration quoted above. If you would study man you must study his deeds.

WHERE WILL YOU LEARN ABOUT THEM EXCEPT IN THE NEWSPAPERS?

These accurate histories of the world's affairs tell what man is doing everywhere, whether it is flying through the air, stealing a million dollars, laboring for world peace, plotting to overthrow a government or to establish one, committing a murder or trying to escape punishment for one already done, making a political speech or watching the antics of a comet.

NOTHING THAT IS INTERESTING OR IMPORTANT ESCAPES THE DRAGNET OF THE NEWSPAPERS.

News that literally costs thousands of dollars to collect is printed and given to the reader for a cent or two. Can you, can any one, afford to miss such a mental treat and financial bargain?

TAKE THIS PAPER.

Solving a Difficulty.

A painstaking mother of two children was attempting to give them a serious idea of her anxiety to make them good and to make plain to their minds the gravity of the task before her. Overcome with the impossibility of ever attaining her mother's ideal, three-year-old Frances answered in all earnestness: "Don't try to make us good mother; just shoot us."—Everybody's.

We dont hear much about the subject of aerial navigation nowadays. The atmosphere is so charged with political thunder that it isn't safe for aeronautics.

Some way or other the people do not seem to enthuse much over Alvah Eastman's candidacy for congressman at large. And Alvah is making all the noise he can to attract public attention.

Le Sueur News: It is said that Governor Eberhart will attend the Taft conference of governors in Chicago. Chalk up another mistake for Eberhart, who has his hands full at home and cannot afford to mix in the affairs of others.

The Middle River Pioneer makes announcement to the effect that it will hereafter use an adless ready print service. We congratulate Bro. Carr on his being able to afford the change, which is unquestionably a move in the right direction.

Duluth Herald: It's all right to oppose Taft—if you feel that way. It's just as all right to support him—if you have that hunch. But whether you oppose him or support him, you can't get away from a kind of sympathy for him. And that's what makes his case so almighty hopeless. People dont want a president who got the job on a sympathy platform.

Our neighbor village of Middle River preferred voting in saloons to issuing village bonds, and has gone over from the "dry" to the "wet" column. If the license fee is made high enough, the result may be satisfactory, but brewery influence will undoubtedly hold the license fee low enough so that the repletion of the village treasury will be indefinitely postponed.

FAIR GIRL IS MOST POPULAR

Statistics Show That She Has More Chances of Matrimony Than Her Dark Sister.

"The fair girl has a 50 per cent. better chance of marrying than the dark girl."

This striking statement was made by a woman who has chaperoned many debutantes, saying: "Fair girls are more tender and loving than dark girls, but a dark girl is capable of a greater and more lasting affection, once her affection is completely won."

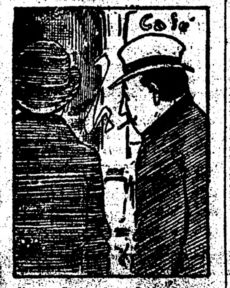
"Why is it," she continued, "that one sees so few fair-haired old maids? They are almost always dark, possessing more often than not strong, vigorous minds, with little sentiment about them.

"Personally, I think the fair girl is shallower than the brunette, more inclined to be fickle and irresponsible. Her affection is often on the surface; she is incapable of thinking deeply."

With a view to discovering the exact facts on this question the opinion of a registrar who marries dozens of people every day was sought. He confessed that he knew of no actual figures on the point, but said he was quite sure that the fair girl has a better matrimonial chance than the dark girl.

The number of fair-haired brides is remarkable. Fair girls are generally impressionable and very sweet and trusting, and these qualities make an immediate appeal to most men, while dark girls who often possess more lasting affections, are stronger willed.

MORE TROUBLE AHEAD



Hoax—Professor Scream says that electric cars will travel at the rate of a hundred miles an hour.

Joax—I'm sorry. It's hard enough to get 'em to stop for you now.

THE WRETCH.

"Now that our wedding day is drawing near," she said, nestling a little more closely in his arms, "I am beginning to be awfully frightened. Sometimes I almost feel tempted to run away and never come back."

"I didn't intend to tell you about it," he replied, "but I frequently feel that way myself."

"Why, Fred! I don't believe you really love me. You—you heartless wretch! I shall never speak to you again."

MAN OF SHORT SIGHT.

The man who stops advertising labors under the curious obsession that since he stopped advertising no babies have been born; no couples have been married and gone to housekeeping; no young men have reached maturity and begun to buy for themselves; and that not a single stranger with money in his pockets has entered the city gates.—Mail Order Journal.

TANTALIZING.

The strong-minded dame was narrating the experience she had undergone while on a recent slumming expedition.

"The sights witnessed in that low doggery," she said, "are indescribable!"

"That's too bad!" murmured Miss Gushleigh; "I should so love to hear you describe them!"

SUSPICIOUS.

"What do you know against her?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, but how can she be all right? You never see her anywhere without her husband. He must have some cause for being suspicious."

BUSINESS ROMANCE.

"What will be the outcome with that couple?"

"I think it will depend on his income."

Anti-Tuberculosis Association

An anti-tuberculosis association is the latest organization to be effected in this locality. It was organixed Monday afternoon at a meeting held by Miss Olsson, visiting nurse, in the Woodman hall. The association started with a membership of sixteen and should soon have hundreds more. G. P. Sorter was elected president, and T. B. Folden secretary and treasurer. P. A. Risberg, Martin Matson and Ole Grondahl were appointed as a committee on membership. The annual dues will be 15 cents for each member, and, as everybody should be interested in fighting this dread disease, everybody should join this association and help the movement for the public good.

Martha Mortenson, Teacher

W. R. Hoag, chief engineer of the great Mud Lake drainage work, was a business visitor in town Wednesday night. He informs us that 55 miles of road in the new country have been designated as state highways and will soon begin the drawing of state aid. The greater portion of these highways runs through Agder township in a line beginning at the Thief River and following the course of ditch 20 east, and then on to Grygla and the country northeast. The other portion runs from Middle River to Gatzke. These roads will be quite a help to the settlers and to the business interests of the towns near their western ends.

NATION WATCHES NORTH DAKOTA

RESULTS IN TUESDAY'S PRIMARIES MAY AFFECT VOTING ELSEWHERE.

TAFT HAS 135 DELEGATES

Roosevelt Has 15, Cummins 2 and La Follette None.—Champ Clark Has 66 and Governor Wilson 10.

Bismarck, N. D., March 19.—To North Dakota belongs the distinction of holding the first presidential preference primary. On Tuesday the various political parties will elect delegates to the national conventions, and at the same time express their choice for the party's nominee for president.

The primaries have attracted national attention, not only because they are an innovation, but principally on account of the fight now being waged between Roosevelt and Taft.

The general expectation is that the result of the North Dakota primaries will exert an important influence over the other statewide presidential primaries that will be held in four other states in the near future, as well as over the state conventions.

Oregon, Nebraska, Wisconsin and New Jersey all will hold presidential preference primaries within the next 10 weeks, and the date for California's primaries is expected to be set soon.

Just now Roosevelt seems likely to capture the Republican delegation of North Dakota, while Clark, Wilson and Judson Harmon appear to have about equal chances for winning the Democratic delegates.

Senator McCumber concedes an anti-Taft delegation. One reason assigned is that the farmers of North Dakota became deeply incensed at the president because of his advocacy of Canadian reciprocity. The North Dakota delegates' expenses, up to $200, incurred in attending a national convention, are paid by the state, and there is at least the moral obligation on them to comply with the instructions given them at the time of their election.

Taft Leads So Far.

Chicago, March 18. — The week closed with 135 delegates in the Taft column, some of them contested. Roosevelt has 15, Cummins 2 and La Follette none. On the democratic side, Clark has 66 and Wilson 10. The Clark delegates are 10 from Oklahoma, 20 from Kansas and 36 from Missouri. The Wilson 10 are from Oklahoma.

The two Cummins delegates come from the seventh Iowa district.

The Roosevelt delegates come from Oklahoma and New Mexico, with 14 in the former and one in the latter state. The Roosevelt managers claim more than half of the New Mexico delegation, but letters and telegrams from convention officials say the delegation will divide as stated. It is uninstructed.

The Taft delegations come from states as follows:

Indiana, 4; South Carolina, 4; Oklahoma, 4; Florida, 12; Georgia, 22; Virginia, 22; Philippines, 2; District of Columbia, 2; Tennessee, 14; Alabama, 20; Michigan, 2; Missouri, 4; Iowa, 6; New Mexico, 7; total, 135. There will be 1,076 delegates in the Chicago convention, and a majority, sufficient to nominate, will be 539. With 135 delegates to date, President Taft has one-fourth of 539 and one over.

Senator Dixon, manager for Colonel Roosevelt, issued a statement indicating it is his purpose to contest 84 of the delegates already elected for Taft. Of these contests 14 are in Alabama, 2 in the District of Columbia, 12 in Florida, 12 in Tennessee, and 18 in Virginia. This includes practically all the delegates thus far elected from the South. There were a similar lot of southern contests prior to the convention of 1908, and the national committee was in session for several weeks in Chicago, prior to the convention, hearing them. The committee in practically every instance decided in favor of Taft delegates.

The contests this year are brought on precisely the same grounds as the contests of four years ago. These southern contests, in fact, have come up before all republican national conventions for twenty-five years on similar grounds, and have been decided in the same way by the successive national committees.

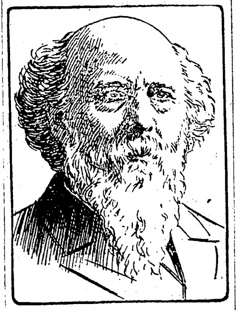
REAR-ADMIRAL MELVILLE DEAD

NOTED COMMANDER VICTIM OF PARALYSIS.

Was Rated as an Authority on Arctic Exploration and Engineering.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 19.—Rear Admiral George Wallace Melville, U. S. N., retired, died at his home here from paralysis. He was national commander of the Loyal Legion at the time of his death and was a noted authority on arctic exploration as well as engineering and naval affairs.

Rear Admiral Melville, who was placed on the retired list, Jan. 10, 1903, was 72 years old. For 16 years he was chief of the bureau of steam engineering in the navy department.



REAR ADMIRAL MELVILLE.

He was appointed as assistant engineer in the navy in 1861 and was a member of both the Jeannette and the Greely relief expeditions to the Arctic circle.

Among the colleges which conferred honorary degrees upon him in recognition of his scientific work were the University of Pennsylvania, Harvard, Columbia, Georgetown and Stevens institute.

He was a past president of both the American academy of mechanical engineers and the American Society of Naval Engineers. At the time of his death, he was the president of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

ROOSEVELT WILL SPEAK

Short Tour Outlined for the Ex-President.

Oyster Bay, March 19.—Colonel Roosevelt has decided definitely to make a number of speeches in various parts of the country in the near future. The speeches before the Civic Forum in New York Wednesday night is first on the program. Later this week, Colonel Roosevelt will talk somewhere on the East side in New York. Early next week, he will start on a short tour of the Middle West. Three speeches have been decided upon to be made at Chicago, St. Paul or Minneapolis, and St. Louis. Other stops may be arranged later.

In the week beginning March 31, Colonel Roosevelt will go into New England. Speeches are to be made in Boston and Concord, N. H., with possibly one in Portland, Me., although Roosevelt doubted whether he would be able to go to Maine before the primaries are held. A trip to Philadelphia and Newark is to be made during the week of April 7.

Some of the speaking dates had been definitely fixed.

PREACHER CONVICTED

Of Performing Criminal Operation on His Secretary.

Pittsburg, March 19.—Rev. W. D. McFarland, aged preacher-educator, was found guilty of performing an operation upon his former secretary, Elsie Dodds Coe, which later resulted in her death. The case dates back to the time McFarland was a high school principal here and Miss Coe was his secretary. McFarland, besides being a minister and a teacher, had studied medicine.

Burke Offers Indian Bill.

Washington, March 19. — Indians holding allotments, money or other property will be permitted to dispose of them by will, if a bill reported from the Indian committee by Representative Burke of South Dakota is enacted into law. The secretary of the interior, however, will have authority to approve or disapprove the testament, either on or after the death of the testator, and to cancel the instrument if, after approval, it is learned that there has been any fraud connected with its execution or procurement. Under the bill the trust period of an allotment is not shortened by a will, nor are the restrictions as to the sale of liquor to be modified by it.

Timber Sale Bill Passed.

Washington, March 19.—The senate passed a bill which has already passed the house, providing for the sale of timber on northern Minnesota land which was burned over in the forest fires of 1910. The sale is to be under the supervision of the secretary of the interior and where the timber is on a homestead to which the settler has not received a title, he is to receive a portion of the proceeds immediately, and the remainder when he gets a patent. The bill now goes to the president for signature.

THREE ESCAPED CONVICTS KILLED

BIG FIGHT OCCURRED BETWEEN OFFICERS AND PRISONERS NEAR SPRINGFIELD.

HID IN FARMER'S WAGON

Murderers in Wagon Driven By Farmer who Was Forced to Drive Them Toward Springfield.

Louisville, Neb., March 19. — The three convicts, Gray, Dowd and Morley, who, last week murdered three officials at the state penitentiary at Lincoln, were surrounded from Omaha, Lincoln and Plattsmouth. All three were shot dead.

The outlaws were driven towards Springfield in a sleigh by Roy Blunt, a farmer who resides three miles north of town. The convicts lay down in the body of the vehicle forcing the farmer to expose himself to the bullets of the posse as soon as they get within fire distance.

The three convicts approached the Blunt home and ordered the farmer to take them in his sleigh to Springfield. He refused at first, but they covered him with their guns and ordered him to make haste to start. The first of the pursuing posses was a mile behind the fleeing convicts. Two other posses were a short distance in the rear.

A special train came from Omaha and another already had arrived from Plattsmouth carrying large posses. Another came from Lincoln, bearing a sheriff's posse and a body of national guard.

The three murderers, Taylor, Morley and Dowd, spent Friday night, all day Saturday and part of Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hall, on a farm, five miles east and a mile north of Havelock. After tying Mr. and Mrs. Hall so securely that they could not liberate themselves, they tore the telephone instrument from its place, cut out the wire and left the Hall home at 10:30 p. m., Saturdday. During their stay they compelled the people at the farmhouse to serve them with meals and permitted no one to leave the house.

After leaving the Hall home, the outlaws went to Prairie Home, obtained a handcar and went to Mordock, where they burglarized two stores and secured arms, ammunition and clothing. Later they ditched the stolen handcar at Meadow, threw the car into the Missouri river and started north toward Omaha on foot.

New Million-Dollar Line.

Pierre, March 19.—Articles of incorporation were filed for the Niobrara and Sioux City Railway company, with headquarters at Pierre and a business office at Omaha. It is capitalized at $1,000,000. The incorporators are W. E. King, S. G. Peticolas, C. W. Baker, R. R. Kinkad of Omaha and Glen W. Martins of Pierre. The proposed line is 150 miles in length in the counties of Knox, Holt, Cedar and Dixon, Nebraska, and Woodbury county, Iowa, extending from Niobrara to Sioux City and with a branch to O'Neill.

NOTED SUFFRAGE LEADER ILL

DR. MARY E. WALKER IN GOTHAM HOSPITAL WITH BRONCHITIS.

Friends Doubt If She Will Recover.—Hard Work Causes Breakdown.

New York, March 19.—Dr. Mary E. Walker, widely known as an advocate of woman's rights and of dress reform in which she set an example by wearing male attire, is in the Presbyterian hospital here and reported to be dangerously ill. Relatives in Oswego, N. Y., have been notified.

Dr. Walker had an engagement to make an address here. Upon her arrival, however, she was found to be suffering from a nervous breakdown and was taken from the train to the hospital. On account of her advanced age (she is an octogenarian), her friends fear her illness will prove a critical one.

Among other distinctions, Dr. Walker has that of being the first woman physician in the world to hold a commission as assistant army surgeon. She was promoted to this position after service as a nurse on the battlefields of the Civil war, during which she had adopted the plan of wearing trousers. During her service she had the unique distinction of being exchanged as a prisoner of war for a man of her rank. Later she was awarded a medal of honor for bravery.

Of late years, Dr. Walker had been leader in the woman suffrage movement, and claimed to have been the first woman to attempt voting at the polls. She had made suffrage speeches throughout the United States and England.

Dr. Walker is suffering from a severe case of bronchitis, which is threatening pneumonia.

ABERCROMBIE BURNED.

North Dakota Village Has $50,000 Fire.

Wahpeton, March 19.—Fire nearly wiped out the village of Abercrombie, fifteen miles north of this city. The total loss is estimated at $50,000.

The fire originated at 2. a. m. in the building owned by A. K. Tweto, which was used as a store and elevator. The elevator, store and all contents were destroyed; also the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul station at the rear of the elevator, and the Nortz Lumber company's yard and the Commercial hotel, which were across the street on the north side.

The Tweto loss is $20,000 and the Nortz loss $10,000. H. Henderson, who owned the Commercial hotel, estimates his loss at $7,000. The railroad company's loss is not known. This is the second fire to occur in Abercrombie within a year, and only about one-half of the original town remains.

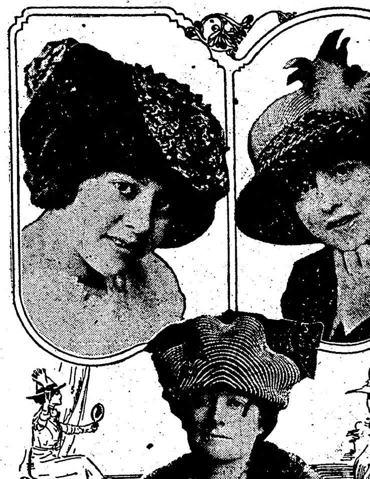
$100,000 Ransom Demanded.

Shanghai, March 19.—Bandits kidnapped the young son of Sheng Kung Pas, the millionaire oil magnate, known as the "Rockefeller of China." A note received by his father said if $100,000 ransom is not paid, the boy will be murdered.

Appointment for Minnesota Woman.

Minneapolis, March 19.—Ada Louise Comstock, dean of women at the University of Minnesota, has accepted an invitation to become dean of Smith college at Northampton, Mass.

Hats for Matrons



THREE hats, especially adapted to the needs of older women, are shown here. Both models are in black and white and both fit comfortably to the head.

In Fig. 1 the shape is made of a pliable straw braid very light and soft, in a deep rich black. The trimming consists of a wide, double bow of satin messaline ribbon across the crown and even rows of white soutache braid stretched to the flaring brim at the front. This is a brilliant and becoming hat for the matron who prefers black and white to colors.

A striped silk furnishes the crown and upper brim covering in Fig. 2. The facing is of braid and a collar of braid trims the crown. This hat is in black and white also. It is finished with a fancy feather in gray and white with a few touches of black.

Fig. 3 pictures a draped turban made of velvet and straw. The shape sets well down on the head and shows an upward curve in the brim-edge at the back and left side. It is very soft and comfortable and developed in a variety of colors. The braid employed is in what is known as nacre colors, that is resembling the iridescence of the inner surface of a shell.

There is a great variety in the shape and styles designed especially for older women. They have learned that brilliance and color are for them and no longer wear the tame and characterless hats to which they doomed themselves too long.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY THINGS FOR INVALID

Care in These Details Will Help Greatly to Shorten Periods of Convalescence.

A dainty negligee is important.

This need not be expensive.

Some exquisite little affairs are made of dotted swiss.

If something warmer is desired French flannel or flannelette with scalloped edges may be chosen.

A charming negligee is a loose kimono jacket of white silk faintly patterned with rosebuds and turned back at the wrist and neck with blue charmeuse.

Pink quilted satin lined with cream silk and made with a fichu shaped collar of Irish point, partly veiled with pink chiffon, is a luxurious garment.

The daintiest and most becoming touch is given to the invalid's costume by the boudoir cap.

One is of Irish lace, made over the palest shell pink silk, with roses of chiffon above the ears and the sweetest of knotted strings—silk of the same delicate shade.

But there is a far prettier one of Flemish lace, mounted on azure charmeuse, with inner frills of the finest Valenciennes and coquettish rosettes of ruched satin outlined with the thinnest of gold threads.

It is a most delectable article of headgear, especially when worn by a pretty brunette, with hair coiled round a small and shapely head and slightly fluffed round the face.

ADD TO GRACE OF COSTUME

Overskirts, in Moderate Form, Bid Fair to Be a Feature of the Spring Frocks.

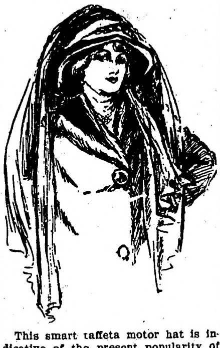
While overskirts pure and simple have not yet arrived in such numbers as to be noticeable, the trend in that direction is very evident. They are sure to arrive before long. The tunic is becoming more of a drapery every day, and it is very probable that by spring the looped overskirt, though called a tunic, will have arrived.

This year the tunic is in many instances the most important part of the costume. It is made all in one piece, cut to swathe the figure, and is a kind of princess made short enough to be fastened up on one side and show the skirt beneath. Skirts may continue to be as tight as they will, but the drapery will cover them and make the ensemble graceful. These tunics for the most part fasten in at one side in the front, one part lapping over the other.

Glass Knobs for Curtains.

Persons who are furnishing houses or rooms in colonial style will be glad to know that glass knobs of rosette shape, such as were used long ago, are again being made for draping back curtains.

TAFFETA MOTOR HAT.



This smart taffeta motor hat is indicative of the present popularity of that material. It has completely captivated London.

New Dollies.

Dollies as thin as gossamer are now being used with crystal glass and dainty china. The latest importations of these are fine as cobwebs. Each disk is embroidered with the finest linen floss, and while the pattern seems to cover the bit of tissue it by no means gives it a thick look. The finger bowl set which expresses the newest style in the perfectly appointed table is of sheer bolting cloth finished on the edge with a tiny embroidered scallop and garland of microscopic flowers worked in a trellis design.

Protect Edges.

When using oilcloth on the kitchen table put it on in this way: Get wooden strips to fit the edge of the table and some brass screws. Put the oilcloth on and draw it tight, then screw the strips to the table. Trim the oilcloth close all around. This keeps the corners from wearing.

Grease From Tan Shoes.

Grease spots of any sort can be removed from tan shoes by dissolving a little oxalic acid in hot water. When nearly cold rub it well into the shoes by means of a small nail brush. Then wash the shoes well in cold water and dry off with a cloth.

Linen Belts.

Linen belts and fancy hand wrought buckles will be worn with the spring linens, crashes and odd washable ratine effects. They match the color of the gown, although there is often a white decoration on the buckle.

THE DRYS GAIN IN MINNESOTA

NINETY-ONE VILLAGES GO DRY AND NINETY GO WET.

Several Close Contests.—Dr. Dumas Is Defeated for Mayor of Cass Lake.

St. Paul.—Returns from one hundred and eighty-one villages in Minnesota which voted in the spring elections on the license issue indicate a gain for the prohibition forces, 91 villages declaring against the saloon as compared with 90 in its favor.

According to the estimates made by the drys they have managed to make an equal division of the villages of the state, whereas last year the wets had a one-third majority over the drys. Many of the villages did not vote on the saloon issue.

The vote on the license issue in several of the villages was extremely close. The village of Argyle went wet by one ovte. It has been in the wet column for a number of years. The village of Asbury conteracted the victory of Argyle for the wets by turning from the wet column to the dry side by one vote.

Alexandria, with a population of 2,800, one of the largest villages in the state, voted out the saloons. The village had been controlled by the wets for the last 16 years.

New Richland was won by the drys by the small majority of three votes. The drys have tried for several years to annex the village but repeatedly had failed. Fred Corbett, a prohibition speaker, was assaulted at the village several nights ago while delivering an address against the saloon. Several fist fights followed between the drys and wets, but none was injured beside Corbett.

Karlstad which was a dry village until last year voted out the saloon by an overwhelming majority. West Concord, which had also been dry for a short period voted against the grog shop.

The principal issue in the elections was the license question, but at Cass Lake the fight over the mayoralty claimed the attention of the voters. Dr. D. F. Dumas who has been in the calcium as the result of arson charges made against him, was defeated for mayor by Andy Anderson. Dumas polled 85 votes and his opponent 179. The balance of the ticket on which Dumas ran was elected by good majorities.

NEW ULM PLANS FETE

Fiftieth Anniversary of Battle With Indians to Be Celebrated In August

New Ulm.—The fiftieth anniversary of the battle at New Ulm between the residents of the town and the Sioux Indians in August, 1862, will be celebrated with elaborate ceremonies next August. Committees are at work now arranging for the affair, which will be one of the largest in the history of the city.

The celebration will be made the occasion for a general homecoming of the survivors of the battle, as well as of other early pioneers and former residents of New Ulm.

The battles at Fort Ridgely and other near-by places were fought at almost the same time, but New Ulm will be the only place with a general celebration, as it is the most central point

Telephone Companies Taxed $163,052.

St. Paul.—Minnesota has received $163,052.28 as gross earnings taxes from telephone companies in 1911. A total of 695 companies reported paying from 12 cents, the taxes of the Stony-Brook and Fisher telephone companies, up to $70,059.63. The Carlisle Barbed Wire Telephone company which uses barbed wire fences instead of pole lines and telephone wires, paid 87 cents in gross earnings taxes.

Improvement for St. Croix.

Washington.—The interstate commerce committee of the house directed that the issues which have been raised respecting the use of water for hydraulic purposes in connection with dams constructed in the St. Croix river between Wisconsin and Minnesota shall be submitted at once to the engineering officers of the government with directions to report thereon in accordance with the provisions of the general law pertaining to the placing of dams in navigable streams.

FOURNIER IS KILLED.

Echo of the Celebrated Dahl Case at Quiring.

Bemidji.—A fatal shooting affray, growing out of the Dahl murder case in 1909, occurred at Quiring, Minn., when Paul Fournier, who has long been a resident of this part of the country, was shot and killed by George Cyr, in an altercation which originated in a quarrel over a woman.

At the time of the Dahl tragedy Fournier and a man, who was known as "Shorty" Wesley, were arrested and charged jointly with the killing of M. O. Dahl, a homesteader, and his daughter. The bodies of the victims when found had evidently been hidden in the woods several days. In the trial which followed in July, 1909, Wesley was convicted and sentenced to a life term in the state penitentiary at Stillwater, which he is now serving.

Fournier was found guilty at the same trial, but his case was appealed to the supreme court and a decision granted in his favor on the grounds that the evidence was improper, and his case was accordingly referred back to the Beltrami court for a new trial. In December of 1909 a change of venue was granted and the new trial was held at Brainerd, at which he was acquitted. In the spring of 1912 he was re-arrested, charged with the murder of the homesteader's daughter, Agate, and brought to trial for that crime at Aitkin, Minn., but was again acquitted.

During the altercation prior to the shooting, Fournier declared that "he had already killed two people up in that section and was ready to kill two more," meaning, presumably, Cyr and the woman in the case.

TO LINK TWO BIG LAKES

Government to Build Waterway Between Cass Lake and Walker.

Cass Lake.—The government is preparing to make extensive improvements at Winnebigoshish dam this summer. Several thousand tons of rock have been hauled and a force of 100 men will be employed practically all summer. As soon as the water level in the lake is raised to nine feet, so as to furnish sufficient water for dredges to operate, the government will begin work on the canal between Lake Winnibigoshish and Leech lake. There is now a seven and a half foot head of water and it is expected that when the snow and ice go out a sufficient head will be obtained.

The government twice advertised for bids last summer for this canal, but the specifications were such that no contractor would bid, because of fear of quicksand, therefore the government will do the work with day labor. The canal is intended to carry surplus water from the Winnibigoshish reservoir, which is not large, to the Leech lake reservoir so as to have a larger supply for use in the late summer. The canal will be over four miles long and will furnish a water route between Cass Lake and Walker.

CREAMERY ORGANIZED

Freeborn County Dairymen Considering Plan Advocated by F. D. Currier.

Albert Lea.—Dairymen of Freeborn county held a meeting here that was largely attended. F. D. Currier, secretary of the State Dairymen's association, presented his scheme of forming an organization that shall have for its membership the various creameries of any given county, the natural sequence of which would be a state association. James Sorenson, manager of the state creamery here, was constituted a committee of one to ascertain the sentiment of the creamery managers of the county as to whether they would become members of such an organization, the plan being to assess each creamery half a cent per hundred pounds of butter produced as a means of securing funds to finance the organization. The argument in favor of the plan was that closer co-operation would bring still better results.

HAVILL PAYS $1,500 FINE

Another Case Against Former Bowlus Banker to Be Dropped.

Little Falls.—O. H. Havill, president of the defunct State bank at Bowlus, convicted in February of receiving deposits after the bank was insolvent, was fined here $1,500.

At the time of his conviction, a motion was made for a new trial and the hearing was set for March 11. When the motion came on for argument Attorney Brower for the defense addressed the court, saying that Assistant State's Attorney Edgerton and himself had agreed that if the court felt disposed a fine would be agreeable and if this was done the defense would withdraw the motion for a new trial and the state would move to dismiss another case against Havill on a similar charge. Judge Taylor then sentenced the defendant to pay a fine of $1,500, which was paid.

CLUB WILL INVESTIGATE

Unsanitary Conditions Reported in Dairy Herds Near Bemidji.

Bemidji. — Acting upon assertions made by W. A. Cassler, a farmer, to the effect that unsanitary conditions exist in some of the dairy barns in this vicinity, the Commercial club commissioned A. P. Ritchie to at once take the matter up with the state authorities. Owners of dairy herds will be forced to adopt more cleanly methods and to submit their cows to a test.

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. ROBERT BLANKENSHIP, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything.

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. GASTON BLONDEAU, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles.

"I got two bottles of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman.

"I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. MATTIE HODNOT, Box 406, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself.

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. MARY A. HOCKENBERRY, 712 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed.

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it.

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. BLAYTON, 1029 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

Why don't you try this reliable remedy?

What Is in a Name?

A Chicago man who hardly knew one tune from another made the mistake of taking a knowing woman to a concert at Orchestra hall. The selections were apparently familiar to him, but when the "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn was being played he began to evince some interest.

"That sounds familiar," he said. "I am not strong on these classical things, but that's a good one. What is it?"

"That," gravely replied the woman, "is the 'Maiden's Prayer.'"

Final Recourse.

"Do you want to get a hearing in this court?" shouted the magistrate.

"Sure, sir," replied the very deaf defendant.

"Then," yelled the magistrate, with a last mighty effort, "you will have to go to a specialist."

No Wonder She Blushed.

Two of the University of Pennsylvania track runners passed a learned and preoccupied professor showing a young woman visitor through the "Gardens."

With a dainty shiver, the girl remarked:

"It's dreadfully cold—isn't it—to be without stockings?"

The professor's mind turned for a moment from contemplation of the fourth dimension.

"Then why did you leave them off?" he asked.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

SHARE IN PROFITS

System Which Might Eliminate Labor Disturbances.

Is Plan of L. D. Brandeis—How Boston Grocers Flourished After They Gave Their Employes Real Incentive to Efficiency.

Boston, Mass.—John T. Connor is an employer who sees the human side of employment. In his method of operating a chain of 105 grocery stores in and around Boston he believes he has a solution of labor troubles which, if adopted by other employers, would eliminate the necessity of strikes and labor unions.

Mr. Connor, as head of the John T. Connor company, has been in business for about a dozen years, starting with four stores, but his success has come mainly in the last few years. About five years ago he became interested in profit sharing from reading news items on the subject and from actual cases where he had seen the project tried. But at that time the profits of his business seemed not to warrant sharing them.

By 1909, however, the business had grown largely and the net returns were much more satisfactory, determining him to give the plan a trial. "So I went to Louis D. Brandeis," says Mr. Connor in telling the story, and asked him to help me. He whipped a system into shape in a couple of interviews, making little out of what had seemed quite a problem to me. And incidentally let me tell you Louis D. Brandeis is one of the greatest men in this country today."

"Mr. Brandeis' plan was simple, after it was evolved, and has worked very smoothly. He divided the business into departments, each of which with the exception of one, contained a group of stores. The remaining department included the central office, warehouse and shipping end of the business. One-half the profit shares are held by the company, the other half by the employes, of which there are now 600.

At the end of the year the profits of each department are calculated, and, in general, the employes in the stores of the departments which have produced the most net gain receive the largest percentage of results. But Mr. Connor does not believe in carrying out the scheme literally—that is, by making employes suffer if in departments which have not shown large profits—so under the way he administers the system every one is bound to get some share.

The practical results of the system were finely illustrated the other night when at a monthly meeting of the employes' association the sum of $17,000, representing exactly one-half the company's net profits for the past year, was divided among them. Every one who had been with the firm for a year or more, from the order boys to the highest paid officials, received something, the amounts varying from $5 to $1,000. The money was given to them in the form of bank deposits, as an encouragement to thrift.

The first year the plan was tried $11,000 was distributetd among the sharers who are employes, and last year $15,000 was given them. In addition to holding certificates entitling them to shares the clerks and others have this year adopted a neat little button bearing the inscription, "Profit Sharer."

END TRUANCY IN LOS ANGELES

Plan of Small Classes, With a Little Expert at the Head of Each, Makes High Attendance Record.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Through an entirely original idea of teaching work and play the board of education is fast reducing the work of the juvenile court in passing on truancy cases. The idea, as suggested by Professor E. J. Lickley, has reached the stage where there is now an average attendance of 99 per cent. for the entire year, in special ungraded schools made up of obstreperous boys.

The schools were started as an experiment following the assertion of W. L. Bodine, supervisor of compulsory education in Chicago, that there were more truants in Los Angeles than any other city in the United States.

"We had to do something to reduce the number of boys going before the juvenile court," said Professor Lickley, head of the department of compulsory education.

"There seems to be but one cure for the trouble, and we have at last found it. The remedy for such cases lies in grouping the boys in small classes, never more than 15 to a room, and putting them in charge of a man instructor who is in sympathy with the work. Not only must he know how to deal with boys, but he must be proficient in athletics to the extent that he can educate the boys in play as well as work."

Cows Dislike His Red Cap.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Charles Porter, city milk inspector, has refused to wear the red cap provided for him by the municipal government. He asserts that the female of the bovine species has almost as strong an aversion to the glowing hue as the male, and says that unless the cap is dyed he will resign.

New York.—Dimitri Smirnoff, the $1,200 a night Russian tenor, threw up his job with the Metropolitan Opera company because of "petty jealousy of Italian rivals."

CHANGE IN WEDDING RITUAL

New Amendment Agreed to by the Lower House of Convocation at Canterbury.

London.—The Canterbury lower house of convocation agreed to a modification of the marriage service by substituting the words, "Bestow, we beseech thee, upon these two persons the heritage and gift of children" for the existing too plain spoken form.

Some objection was made to the change, but the general sentiment of the convocation was in favor of it.

The Dean of Winchester remarked that many passages of scripture would bring out higher ideals than are expressed in the words of Peter and Paul, who had ideas about wives that Christianity has largely altered.

The house of convocation of York has called upon the government to forbid the disseminating of Mormonism in the United Kingdom.

Dig Up Coin Dated 1630.

Grant's Pass, Ore.—A coin nearly 300 years old has been found in the Galice mining district in this county. It was uncovered in building a road near Galice Creek and the Rogue river. The coin bears the mark "Columbia, 1630," and was probably brought to the neighborhood by early Spanish adventurers from California and Mexico, who were in search of gold.

Fremont, O.—Angered when his mother corrected him, Alec Domski, aged ten, seized a paring knife and slashed himself in the abdomen. He will die.

"Woman from Wolverton"

Wife of a Congressman Relates Her Experience in Official Life at Washington.

Washington.—Put a plain, simple, honest little woman from the west into the whirl of officialdom at Washington, photograph her thoughts and impressions of it all, and you get an unprejudiced view of the lives our national law-makers and statesmen lead at the national capital. Isabel Gordon Curtis has accomplished the photographic process, and in her book, "The Woman From Wolverton," she presents a vivid picture of Washington life as it is rather than as we usually hear of it.

Wolverton is a village of the far west and the woman is Mrs. Lemuel Shipe, whose husband has been elected to congress. Plain, simple, home-loving people, they go to the capital city all ignorant of its customs and manners, and many a heart-ache comes to the lovable little woman despite her courage, education and inborn gentility. She tells her own story, with a keen sense of humor when dealing with the female snobs who sought to squelch her and the grafters who sometimes got the better of her, and with real pathos when relating such incidents as the visit from old Uncle Si, the worshipper of Lincoln's memory, or the death of Mrs. Daggett, who had done so much to make her life there endurable.

Lemuel once called his wife "a congressman's conscience," and that is the key to a number of situations, for the little woman in her simple honesty could not comprehend the tortuous ways of politics, or when she did comprehend them, could not tolerate them. So with gentleness she steered Lemuel out of some complications that would have been troubling memories. Through a trying but successful campaign for his reelection she gave him invaluable aid, and proved that they had lost no whit of the affection and esteem of the home town folk, and when, two years later Lemuel was defeated, the entire population of the village met them at the station, with a band playing "The Conquering Hero" and they felt that they had indeed conquered though they had lost.

SPEND $500 OVER $8 HOG

Kentucky Mountaineers, After Long Litigation Over "Razor-back," Ordered by Court to Divide Costs.

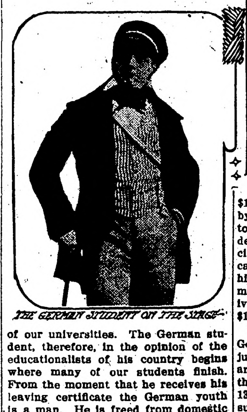
Hazard, Ky.—After years of litigation, involving expenses aggregating a hundred times the value of the property at stake, the locally famous "Amis-Combs hog case," being a case in which two mountain neighbors agreed to submit their differences to a jury, has resulted in a "dog-fall" in the circuit court. The hog was valued at $8 at the beginning of the suit, but is now deceased. The court costs amount to a trifle over $500 besides the attorneys' fees. Two verdicts have been awarded at different times and the last action was concerning the cost. The court decided that each side should bear its own.

GERMAN STUDENTS OF TO-DAY

A SWORD CONTEST IN A FIGHTING CLUB.

THE student, even in these modern times, is a characteristic figure in the Fatherland. His dress is no longer distinctive, that is to say in the large towns and in everyday life, but as a type he is unmistakable. "Frei its der bursch" is his proud boast, and his general appearance is an assertion of this claim to liberty. The freedom that the German student enjoys is as a matter of fact very real. In this country university life is a continuance on a wider basis of public school life, but such is not the case in Germany. Here the pupil in the gymnasium is subjected to strict school and home discipline until he passes his leaving examination. He remains a schoolboy in every sense of the word, and only his intellect is trained so that it may benefit from the fuller instruction of the university.

The moment he finishes his school career, however, an absolutely new life suddenly opens up for him. The leaving certificate given him by his teachers at the gymnasium entitles him to enter as a student at any German university without further ado, and the fact may be mentioned that Germans contend that this leaving certificate is equivalent not to our matriculation but to the B.A. degree of our universities. The German student, therefore, in the opinion of the educationalists of his country begins where many of our students finish. From the moment that he receives his leaving certificate the German youth is a man. He is freed from domestic control, he enters his name as a student in any university he chooses, selects his faculty and course of studies, and attends lectures or not just as he feels disposed.



THE GERMAN STUDENT ON THE STAGE

IN AN OPERETTA

All the German universities are nonresidential, so the student finds a lodging in a private house, where he is subject to no control whatever. Expense is no bar to a university career in Germany. The fees paid by a theological student amount to only about $125; in the other faculties they are slightly higher, and the highest—namely, about $375—are paid by medical students. Books and instruments cost very little as they can easily be obtained from the universities or other institutions. An examination fee, however, of from $75 to $125, according to the faculty, is paid by the student on obtaining his doctor's degree. It is stated that a student can live on $300 a year, except in cities like Berlin, if he spends his vacations at home and is provided by his parents with clothes and linen. It must be added, however, that each university student costs the state about $150 a year.

The number of students at the 21 German universities was last summer just over 57,000, of whom about 2,500 are women; and it may be mentioned that in 1871 the number was barely 13,000. Berlin university had last summer 8,425 male and 777 female students; 613 of the latter study in the philosophical faculty, 152 in the medical, 10 are studying jurisprudence and 2 theology. The German student does not remain at one university, he is even encouraged by the educational authorities to sit under various professors in order that his knowledge and judgment may be widened. There are, of course, rich students and poor students, though no distinction is made in the lecture rooms. In their non-academic life, however, they rarely associate. German students have always belonged to associations established among themselves. In earlier times these had a political object, nowadays their object is social or educational, or the encouragement of athletics and sport. The upper classes have their corps, several of which almost compare in organization and management with the exclusive London clubs. It is in these corps that the students' duels are fought.

The students are jealous of their liberty, and all academic and other laws have failed to put down duelling among them. The German student is as keen in learning to be proficient in the use of the rapier as his English confrere is to become a first-class sportsman, and the authorities recognize how valuable the "mensur" is in accustoming the duellist to look his opponent fearlessly in the eye, to collect all the force of his will, and to control his faculties. They realize that it helps the formation of character and prepares the student for a courageous battle with life. The code or honor among the members of these corps is very strict, and an infringement of it can be wiped out only with blood. That the duels are fought according to the most rigid rules goes without saying, and every care is taken that the vital parts are protected. It requires courage, however, not to flinch or to move an eyelid while the cheek or the chin is being slit or the end of the nose cut off by an opponent's rapier.

Doctors are always in attendance to bind up the wounds, and a student with yards of lint round his head, covering up almost every feature, is a common sight in the streets of the university towns. The scars left on the face as the result of these duels are the life-long pride of their owner. The emperor in his recent speech to the pupils of the upper class of his old gymnasium at Cassel again advocated training in the use of the rapier for the above-mentioned reasons. His majesty also warned his hearers against over-indulgence in beer drinking. This touched a very sore point, for the beer mug is as dear to the German student as are his books; often more so. Every corps and association has its special restaurant in every university town, and here the students assemble at stated times of the day, generally in their caps and colors, to enjoy their liberty under special rules and regulations.

Never Again the Handcar

Unfortunate Experience Has Prejudiced Miss Amy Against Its Use for Joy Riding.

Thursday evening last Station Agent Ren Purdy took Miss Amy Pringle, proprietor of our millinery emporium, out riding on his handcar. There was only one slight accident to mar the pleasure of the occasion. Hod Renfred's male bovine caught sight of Amy's red shirtwaist and chased her and Ren half way to Hickeyville.

It was upgrade most of the way, and Ren had to pump like all git out. He was puffing and panting and about ready to give up when he got an idea, and hollered: "Put your jacket on, Amy!"

"Hain't got no jacket with me," says Amy.

"Go home and git it," says Ren.

That was a happy idee, but Amy dassent jump off and cut cross lots, because the critter was only about two rods behind and gaining every minute. Ren yanked his own coat off and gave it to Amy to put on.

Ren forgot that he only had his red flannel shirt on under his coat. When Amy covered up her red shirtwaist, the bull stopped for a minute; but he caught sight of Ren's flannel shirt and come on again full tilt. The last hope was about gone when Ren spied the brickyard siding. He got off, turned the switch, and run the handcar on the siding. Then he throwed the switch back and the infuriated animal went by on the main track licketty larrup.

It were a close call, and Miss Pringle's rat turned gray from fright. The bull didn't slow down and get the air brakes on till he was passing through West Hickeyville. Ren says if he hadn't happened to have his switch key along with him it would have been all off with him.

Amy says she prefers to do her joy riding in an airship in the future.—Judge.

High Cost of Living.

There is a little girl in Washington who has very decided notions with reference to the "high cost of living," whereof we hear so much.

This child has a weekly allowance which her mother employs, rather ingeniously, as a means of correction. For every little naughtiness the culprit is fined—in other words, her allowance is diminished.

One morning the child was in a peculiarly contrary mood. She did something out of the way and was fined a cent. In a few minutes she erred again, and a second fine was imposed. For the third time the offense was committed.

"Now, Marie," said the mother, "I shall fine you two cents this time, and if you disobey again I shall make it four cents."

"Dear me," sighed Marie, "I think this is a pretty expensive place to live in."

Prehistoric Finds in Turkestan.

Paul Pelliot, the young French explorer of Chinese Turkestan, has found in caverns at Tuan Huang, silk rolls which are Chinese manuscripts, some of them embroidered by artists, who seem to have stepped out of The Arabian Nights. These rolls have been immured in these grottos for 900 years, and when deciphered and translated will tell the story of a civilization that flourished over a thousand years ago and is dead. The explorer brought back 5,000 rolls, but as there are 500 grottos he believes many more libraries will be found. In the last few years archaeologists at work in the Mediterranean island of Crete have unearthed ruins and pottery which prove that civilized people inhabited Greece as far back as 2600 B. C. The system of drainage in the prehistoric city of Gnossus, in Crete, is more sanitary than any found in any historic age anywhere on earth until the nineteenth century. The life of the human race upon this planet is being traced farther and farther back. The earliest known civilization is being found to have been preceded by one still earlier. One curtain of the past upraised reveals another curtain which the scientists are certain conceals still more secrets.

She Knew It.

From the White House

President Taft gave a little party one night not long ago to members of the Republican national committee. A. I. Vorys, Ohio member of the committee, was on his way to the White House when he ran into Carmi Thompson, assistant secretary of the interior, and a warm personal friend of Mr. Taft. Thompson happened to have his automobile nearby.

"Get in," he told Vorys, "and I'll haul you over to the White House."

Thompson drove his machine up the driveway into the White House grounds, let Vorys out, and was about to drive out again when a White House guard ran up to him.

"Get on out now," said the guard, "We can't have you hanging around here after you've let out your passenger."

"Can't I go into the kitchen and warm my hands over the stove?" asked Thompson whimsically.

"Cut that stuff and drive along!" replied the guard. "This isn't any chauffeurs' refuge."

So the assistant secretary of the interior smilingly put on the next speed and drove quietly out of friend Taft's front yard.

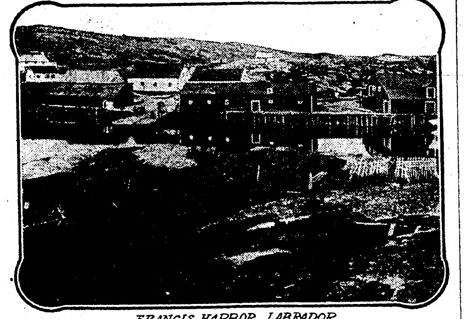
COD FISHER EVER CALM



FRANCIS HARBOR, LABRADOR

IN the conditions surrounding the industry of cod fishing there is a fascination for the inlander that takes him back year after year. And most interesting of all is the fisherman himself. I am not certain, writes W. Lacey Amy in the Toronto Globe, but it really seems to be his supreme indifference to everything but the fish that makes him so attractive.

I have wandered in and out among them where they do not see a visitor in a month; I have seen them empty a boatload of shiny cod that equaled a fortnight's ordinary catch; I have watched them lift a large horse into a tiny skiff where nothing save prayer appeared to offer any hope of its reaching its destination; I have helped them carry into the steamer's hospital men sick unto death, and have bade "good luck" to a patient returning from the hospital legless and helpless in life's fight; I have handed out food to the starving from the steamer's stores, and have heard them refuse to accept well paid work until the cod ran again. But I have never seen a cod fisherman excited.

The nature of the fisherman's life is strenuous enough to relieve him of the necessity of overexertion to prevent falling asleep at inopportune moments. Although it requires but a small cloud and a tiny clap of thunder to keep him from the fishing grounds, scarcely a week passes that he is not forced to meet the terrible machinations of storm and wave to compass his destruction. In his dizzily bobbing little boat he fights the sea, the most apathetic of men against the most relentless of nature's forces.

Open Waters in June.

The fact that he cannot swim seems not to throw into his struggle any sign of fear; so long as a plank holds between him and water he can weather anything that blows. In the early spring, long before the cod begin to run, he risks his life a thousand times across the treacherous ice floes in chase of the seal. In May, while the winds are still icy, he makes a few extra cents in herring off the Magdalens. A month later the Labrador fisherman may succeed in catching a few salmon if the ice is open. But when the cod run there is nothing but cod, except of late years, when the Magdaleners have taken a liking for mackerel, however scarce they be.

Around the Magdalen islands and at Gaspe there is an interval of lobster catching that means money, but along the Labrador coast there is nothing from July until the ice forms again in October but cod, or, as they call it, "fish." The Magdalener is a motley fisherman—herring, cod, mackerel, haddock—but the Labrador fisherman lives, sleeps and smells of cod.

His home is in Newfoundland, the many quaint towns of the east coast sending out almost all their men to the north country just as soon as the ice opens a little in June. Early in that month the fishing schooners start on their long run down the coast, dodging through the ice fields, running into port in face of a storm or a threatening ice floe, and trusting more to Providence than to aught else for their safety.

It is a fearsome run, that first trek northward, staking wooden bottom against grinding, inexorable ice, and many a Newoundland home is empty from a losing risk. But the seemingly indolent, passive fisherman is willing to take the chances to secure an early choice of fishing ground. All summer through he spends his days on the water, his evenings splitting the day's catch, and his nights in the makeshift shacks that are deemed sufficient covering for the three or four months season in that northland.

As few women now venture north, the fishermen must perform all their own work in the treatment of the fish. They are unable to leave the fishing to attend to the drying, with the result that many of them tempt the fate of a winter sail along an inhospitable, deserted coast by remaining north until the middle of November, spending the last few weeks in carefully utilizing every ray of sunshine to make the best sale for their wares. And then the fight back through the ever thickening ice and increasing storms is worse than the spring run.

Oddities of Fishing Villages.

A fishing village is the quaintest, raggedest spot on earth. City planning does not even reach the location of the house or the road rights. In the Magdalen islands, where the land is more level and there is soil enough to make it a consideration, the fish houses are placed with some common regard for a roadway. The bait and tackle and other odoriferous material are kept in the lower story, and the family sleeps, dines and sits in the single room above.

In Labrador there is no such thing as a road to consider. There has never been a horse nor an ox to use it, nor has a traveler attempted to make one settlement from another by any other method of transportation than a boat. There is practically no soil, the bare, uneven, mountainous rock sinking abruptly into deep water. The fish houses are built wherever a ledge of rock offers a foothold, and a staging of rough poles projects from the water by a rickety ladder work of poles, perhaps ten, perhaps forty feet high.

In Newfoundland the fishing villages are clustered so closely to the water's edge that the village is built upward instead of horizontally. A fisherman could spend his whole life at his work without touching ground. Up the side of the cliff the stagings, fish houses, paths, cod flakes and houses will run, occupying, as at the battery adjoining St. John's, not more than forty or fifty feet or horizontal surface for a large village. Land residence is an unfortunate necessity that is simplified to its limit.

There the fishermen live and die as their fathers did before them for generations. Their work, their homes, their lives, they themselves, will always be absorbing to the visitor with a love for the picturesque. Indifferent and phlegmatic they may appear, but they take chances that would mean certain death from heart failure or rashness to the most active. And through all their trials and perils they go on fishing, never really satisfied with the catch or conditions, but thoughtless of any other occupation than the catching of the cod.

MEET DEMAND FOR ODD SHOES

Manufacturers and Dealers Prepared for Need, and There Is No Difficulty in the Matter.

When a one legged man buys a shoe the dealer sends to the factory for a shoe to match the one left remaining. In these days of the use of machinery in every process of their manufacture shoes are made with the utmost exactness and precision and it is easily possible to mate that remaining shoe with the greatest nicety in size, style, material and finish.

Few people have feet exactly alike, commonly the left foot is larger than the right, so that one shoe may fit a little more snugly than the other. Commonly, however, people buy shoes in regularly matched pairs, the difference in their feet, if it is noticeable to them at all, not being enough to make any other course desirable.

But there are people who buy shoes of different sizes or widths, in which case the dealer breaks two pairs for them, giving them, to fit their feet, one shoe from each. In such cases the dealer matches up the two remaining shoes, one from each of two pairs, just as he would where he had broken one pair to sell one shoe to a one legged man.

But a man doesn't have to be one legged or to have feet of uneven sizes or shapes to make him ask the dealer to break a pair of shoes for him. Here was a man with two perfectly good feet who came into the store where he was accustomed to buy and who wanted on this occasion one shoe. Traveling in a sleeping car his shoes had been mixed up with others and he had got back one of his own and one of some other man's; a fact which he had not discovered until he was too far away from train and station to make return and setting things right possible; and now he came in to buy one shoe to match his own.

Woman's Wit Saved Situation.

While a crowd of several hundred men and women lined the banks of the Park river, Hartford, Conn., offering futile suggestions for three hours one recent afternoon, as to how to rescue a poor little puppy that had become marooned on an ice floe, the water had frozen on his hair and he yelped piteously as he ran sniffing at the open water on all sides of his ice island. Human Society agents were attracted by the crowd and got long planks with which to bridge the water to the shore. The puppy started over it, only to fall in to the water, from which he scrambled back onto the ice floe. Then a woman solved the problem. She ordered the men to strap two planks together and sent her own pet dog across the planks to fetch a stick which she threw onto the floe. After she had repeated this twice the lonely terrier understood and cautiously followed the other dog to shore and safety.

INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

USEFUL AS TOOL SHARPENER

Blade Held Against a Revolving Wheel With Rough Surface Found to Be Effective.

An implement for sharpening tools has been patented by a Pennsylvania man. A handle has a frame in which a wheel with a facing of sharpening material is pivoted. This facing consists of a series of ridges and interposed grooves spirally arranged. The upper part of the frame has a sheath to hold a tool or the blade of a tool against the sharpening surface. On the other side of the wheel is a driving mechanism consisting of a smaller wheel to which cords are affixed. As these cords are wound or unwound by pulling them in one direction or another, the sharpening wheel is made to rotate backward and forward and the tool blade is ground to an edge just as it would be if it was held against a wheel driven by foot power or some other motive power.

MAKING PENS OF TANTALUM

Excellent Properties of Metal Have Suggested Idea of Using It for Writing Nibs.

The excellent properties of tantalum have suggested the idea of using this metal for writing pens. Most of the pens now used are of steel, whose elasticity gives the desired pliability to the pens. But the steel pen rusts easily and is attacked by ink. Gold is rust-proof and not so attacked. But gold alone is too soft, and the extreme points must have some hard metal like iridium soldered to them to make them durable, which is complicated and expensive. Some very interesting tests have been made by German scientists. The tantalum metal was cut, formed and split like an ordinary steel pen. Then the points were bent, ground shaped, and hardened by a special hardening process, which was found to greatly prolong the life of the pens. Comparative tests were made between steel, gold, and tantalum pen points on six miles of paper, and the results showed the hardened tantalum pen to be far superior to the others. The chemical tests showed these pens to be proof against the attacks of ink.

EFFICIENT AS WATER FILTER

Cheap and Simple Device Easily May Be Arranged by Using Ordinary Pipe and Fittings.

A cheap, simple and efficient water filter may be made of ordinary pipe and fittings. Owing to the bad condition of the water supply in our city, I constructed such a filter, and it gave good results. The filter is attached to the water main just back of the faucet, says a writer in the Popular Mechanics. The large pipe or body of the filter is filled with charcoal, C, which is held in place with wool felt or filter paper, B B, and backed with wire gauze, A A. The main body of the filter is made of 1½-inch iron pipe with 1½ by ⅜ inch reducers on the ends.

Paper False Teeth.

False teeth made of paper in Germany are said to retain their color as well as porcelain ones, and to be stronger and cheaper.

USING CEMENT AND CONCRETE

Difference Between These Valuable Materials for Construction of Fireproof Buildings.

Following the big Equitable fire, New York builders and contractors are taking an unusual interest in materials which will render future structures impervious to flames. An authority on the subject, Fred K. Irvine, gives the following interesting description of cement, concrete and reinforced concrete:

"Portland cement is a manufactured product derived from lime rock and clay or similar aluminous raw materials. It is prepared through a process of drying and burning and grinding, so that when finished it becomes a light gray powder or flour.

"So fine is this powder that every grain is actually made to pass through a sieve containing 40,000 holes or meshes to each square inch of surface. That sounds fanciful, but it's a fact, and will give some idea of the size of the meshes.

"Its qualities are these: It hardens or crystallizes by hydraulic process; by mixing with water and letting it stand in the air it will gradually change into stone, and is thereafter practically impervious to the elements of heat and cold. The penetration of heat into a concrete mass is not over three-eighths of an inch at the highest obtainable temperature.

"The same applies to the cold temperatures. When modeled into any desirable form cement has a high crushing resistance and a high tensile strength. It can be loaded with almost any possible load without injury and will not crack or show any of the elements of decay that other materials will.

"Concrete is the use of cement in conjunction with sand and crushed rock in such proportions as will develop the highest value of the cement for practical purposes and at the same time bring it within the range of buyers in the matter of cost.

"The next step is reinforced concrete. This is manufactured by using concrete in conjunction with steel so disposed as to contribute the tensional value of steel to the total mass. In this way columns are formed. Such columns are built so as to carry any desired concentrated load."

BLOW TORCH IMPROVEMENT

Soldering Iron Operates Pump Which Heats Point of Iron—Waste of Heat Eliminated.

An ingenious improvement on the plumber's blow torch has been invented by an Ohio man. Any person who has seen a plumber at work is familiar with the can with a jet of flame roaring from a spout above it. In this implement the flame is projected by the operation of an air pump, to the piston of which the handle of the soldering iron is fixed. At the top of the spout is a bridge on which the point of the iron rests. To heat the point of the iron or to direct the flames at any place on which the iron is to be used the handle of the latter is raised up and pushed down, and this movement operates the piston which pumps the air into the torch and causes the flame to spurt forth. With this torch the waste of fire is eliminated.

INDUSTRIAL and MECHANICAL NOTES

Arkansas has the only diamond mine in the world, outside of Africa, in Pike county.

The United States now produces more copper than all the rest of the world together.

Arkansas produces coal, silver, galena, slate, oil stones and clay of every description.

An international coal smoke abatement exhibition will be held in London in March and April.

Of all nations the United States alone allows the use of white phosphorus in making matches.

The manufacture of cement has attained eighth rank for value among the industries of the United States.

A recent discovery in Ireland indicates the presence of a large area rich in copper, sulphur and arsenic.

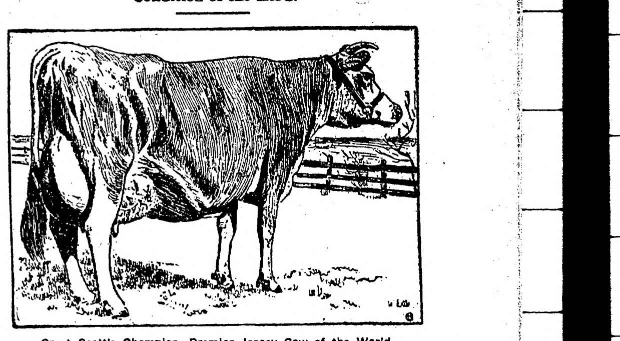
Flour when compressed, will keep for an almost indefinite time. Its bulk is decreased by the process one-third.

St. Louis has a concrete building 57 feet high, which has no windows. Light comes only from glass in the roof.

If a little chalk be rubbed on a file before filing steel it will prevent chips sticking to the file to scratch the work.

PRODUCTION OF CREAM MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEM TO SOLVE

Chief Necessity in Improving Dairy Conditions Is to Give Producer Right Knowledge for Handling Product—Factor of Importance Is the Sanitary Condition of the Herd.



Great Scott's Champion, Premier Jersey Cow of the World.

(By W. M. KELLEY, New York.)

In the production of cream that will meet the demands of a fancy city trade the care of the milk and the sanitary methods of handling the cows are the most exacting phases of business. Many people, when handling milk, forget that they are dealing with a food product. If filth is allowed to get into the milk at any point of production, no amount of care afterward can make amends for this difficulty.

The chief necessity in improving dairy conditions is to give the producer such knowledge of the right methods of handling and caring for the milk that he will see the necessity for such methods and know how to manage his work to accomplish the desired results.

In selecting cows for producing cream it is to our best interest to select animals from breeds that have an inherited tendency to produce a large amount of butter fat at the lowest cost and for that reason Jerseys and Guernseys stand at the head of the list as economic cream producers.

The factor of importance is the sanitary conditions surrounding the herd. To produce clean, wholesome cream we must have clean stables, clean yards, clean and wholesome feeds and clean attendants.

The cows must be kept comfortable at all times. This requires a warm stable with plenty of light and sunshine. Pure air is fully as essential as pure food and no man can produce fine flavored cream if his stable is contaminated with foul air. A number of authorities have said a great deal about how much cubic air space each sow should have, but I believe it is more important than we provide a plan to change the air frequently rather than figure on the basis of so much air space.

To be sweet and clean it is almost necessary that the stable be whitewashed frequently. This makes a cheap and effective disinfectant and it is easily applied with a spray pump. It should be well mixed and free from lumps before using to prevent the nozzle of the sprayer from getting clogged. Cement floors are the best because they are easy to keep clean. With cement floors and liberal use of straw and other absorbents it is not difficult to keep stables neat and clean.

Many disagree as to whether the milk should be separated fresh from the cows or whether it is best to wait until it is cooled and again brought to the right temperature before being separated. On the majority of farms where fancy cream is produced, considerable of the supply is brought from other farmers and for that reason it is best to have the separating done at once, thus insuring a more uniform quality of cream.

Wash al lthe utensils after using. Wash first with warm water to remove the milk, then with hot water, soap or washing preparation. Sterilize the cans and pails at least twice a week. Leave the cans open so that the air and sun can do their work killing bacteria germs. The whole secret of success is cleanliness from the time the cows are milked until the cream goes onto the table for the consumer.

Avoid sudden changes in the line of feeding. A change of food many times deranges the cow's system to such an extent as to give the milk a bad odor. Never feed turnips, cabbage or vegetables because there is always danger of ruining the quality of the production. Roots are excellent. When feeding ensilage, plan to feed it after milking so that the odor will not affect the cream.

Every dairy room or cream skimming room should have good drains, cement floors and walls that are tight. The floor should have enough slope to carry off the water to the drains. Sanitary methods do not mean expensive methods, but that all of the buildings, tools, and men employed must be kept neat and clean. Some of the best and most sanitary equipments are the least expensive.

The next step is marketing the cream, and right here, let me say that the main point is to put up the right kind of article—one that the consumers know is produced under good conditions and that is always uniform in quality. There is not a city of 30,000 inhabitants in the country but that offers excellent inducements to a man who will start a fancy cream trade and pay more for his products than the common dealers are selling for. If you are selling 24 per cent cream keep your product up to that test and if your trade demands a 40 per cent cream do not try and palm off a lower test if you are a little short. Always sell what you adverelse and ask a price that will leave you enough profit to maintain an article of high quality.

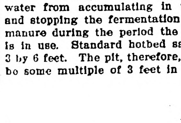
MAKING HOTBED WITH GLASS TOP

Permanent Affair Should Be Constructed to Be Heated by Manure or Radiating Pipes.

(By C. P. HARTLEY, United States Department of Agriculture.)

A permanent hotbed should be so constructed as to be heated either with fermenting manure or by radiating pipes from the dwelling or green house heating plant. For a permanent bed, in which manure is to supply the heat, a pit 2 by 2½ feet deep, according to the latitude in which the work is to be done, should be provided. The sides and ends may be supported by a lining of plank supported by posts 4 feet apart, or, what is better still, a brick wall 9 inches thick may be used. In either case the pit lining should come flush with the surface of the soil.

The site for the pit should be on naturally well drained land, and a tile drain from the bottom of the excavation should be provided to prevent the water from accumulating in the pit and stopping the fermentation of the manure during the period the hotbed is in use. Standard hotbed sash are 3 by 6 feet. The pit, therefore, should be some multiple of 3 feet in length, and the width should be the same as the length of the sash, 6 feet. The plank frame, or brick work of the pit may be extended above the surface of the ground sufficiently to allow for placing the sash upon the frame.



Cross Section of Hotbed.

Hotbed sash should be constructed of white pine or cypress, and the sash bars should run in one direction only, and that lengthwise of the sash. The bars may be braced through the middle by a transverse bar placed through the long bars below the glass. The two ends of the sash should be made of sound timber, 3 inches wide at the top and 4 inches wide at the bottom end, mortised to receive the ends of the sash bars, and with a tenon at the ends to pass through the side pieces, which should be 2½ inches wide.

A New Apple Country.

The province of New Brunswick is a newcomer in the apple-raising competition. At a recent Canadian apple show New Brunswick had on exhibition 60 barrels, 656 boxes and 1,422 plates of the leading market varieties. Until lately the apple industry has received little attention in the province, but the department of agriculture has taken improved methods of cultivation, and it is now predicted that New Brunswick will become a great apple country. There is an immense area of cheap land, and the climate seems to be favorable for the fall and winter varieties grown in New England and the middle states.

Boys in Corn Contest.

Five thousand boys entered the corn growing contest of Virginia last year. Corn growing clubs are organized by the superintendents and school teachers in the various counties. Each boy was given a measured acre and received instruction from an agent of the agricultural department.

REGULATING THE STOMACH

That Important Organ Works According to the Quality of the Blood That Is Furnished to It.

There is the most intimate relation between the condition of the blood and the activity of the stomach. The blood depends upon the stomach for a large part of its nourishment; while every act of digestion, from the time the food enters the stomach until it is digested and assimilated by the blood, needs plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. The stomach works only according to the quality of the blood.

The most common cause of indigestion is anæmia, or lack of blood. Indeed there is not a single disturbance of the health of the body nor any form of exhaustion or lowered vitality, that may not lead to stomach trouble. Disordered blood is the one common cause of indigestion. Thin, impure blood weakens the muscles of the stomach and lessens the product of the glands which furnish the digestive fluids.

Nothing will more promptly cure indigestion than plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People increase the red corpuscles, the oxygen-carriers of the blood, until the blood is rich and red. A thorough trial of these pills gives a hearty appetite, perfect digestion, strength and health.

Mrs. Emma M. Mayne, of No. 635 Second avenue, Clinton, Iowa, says: "I had just worked myself out bringing up a family of five children and, while in this run-down condition, I took sick with some kind of stomach trouble. I doctored with several physicians and saw a specialist in Chicago but received little help. I could not eat anything with relish and could not sleep. I would have deathly sick spells and would vomit. I had terrible headaches and dizzy spells. I got very thin and my friends thought I was going into consumption. I doctored for a year or so without help. While visiting a niece she told me that she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, so I tried them. They soon helped me and a few boxes entirely cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

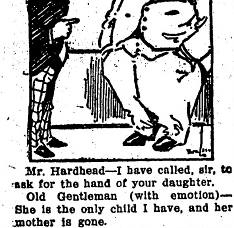
NOT AN OBJECTION.



Mr. Hardhead—I have called, sir, to ask for the hand of your daughter.

Old Gentleman (with emotion)—She is the only child I have, and her mother is gone.

Mr. Hardhead (hastily)—Oh, that's no objection, I assure you.

Cold Welcome.

A clergyman in a small town was deploring the fact that none of the couples that came in from the country to be married stopped at his house for the purpose.

"Well, brother," said the man addressed, "what can you expect with that big sign on the tree there: 'Five dollars fine for hitching here?'"—Youth's Companion.

HARD TO DROP

But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it.

"About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum'!

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so we returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ills and take up Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe.

CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

His hand remained on Coast's shoulder, obnoxious but imperative. "And then," he continued after a slight pause, "my fingers remember anything they've ever felt. Let me run my hands over a man's face once, and I'll pick him out of a dozen any time afterwards. Like this."

Before Coast could object Blackstock had brought both hands into play upon his face; lightly, softly and gently the ten blunt, hard tips of his stubby fingers moved over Coast's features, tapping, pressing, gliding on.

It was all but insufferable; Coast was conscious that the blood burned in his face like fire, that his heart was pounding—so loud, it seemed, that the other must be aware of it. Revolted, he almost choked at this familiarity of contact which he must needs endure, from the man of all men he had the greatest cause to hate, loathe and despise. He dug his nails into his palms in an effort to enforce submission. Blackstock's face was within two feet of his own; a satiric smile (he fancied) rested upon those crudely modeled, animal features; he realized suddenly that it was the face of a Satyr, simply, naively sensual, as soulless as its lightless eyes. And a vinuous breath offended his nostrils; his own breath he held, clenching his teeth. . . .

"Now I know you."

He could think of nothing to say but: "Oh?" It was with difficulty that he succeeded in enunciating that.

The hands moved on, down over his shoulders, and felt of his arms.

"Hard!" commented Blackstock. "You've got strength, haven't you? Not as great as mine, though; you'd hardly realize how immensely strong I am. See now!" His hands moved swiftly back to Coast's throat and girdled it with a collar of iron. "Do you realize I could easily squeeze your breath out of your body. I could!"

Coast's face explored the face above him. Its smile was gone. Something ran cold along his spine, and of a sudden he was without emotion, quite calm and collected.

"But you won't, you know," he said easily; "that is, you wouldn't if you knew my right hand in my pocket was pointing a pistol directly at your heart. . . . Would you?"

Perhaps the fact that he had merely stated the truth was responsible for his coolness. . . . He noted the instinctive movement of the blind eyes, as if they sought to see if it was true; and he thought: Habit is strong.

Raising his left hand, he grasped Blackstock's right by the wrist and removed it with a certain firmness. The other hand released him an instant later, and the man stood back with a short laugh.

"But you wouldn't have fired?"

"Not any sooner than you'd have tried to strangle me."

"Of course I'd no such idea—"

"Of course not; but you shouldn't have suggested it. You made me nervous."

For a moment it was as if the mask had been dropped, as if they openly acknowledged one another as implacable enemies. And again Coast remarked that Blackstock quivered as he had when surprised, an hour before; a ripple of tensed muscles, hardly to be detected, seemed to shake him from head to foot—and was gone in a twinkling, while the hard smile reappeared on the Satyr's features.

"Do you really tote a gun, Handyside?"

"Always," Coast rejoined briefly.

"Why—up here—?"

"You never can tell what's going to happen."

"Perhaps you're right." Blackstock conceded the point graciously. "I don't mind, but you really ought not to take a joke so seriously. However, . . . I'm full of sleep and you must be. . . . John—hat, cane." One of the servants brought them instantly. "G'd-night, Handyside."

Blackstock hesitated an instant, then got his bearings and found the back door with unerring accuracy. On the stoop he paused long enough to say: "We'll get together after breakfast and talk business;" and the blackness received him.

Mystified, Coast waited, staring at the spot where he had last seen the man, until one of the Chinamen mildly suggested that his room was ready. He followed the fellow stupidly, preoccupied, his mind ranging far in futile speculation as to the riddle of Blackstock's conduct. Long after he was left alone in the room that had been Power's he sat on the edge of the dingy bed, his gaze fixed upon the reflection of the lamp's flame in the window panel—absorbed in the enigma.

He could not rid himself of the impression that an inarticulate menace lurked beneath Blackstock's apparently unsuspicious reception of him.

Was insanity the explanation? Was the man in reality a homicidal maniac, at whose intellect the lust to slay ate like a cancer? . . . But in such case, would he have delegated to another the assassination of Power?

Every Nerve on the Qui Vive.

Did he or did he not suspect? Did that sudden slip of the mask signify that he had merely allowed himself to appear to be deceived and was but waiting to deliver some telling stroke in retaliation?

How much has Coast to apprehend, what to guard against?

To this latter question his every instinct answered in chorus: Everything. He dared leave no stone unturned to safeguard himself—that he might remain able to protect Katherine.

It came to him that it was not unlikely he had been left in that lonely cottage with the three Chinese that they might quietly make away with him while he slept.

With this in mind he took a more detailed inventory of his surroundings; and found them hopelessly exposed.

Unquestionably he would have been safer in the open; but the storm was now at the top of its fury. Sheets of water were sluicing the house as if cast from some gigantic bucket.

Danger within seemed very much preferable to misery without. More than that, if Blackstock had planned an attempt upon his life during the night, Coast might as well know it; for he was armed and unafraid, and he who knows what to fear is doubly armed.

Having wedged a chair beneath the knob of each door, he placed the lamp upon the table, turning it low that its scanty store of oil might last the night, and sat down on the bed, the pillow at his back, Appleyard's pistol ready at his side.

Insensibly as the dead hours lagged marked by no disturbance foreign to the storm, his weariness bore heavily upon him. His thoughts blurred into a chaotic jumble of incoherencies. He nodded, drowsed with chin on breast, roused with a start when some unusually violent squall swooped over the island, drowsed again, and in the end slipped over upon his side and slept the sleep of the exhausted, profound and dreamless. . . .

CHAPTER XV.

Coast awakened with a gasp, jumping to his feet as if to the peremptory summons of a subconscious alarm-clock. Such, in fact, was more or less the case; he who sleeps upon the thought of danger is apt to waken with that thought predominant.

A moment gone everything had been densely dark, with that narcotic blackness which characterizes the slumbers of the overworked and overwrought. Now in a twinkling he found himself intensely conscious, in the middle of the floor, pistol in hand, every nerve on the qui vive, every muscle tense. . . .

Gradually he realized that his nerves must have tricked him, that the hair-trigger of his suspended faculties must have been pulled by some common but unexpected noise. The room was bright with garish daylight; at the doors the chairs were in place, as he had left them; there was not a sound to be heard in the house.

Very stealthily he opened the hall door and looked out. From the silence within doors, there was no one else astir. He went out and back to the kitchen, finding it empty. After some momentary hesitation he returned to his room, found a towel and took it with him out into the open.

He went quickly down through the Cold Lairs to the beach. The Echo was gone, but this did not surprise him; it had been Appleyard's purpose to heave anchor and get away as soon as the gale showed signs of slackening. Inside the sheltering spit a sturdy little catboat was dancing crazily at its mooring, but it was evidently deserted, and Coast rightly guessed that the vessel belonged to Blackstock, that its tender was the boat which Power had been accused of stealing—principally, no doubt, to allay the suspicions of Katherine; some means of accounting for the man's disappearance had necessarily to be invented. The boat was, of course, nowhere to be seen; doubtless Blackstock had caused it to be carried up and secreted in one of the abandoned dwellings, or in some recess beneath the bluffs to the west and south.

It was in the shelter of the westerly bluff that Coast stripped and took to the water. Here, as all round the island, the beach shelved boldly, the surf breaking close inshore.

Scrubbing his flesh aglow, he dressed quickly, tingling with the exhilaration of his recent contest, every trace of fatigue and drowsiness washed clean away. A sense of life and well-being ran like quicksilver through his veins; he could have sung aloud or whistled but for the sobering thought, never far beneath the surface of his consciousness, of his responsibility. With Katherine to guard and care for, with Blackstock to watch and guard against and circumvent, there could be little room for cheerfulness in his humor.

Instead of returning the way he had come, an impulse moved him to scale the bluff, which at this point presented not too steep an acclivity.

As he continued along the sole, approaching the heel of what has been likened to a crude sketch of a child's shoe, Coast remarked the crumbling stone walls of what had apparently once been a rude summer house and observatory set atop the highest hillock to seaward. But he had drawn quite near to it before he descried a hem of skirt whipping round a corner of a half-fallen wall. He quickened his steps and took her suddenly unawares as she stood, half-sheltered from the breeze and wholly invisible from the body of the island, her back to the weather-beaten and lichened stones, her gaze leveled to seaward in somber reverie.

Why Willie Was Late.

"Why, Willie, what kept you so late? Did you have to stay after school? I'm afraid you have been naughty."

"No, ma'am, I ain't never naughty. Bobby Jones was licked fer bein' naughty, an' I stayed after school to hear him yell."

NO OBJECTIONS FROM TONY

"Lovable Little Chap" Probably Would Not Have Minded a Succession of Tunnels.

Being Sunday evening, and the races having taken place that afternoon, the trains were packed. In one compartment a little boy had been standing all the way, but before the journey had proceeded much farther Mrs. Jones kindly took him on her knee.

"Were you very frightened, dear, as we passed throught the tunnel?" the gentle lady asked.

"Not much," replied the little boy shyly.

"But I thought you trembled a little as I kissed you," remarked Mrs. Jones, who was not even middle-aged, yet. "And what's your name?"

"Tony," came the answer.

Then you're a very lovable little chap! And how old are you?"

"Twenty-five, ma'am."

And Tony Spurs, the lightweight jockey, slid to the floor to the accompaniment of a piercing scream.—Answers.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Curative Agent.

"Do you think an ice cold plunge is good for people?"

"Well," replied the indolent person, "I fell in while skating and I must admit that the fright cured me of hiccoughs."

COLDS AND CHILLS BRING KIDNEY ILLS

Colds, chills and grip strain the kidneys and start backache, urinary disorders and uric acid troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills are very useful in the raw spring months. They stop backache and urinary disorders, keep the kidneys well and prevent colds from settling on the kidneys. Mrs. E. A. Bennett, Johnson Ave., Los Gatos, Cal., says: "If I took cold or overworked, I had such severe pains through my back, I could hardly move. My limbs ached until I scarcely knew what I was about, and headaches and dizziness distressed me. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely relieved. It is over two years since I have had any kidney trouble to speak of."

OUTLAWS ENTRENCH IN THE MOUNTAINS

ALLEN GANG BEHIND NATURAL FORTRESS READY TO BATTLE SOLDIERS.

HIDDEN IN DEVIL'S DEN

Wounded Hillsville Court Clerk Enacts Tragedy for the Spectators—Total Deaths Now Five.

Hillsville, Va., March 19.—Two thousand feet above sea level, among the crags and caves of the Blue Ridge mountains, the Allen gang, who demonstrated their contempt of constituted law by a massacre of the judge, the prosecutor and the sheriff of the Carroll county court, continue to defy capture.

The search by a posse of 75 detectives and citizen volunteers demonstrated that unless the militia is sent here to begin a systematic siege of the hiding places of the outlaws, they may never be brought to answer to the indictments for murder. For such a plan a camping site was selected by representatives of Governor Mann. The formal arraignment of the prisoners is scheduled here for March 26, but it is likely to be postponed.

Those who know the paths and passes of the highlands and the points of vantage from which outlaws could ward off an attacking force with least hurt to themselves say that the Allens unquestionably are concealed behind the overhanging precipices of Devils Den, half way between here and Mount Airy, N. C. There, with provisions and ammunition, of which it is said they have plenty, an attacking force would find the aim of the Allens deadly. Some think it may be necessary to dynamite the mountain citadels.

Preacher for Death.

Quiet prevailed in Hillsville Sunday. The village pastor preached in favor of capital punishment at all times, and there was no mistaking who he meant.

Dexter Goad, clerk of the court, with a bullet in his left cheek and a bandage across his face, showed the folks just how it happened. He rehearsed the scene with vivid detail, even to placing the bullet scarred chairs, which were occupied by Judge Massie, Sheriff Webb and Commonwealth's Attorney Foster. A row of bullet holes, low on the right hand wall, were added evidence of the tragedy.

Enacts Court Scene.

A shattered rail in front of the judge's bench showed the effect of the fusillade. Clerk Goad showed how Attorney Foster, after being fatally shot, staggered and dropped his head upon a sheepskin volume of the law.

Andrew Howlet and Stuart Worrell, both bystanders wounded at Thursday's assassination, rested easily. One has a bullet in the lung and the other was shot in his side. Juror Columbus Kane, who was shot in the abdomen and is most seriously injured of all, may die, which would bring the death list to six.

25 DEAD IN TEXAS EXPLOSION

BOILER OF LOCOMOTIVE IN SAN ANTONIO BLOWN UP.

Majority of Victims Are Southern Pacific Strikers—Buildings Are Demolished.

San Antonio, March 19.—Twenty-five men are known to have been killed, many more injured, and several buildings were wrecked when the boiler of a locomotive exploded in the local yards of the Southern Pacific railroad. The roundhouse and copper shops practically were demolished and many men working in them were hurt by falling walls.

The army hospital corps here was rushed to the yards and police, ambulances and Y. M. C. A. workers were organized into rescue bands to dig out the dead and try to save the lives of the wounded. So mangled were some of the victims that there seemed no hope of piecing the fragments of their bodies together sufficiently to identify them.

The victims were largely men who had been employed as strikebreakers. Strikebreakers have been working at the Southern Pacific shops ever since the shop men's strike began several months ago.

The locomotive was standing in the yards near the shops and the explosion came without warning. Parts of the roundhouse collapsed and several small buildings in the shop enclosure were wrecked, including part of the machine shops. Engines in the roundhouse were smashed as if hit with huge mallets. The roundhouse caught fire. The jacket of the exploded locomotive dropped between two houses on Duval street, several blocks distant, while the tender was hurled several hundred feet and twisted into a big shapeless chunk of steel.

A majority of the men who were killed were from northern and western states.

THE MARKETS

Duluth, March 19.—Wheat, May, $1.06; July, $1.06¾; No. 1 northern, $1.06¼; No. 1 durum, $1.06¾.

South St. Paul, March 19.—Cattle—Steers, $4.75@5.40; cows, $3.50@5.25; calves, $3.75@6.75; hogs, $6.25@6.65; sheep and lambs, $3.50@7.00.

Chicago Grain Markets.

Chicago, March 19.—Strike conditions in England with prospect of wheat shipments being delayed amde the cereal here today bulge in price. The advance brought out free commission selling and resulted in a sharp backset which, however, proved to be only temporary. The bulls were encouraged by the fact that crop advices from India were less favorable and that there was promise of a fairly good decrease in the United States visible supply total. On the other hand Northwestern receipts were large and the weather auspicious throughout the winter wheat belt. The opening was ⅛c to ⅜@½c higher. May started at $1.01⅜@1.01⅝, a gain of ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c, reacted to $1.00⅞@1.01, and then rallied to $1.01¼@1.01⅜.

Additional gains resulted from persistent buying attributed in part to the presence of an Italian fleet near the Dardanelles. The close was firm with May at $1.01⅝@1.01¾, a net advance of ½c.

Fine weather weakened corn. Strength of wheat though proved more than an offset. May opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 69½@69⅝c, touched 69¼@69⅜c; and ascended to 69¾@69⅞c.

A further advance followed on account of shorts covering. The close was strong at 70⅝c for May, just a cent over Saturday night.

Plentiful offerings kept oats depressed. May started a shade to ¼c off at 52½c to 52⅝@52¾c, sank to 52⅜c and recovered to 52¾c.

Hog products suffered from the bearish influence of a decline at the yards. There was just a fair trade. Initial sales were varied from 5@7½c down to a shade advance, with July options $16.30 for pork, $9.60 for lard and $9.05@9.07½ for ribs.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, March 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 27,000; market steady to 10c lower; beeves, $5@8.75; Texas steers, $4.60@5.90; western steers, $5@6.90; stockers and feeders, $4@6.20; cows and heifers, $2.25@6.60; calves, $5.75@8.25.

Hog—Receipts, 53,000; market 5c to 10c lower than Saturday's best time; light, $6.60@6.92½; mixed, $6.65@6.95; heavy, $6.65@6.97½; rough, $6.65@6.75; pigs, $4.75@6.45; bulk of sales, $6.80@6.95.

Sheep — Receipts, 20,000; market strong; native, $3.75@5.55; western $4.25@5.60; yearlings, $5@6.40; lambs native, $5.25@7.50; western, $5.75@7.60.

Cement Talk No. 6

Newspapers print nearly every day the story of some fire disaster involving the complete destruction of great property values and sometimes the loss of human lives. The annual fire losses of the United States are measured by the millions; in fact, it is stated that over two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of property was wiped out by fire in the United States last year. While it is true that the precautions to prevent fire and the fire fighting systems are often inadequate, the main trouble lies in flimsy non-fireproof building construction. Experience has proved that fireproof construction is both practicable and economical. In some industries fireproof building is compelled by law. Reinforced concrete has come to the front as the most important agent in building against fire. The use of cement in building is becoming more and more common, due to its fireproofness, durability and economy. When building anything from the back porch steps to an office building, concrete construction may be safely adopted. The use of Universal Portland Cement in the concrete will insure cement of the best quality possible to manufacture. We handle Universal.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Duluth Herald: We'd almost forgotten about her, but somehow that North Dakota primary brings Ballinger's "cow on the horizon" to mind once more. Bossy sure has grown some. She,s big enough now to occupy about two horizons.

The Anoka Herald says that if the men who oppose Eberhart and his crowd get together with the Roosevelt followers in Minnesota and unite on one man, whether he be Lee, Gordon, or some other man, that man will give the administration some sleepless nights.

Figures just issued by the government show that the world's production of sugar for the year 1910-11 was the greatest in several years by almost two million tons. We can easily remember how the sugar trust last fall, alleging a shortage, levied a heavy tribute from the consumers by boosting the prices skyward. Is it any wonder that the people love the trusts and the people who try to protect them?

Roosevelt's alleged wonderful popularity in the west was given rather a severe jolt this week by North Dakota. At the primaries held Tuesday LaFollette received a plurality of about 12,000 votes more than Col. Roosevelt. One Wm. H. Taft "also ran" and received about 1,000 votes out of a total of about 40,000 cast by republicans. This result surely is a hint, at least, of how the plain people of the west admire Taft.

Notice of Contest.

Department of the Interior. United States Land Office, Crookston, Minnesota, March 4, 1912.

To Ebbe Julius Olson, whose record address Thief River Falls, Minnesota, and whose present address is unknown Contestee:

You are hereby notified that Frank Coppay who gives Holt, Minn., as his post-office address, did on February 26, 1912, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead Entry, serial No. 06026, made April 25 h, 1911, for Southeast quarter (SE¼) Section 4, township 155 N., Range 41 W., 5th principal Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that you have never established a residence upon said land and have at no time since making said entry, improved and cultivated said land or any part thereof, as required by law, and that you have abandoned the said land.

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be cancelled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person, proof of such service must be either the said contestant's written acknowledgment of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the postoffice to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.

You should state in your answer the name of the postoffice to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

PRAYER FOR A PREACHER

Peroration, After Long and Fervent Prayer, Must Have Made Newcomer Wince.

After a session of the New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal church the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Wilson, pastor of the First church in Yonkers, says that a certain charge on the Newburg district was left to be supplied with a minister by the district superintendent, no appointment having been made by the bishop. For several Sundays the little church was without a preacher, but finally one arrived. In expectation of his coming the congregation was larger than usual.

Sitting in the pulpit with the new arrival was an elderly local preacher. He was called upon to make the opening prayer. Responding, he made a fervent appeal, remarkable for its extreme length and its peroration, which ended with these words: "And now, O Lord, we pray thee to abundantly bless the superintendent of our Sunday school and the Sunday school itself. Bless all who may be sick, bereaved or otherwise afflicted. Pour out thy blessings on this church, and may it prosper. Bless, we pray thee, thy servant who will minister unto us today. Give him strength to do thy will and may he preach to us a sermon that we have never heard before."

WHEN EVERYTHING WENT.

"Politics is getting too finicky," declared the old-timer. "Things were different in my day."

He was encouraged to proceed.

"One time when I was in politics in a certain city we wanted to make a certain man health officer."

"Yes."

"But he wasn't a doctor, and some meddler dug up an old law which made it necessary for the health officer to be a doctor."

"What did you do?"

"Why, we had the legislature pass an act making our man a doctor. It was simple enough."

WEIGHED BOOK WITH CARE

Review of Life of Napoleon Wins Young College Graduate Raise in Salary.

In the Dana days on the New York Sun a young Cornell graduate was put at work reviewing books. One of the first books handed him was a massive "Life of Napoleon," by a college professor.

The Cornell man had specialized on Napoleon at his university, and thought rather poorly of this new biographer of Napoleon—who was a professor in another university, by the way. He glanced casually over the illustrations and wrote his review as follows:

"'Life of Napoleon,' by Professor So-and-So. This work weighs nine pounds."

Mr. Dana read the review and sent for the young man.

"Did you write this review?" he growled.

"Yes, sir."

"Did you read the book?" growled Mr. Dana again, fiercer than before.

"No, sir; I weighed it."

"That'll do!" growled Mr. Dana again.

Then he sent word down to the cashier to raise the reviewer's salary.—Saturday Evening Post.

HAGGARD'S FIRST SUCCESS.

The incident which inspired Sir Henry Rider Haggard's first successful venture in authorship is interesting. He and one of his brothers were riding in the train together from Norfolk to London. He bought "Treasure Island" to read in the train, finished it before reaching Liverpool street and remarked as he dropped it into his bag: "Well, I think I could write a better boys' story than that."

"If you think it's so easy as all that, why don't you try?" aked his skeptical relative. "I will" he rejoined; and he did.

A few weeks afterward he had finished "King Solomon's Mines," of which 100,000 copies were sold during the first five years.

HER FOND HOPE.

Thomas Mott Osborne, a Democratic politician of New York, was talking about political organization. "Good men," he said, "are rare. They come high. There is a tendency to accept as workers all and sundry who volunteer, but this tendency is as foolish as the logic of the smoker's wife. 'Hereafter,' said a smoker, 'I prefer to buy my own cigars, darling. You are very good to volunteer to do my cigar buying, but, really, this bag at twelve for a quarter is a little too cheap.' 'I know twelve for a quarter is cheap,' his wife answered, 'but I thought there'd be one or two good ones in the twelve.'"

HAD A RIGHT TO DANCE.

The interesting question as to whether a young man can forbid his fiancee to dance with others was recently raised in a breach of promise case in Berlin. An affianced young woman, fond of dancing, went to balls without her fiance. The latter informed her that she must give up dancing. She promised, but her love of dancing was stronger than her will. The young man then broke off the engagement. She sued him for breach of promise and won the day, the court finding that, though she had shown a lack of tact in dancing against her fiance's wish, there was nothing against her conduct.

Alfred Larson was down to Crookston last week and started a contest for a quarter of section 33, in Mud Lake township.

Engebret Moe was in yesterday from his claim south of Mud Lake. The roads being rather bad, he left his team at home and made the trip on foot.

The Heiser family left Thursday for Albany, Or. where they intend to make their future home. Their friends here wish them every success and hope that Mr. Heiser may be benefited in health by the change.

A baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs C. Schwartz on Saturday last. For a time both mother and child were in a critical condition, and the little one passed away on Tuesday. The mother is now reported as progressing quite favorably.

Tony Carlson was down to Thief River Falls the first of the week to help with a rush of work at the Press office. A rather funny coincidence was that Mr. Carlson was called upon to set up a sale bill for a rival merchant here in Holt, who had sent the work quietly to a Thief River Falls house, which in turn had it set on the machine at the Press office by the one particular person who, it would seem, a frantic effort was being made to keep it hidden from.

Homestead Laws Amended

A special from washington yesterday says:

"Settlers on Indian lands, as well as those on the public lands generally, in Minnesota and the Dakotas will be able to secure patents for their entries within three years after entry, upon the approval of the amended homestead act, which had previously passed the senate and was acted upon favorably by the house yesterday. This applies to existing entries as well as those made hereafter.

Under the terms of the bill, with ordinary conditions of weather, settlers will not be obliged to begin actual residence upon the lands for six months after they make entry. In case of unusual weather conditions, such as long and severe winters, floods, etc., they will not be obliged to take up actual residence for a year after entry is filed. This twelve month provision was secured by Representative Miller, of Duluth, who urged it in behalf of the settlers in northern Minnesota. An important factor of the legislation to Minnesota settlers is that permitting settlers being away from the lands five months in each of the three years of residence."

Cement Talk No. 6

Newspapers print nearly every day the story of some fire disaster involving the complete destruction of great property values and sometimes the loss of human lives. The annual fire losses of the United States are measured by the millions; in fact, it is stated that over two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of property was wiped out by fire in the United States last year. While it is true that the precautions to prevent fire and the fire fighting systems are often inadequate, the main trouble lies in flimsy non-fireproof building construction. Experience has proved that fireproof construction is both practicable and economical. In some industries fireproof building is compelled by law. Reinforced concrete has come to the front as the most important agent in building against fire. The use of cement in building is becoming more and more common, due to its fireproofness, durability and economy. When building anything from the back porch steps to an office building, concrete construction may be safely adopted. The use of Universal Portland Cement in the concrete will insure cement of the best quality possible to manufacture. We handle Universal.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

Duluth Herald: We'd almost forgotten about her, but somehow that North Dakota primary brings Ballinger's "cow on the horizon" to mind once more. Bossy sure has grown some. She,s big enough now to occupy about two horizons.

The Anoka Herald says that if the men who oppose Eberhart and his crowd get together with the Roosevelt followers in Minnesota and unite on one man, whether he be Lee, Gordon, or some other man, that man will give the administration some sleepless nights.

Figures just issued by the government show that the world's production of sugar for the year 1910-11 was the greatest in several years by almost two million tons. We can easily remember how the sugar trust last fall, alleging a shortage, levied a heavy tribute from the consumers by boosting the prices skyward. Is it any wonder that the people love the trusts and the people who try to protect them?

Roosevelt's alleged wonderful popularity in the west was given rather a severe jolt this week by North Dakota. At the primaries held Tuesday LaFollette received a plurality of about 12,000 votes more than Col. Roosevelt. One Wm. H. Taft "also ran" and received about 1,000 votes out of a total of about 40,000 cast by republicans. This result surely is a hint, at least, of how the plain people of the west admire Taft.

There will be services in Ringbo schoolhouse at 11 o'clock on the 31st inst, Palm Sunday, and at Holt at 3 P. M. the same day. All welcome.

The Young Peoples Society will hold their meeting Sunday evening the 31st inst, at the Holt Mercantile Co's store building at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Silbaugh will entertain.

REV. M. B. ORDAHL,
Lutheran Pastor.

Alfred Larson was down to Crookston last week and started a contest for a quarter of section 33, in Mud Lake township.

Engebret Moe was in yesterday from his claim south of Mud Lake. The roads being rather bad, he left his team at home and made the trip on foot.

The Heiser family left Thursday for Albany, Or. where they intend to make their future home. Their friends here wish them every success and hope that Mr. Heiser may be benefited in health by the change.

A baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs C. Schwartz on Saturday last. For a time both mother and child were in a critical condition, and the little one passed away on Tuesday. The mother is now reported as progressing quite favorably.

Tony Carlson was down to Thief River Falls the first of the week to help with a rush of work at the Press office. A rather funny coincidence was that Mr. Carlson was called upon to set up a sale bill for a rival merchant here in Holt, who had sent the work quietly to a Thief River Falls house, which in turn had it set on the machine at the Press office by the one particular person who, it would seem, a frantic effort was being made to keep it hidden from.

Homestead Laws Amended

A special from washington yesterday says:

"Settlers on Indian lands, as well as those on the public lands generally, in Minnesota and the Dakotas will be able to secure patents for their entries within three years after entry, upon the approval of the amended homestead act, which had previously passed the senate and was acted upon favorably by the house yesterday. This applies to existing entries as well as those made hereafter.

Under the terms of the bill, with ordinary conditions of weather, settlers will not be obliged to begin actual residence upon the lands for six months after they make entry. In case of unusual weather conditions, such as long and severe winters, floods, etc., they will not be obliged to take up actual residence for a year after entry is filed. This twelve month provision was secured by Representative Miller, of Duluth, who urged it in behalf of the settlers in northern Minnesota. An important factor of the legislation to Minnesota settlers is that permitting settlers being away from the lands five months in each of the three years of residence."

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age, How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

"Now I can do as much work as any woman of my age in the county, thanks to the benefit I have received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARTHA L. HOLLOWAY, Odd, Va.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A YOUTHFUL DEGENERATE

EUGENE THOMAS TELLS AUTHORITIES HE SLEW MAN IN LONELY CABIN NEAR MORA.

DIME NOVELS BLAMED

Sixteen-Year-Old Lad Gives Details of Terrible Crime.—Boy Says He Was Rifling Cabin When Owner Interrupted.

Minneapolis, March 26.—In the village at Grasston, Kenabec county, a 15-year-old Minneapolis boy told how he had killed an unarmed man in cold blood. He related how, interrupted in the robbery of a Kanabec settler's cabin by the approach of the settler, he drew a revolver, waited the approach of the settler, deliberately shot him down on the cabin threshold, rifled the pockets of the dead man and left the cabin. He told the story unconcernedly, as a 16-year-old boy might tell of killing his first rabbit.

The boy was Eugene Thomas, who gave himself up to the authorities in Minneapolis. The man he killed was R. N. Winters, who lived in a settler's cabin near the village of Mora.

Men who heard Thomas' narrative, the county attorney and the sheriff, men whose business is dealing with crime, said that the story of the boy, a confession of approximately 6,000 words, is a document which has no counterpart in the history of the state. It is the story of a boy's career in a big city; a story of yellow-backed novels, of the bandit plays of childhood; of a boy's longing for the career of an outlaw; of visions of robbery and wealth; of the first boyish prank; of the steps which led to the final tragedy; of a man's death and a boy's arrest on a charge of cold-blooded murder.

The boy who told the story and who told it only after he had calmly looked at pictures of the cabin in which the settler was murdered and of the settler lying dead on the floor, slept peacefully on a cot in the village jail.

The likeless body of R. N. Winters was found on the threshold of his cabin. Revolver bullets were in his head. Winters had been a recluse. In a corner in the cabin the authorities found a boy's gray mitten.

Three miles away, on the road toward Mora, a farmer said that a boy who wore one gray mitten came to his house and asked for food and for a team to drive him to Mora. The boy got the food, but not the team. He ate heartily and started down the road on foot. That night a boy who wore one gray mitten took a train in Mora for Minneapolis.

Eugene Thomas was known in Mora, and he had been visiting at his uncle's home ten miles out on the Wahkon road. The uncle said that on Friday before the murder he had told Eugene that he ought to go home, that the boy had talked of going west and had boasted of his misdeeds in Minneapolis.

He told his relatives that a neighbor in Minneapolis had a fine dog, that one day he went to the neighbor's barn, tied the dog up, hung it to a rafter by its feet and watched it die.

The Minneapolis police were notified to look out for Eugene Thomas and when a boy friend told him he was wanted in connection with the Kanabec county murder, the boy went home, talked the situation over with his father, came downtown and gave himself up. He refused to discuss the murder.

Beginning with the time when he was a youngster in short trousers Eugene Thomas told of his life. He said he had read the cheap novels of the west and had resolved to become a bandit. He told how the determination to leave home grew upon him, how he finally purchased two revolvers and left Minneapolis. He had visited with his uncle at Christmas time and he decided to stop at his uncle's homestead on his way west.

The boy told of his quarrel with his uncle and his wanderings until he arrived at the settler's cabin last Sunday. Then he told how he determined to rob the cabin, how he entered it and opened the trunk, how he heard a man approaching, how he drew his revolvers and stood waiting, how, when the door opened, he fired, how his victim fell on the floor; how he rifled the settler's pockets, left the cabin and made his way to Mora.

The boy is charged with murder in the first degree and the Kanabec county grand jury will consider the case.

FOR SCIATIC RHEUMATISM

Try the Treatment That Cured This Pronounced Case in Minneapolis After Other Treatments Failed.

Sciatica is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. Its origin is generally rheumatic and is the direct result of taking cold. For this reason the disease is commonly known as "sciatic rheumatism." That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure this disease is shown by numerous cases like that of Mrs. J. B. Hansen, of No. 221 Twentieth Ave., So., Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"A few years ago following an attack of the grip I was taken with sciatica. For six years I suffered untold agony and thought it would be a blessing to me if I could only die. There were sharp, shooting pains in both of my limbs and my shoulders and arms were affected also but not so severely. If I moved about quickly, the pain would catch me so that I had to scream. My limbs would swell until I could hardly walk. I also had a terrible dull pain in my back which was often unbearable. I was confined to bed for a week or two at a time. While suffering from the sciatica I was further run-down by weakness common to women of my age.

"I received so little relief from the doctor's medicine that I became discouraged and quit it. My husband urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as he had read how they had cured cases like mine. I felt better after I had taken the pills a short time but took several boxes until I was certain I was cured. I give this statement of my cure thinking that other sufferers may be helped as I was through using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills succeeds where other treatments fail because it is based on the sound medical principle that the health of the nerves depends on pure, red blood.

Every person who is interested in the home treatment of nervous disorders should send for a new edition of our booklet entitled, "Diseases of the Nervous System, Their Nature, Symptoms and Treatment." Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Narber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

44 Bu. to the Acre
is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.
The Silver Cup
at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.
Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

At a little party John T. McCutcheon consented to do a little impromptu chalk talking, with the presidential possibilities for his subject. McCutcheon had made several hits. One of the party, chuckling, leaned over to another, a Democrat. "Pretty good, isn't it?" he asked. "What do you think of his execution?"

"I think it would be a darned good thing," replied the Democrat.

Frame-Up.

One day Freddie and his sister sneaked surreptitiously into the pantry on a foraging expedition. The only good things to eat they could find were some cookies and a bowl of whipped cream.

"Let's take the cookies," said his sister.

"I'd rather have the cookies myself," replied Freddie, "but if we took them we'd be sure to get caught. The only safe thing to do is to take the cream and then shut the cat up in the pantry."

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum.

"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was.

"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

It was as if she had been expecting him; she seemed not at all surprised. But there was no light of welcome in her look, nor any trace of welcome in her greeting as he stopped before her, hat in hand and heart in his throat, with something in his bearing that called to mind a child convicted of transgression and pleading for suspension of judgment.

"I came out here to think," she said —"at least to try to think. But I hoped that if you saw me you would follow."

"I'm glad," he said; "though I didn't know you were here. It's hardly likely we'll have so good a chance to talk again."

"Yes," she admitted simply. There was a little catch in her voice and he fancied her lips quivered like the lips of a tired child as she looked away from him, seeking again the sight of the sea as if she drew from it some solace, some sorely needed strength against her trials. "We must talk, of course. . . . I have been trying all night to think . . . but everything seems so. . . ."

She left the sentence incomplete, raising her hands to press them against her temples and then dropping them with a gesture of utter weariness.

"Oh," she cried, "why did you come back? You promised, you went away, and I—I was sorry for you and prayed you might find happiness, Garrett. You promised, and—you came back—came back like a ghost to haunt me with memories and regrets." Her voice rose to a pitch of wildness. "Sometimes, last night, I thought that surely you must be a ghost—that you had been executed, killed and buried, and were come back to be his punishment and mine, and mine!"

"His punishment—his?" he echoed. "Then, Katherine, then you do believe—!"

"Ah, how do I know? What do I believe—what can I believe? I don't know. I can't think right; it's all so —so terrible." Her tone fell to a low pitch of fatigue, dejection and bewilderment. She leaned heavily against the wall, watching the sullen, interminable succession of the surges. "You sowed doubt in my mind and fear in my heart when you bade me weigh what I once knew of the good in you against what I have learned of him. I tried—so hard!—to do so justly and still believe you the guilty one. . . . You swept the ground from under me with arguments, your attitude, your explanations; and though they were your unsupported words. . . . I never knew you to lie to me, Garrett, and I couldn't, can't believe you would bring me a lie to torture me, just for revenge. . . . You made me think, and—at times I feared I should go mad, and then again I was afraid I wouldn't . . ." She turned suddenly to him and grasping his arms, lifting frantic, piteous eyes to his. "Oh, Garrett, Garrett!" she pleaded, half hysterically, "tell me you lied, tell me it isn't true, tell me it was you—!"

He shook his head sorrowfully, and with a short dry sob she released him and fell back against the wall, shaken and trembling.

"If," he said, slowly—"if I thought it would make you happy, if I believed that any good of any sort could come of it to you, Katherine, if I could even think it safe, I would lie—I'd lie with a clear conscience and tell you it was I who killed Van Tuyl. I've taken time to think it over and I've tried to think straight, to think the way that would be best for you, and . . . Well, I've come back."

"But why?" she repeated abruptly. "Why? What good can you do? Can you lift this weight from my heart, can you right the wrong to yourself, by being here? Can you bring Van Tuyl back to life or make my—the man I married less than a murderer—?"

"I came to protect you; you were alone and friendless."

"He would not harm me," she said in an uncertain voice.

"Do you believe that? Do you expect me to believe it when I have seen the marks of his brutality upon your arm?"

"He didn't mean it, Garrett. He has his temper and—and sometimes he forgets and doesn't realize his strength —but he would never do worse. If it's true—and, oh, I know it must be! —that he did—what you were accused of—it has been a lesson to him. I'm sure it has. He—"

Garrett shook his head. "Then what made you write that message last night?" he asked.

"What do you mean? . . . Oh, I don't know. I was afraid . . ."

"And I was afraid," he said gravely, "and still am. That's why I couldn't stay away. The only man you could turn to in case of need was gone. . . ."

"Mr. Power?" She flashed him a startled look.

"How did you know that yesterday? And how did you find another man to take his place—his name, and everything? So that you dared come here in his stead . . .!"

"I found it out before I left the island yesterday morning," he said slowly, wondering how much he dared tell her.

It seemed needlessly cruel to shock her with the story of the murder on the island at that time; some hours must surely elapse before Appleyard could return; indeed, Coast did not expect him till the evening. And until then matters must stand as they were; nothing must be allowed to happen to rouse Blackstock's suspicions. But if she knew that Power had been assassinated—could existing conditions continue to obtain? Would she be able to continue to bear herself toward Blackstock as she had theretofore?

He decided to keep her in the dark as long as possible. He continued: "There were two of us ashore, you know—my companion as well as myself. It seems he stumbled upon the bungalow in the fog and accidentally overheard a part of Power's final quarrel with—with Blackstock. Then he —learned"—coast slurred the explanation, but she forgot to question it—"that a man named Handyside was to replace Power. So we thought it over and decided I was to be Handyside."

She was facing him squarely now, eyes wide with interest and alarm. "But—but how can you? What do you know about the work? The minute he" (she could no longer name Blackstock intimately, it seemed) "asks you to send or take a message—"

"I will cheerfully comply, if required," he assured her. "You see, I know enough about the system to make a stagger at operating. You forget my experience with the signal corps in the Spanish war—that taught me Morse; and it also interested me enough in such things to make me spend a good deal of time in the wireless room every time I crossed the water. I couldn't help picking up a working knowledge of the system under such circumstances. Don't worry; I'll make good when the call comes."

"But this Mr. Handyside—he may arrive at any time now: and then—"

"I doubt if he ever sees the island," Coast interrupted, smiling. "You see, the Corsair did run aground in Quick's Hole; we were the amateur asses that got in her way. And we left her there. Now Appleyard—that's my companion —has gone back to see that Messrs. Finn and Hecksher and Handyside do nothing rash."

"He can prevent them?" A pucker of perplexity gathered between her brows. "How?"

"He'll manage somehow; he's very clever, Appleyard is—"

"But he must have some plan," she countered quickly; "and you would know it. You're keeping something back. What is it? What does it mean?"

"I'll tell you in a moment," he temporized. "But first I'll ask some questions."

Still puzzled, she held his eyes intently. "I can't imagine what you mean. But go on."

"You told me that he—Blackstock settled here to work on his inventions. Do you think he has accomplished much, that way, since you came to the island?"

She shook her head slowly. "Not a great deal. His eyes have hampered progress, of course."

"I thought as much. . . . And do I understand that no one ever visits the island except your weekly boat from New Bedford?"

"No one. . . . That is, sometimes, fishermen—"

"For what purpose?"

"I don't know; there was once quite a settlement of them down there, you know; and I understand they still use some of the buildings to store dried fish in. I'm afraid that never interested me much."

"You never watched them—?"

"No; generally they come to anchor after nightfall and are gone before daylight the next morning. Sometimes he has gone down to the beach to talk to them, but as a rule Mr Power went with him."

"Their visits are fairly regular?"

"I think so; the schooner comes about once a month, I should say. But—"

"And between whiles smaller boats call?"

"Now and then, yes."

"Do you recall when the schooner was here last?"

"About a month ago, I think. But, Garrett—"

"Just a minute, and then I'll explain what I'm driving at. . . . Now isn't it a fact that Blackstock and Power were busiest with the wireless as a rule for a few days before the schooner showed up?"

She nodded thoughtfully. "I never connected the two; but it was so. How did you know?"

"I merely guess. Now I'm going to guess again, in another direction. . . . You didn't inherit much from your aunt, did you?"

"Why . . . a few keepsakes only. You see, she disapproved of my engagement to Mr. Blackstock, Garrett, and when I—was stubborn, she changed her will, just a little while before she died. She left everything in trust to me, but I was to receive nothing until I divorced my husband, or he died. The house is mine, but not to rent or sell, nor may I live in it except alone or with a woman companion only."

"I thought—something of the sort. . . . Your private fortune wasn't large, was it?"

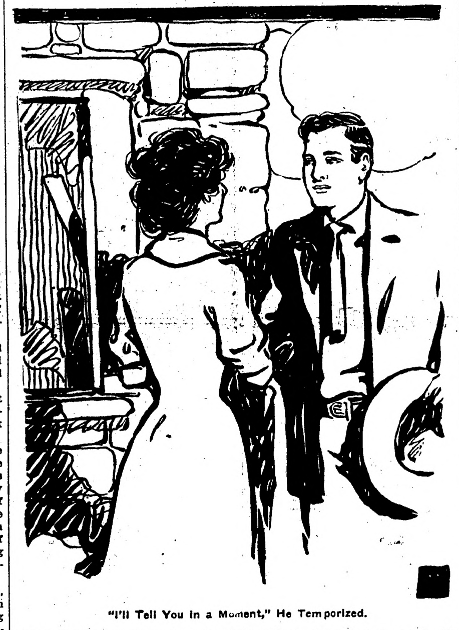
"Not large—between sixty and seventy thousand dollars."

"And you let Blackstock take care of it?"

"Of course. He was my husband, I loved and trusted him—then." The last word fell with a bitter accent.

"And while abroad—he gambled pretty extensively?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)



"I'll Tell You in a Moment," He Temporized.

Certain of Success.

I mean to make myself a man, and if I succeed in that I shall succeed in everything.—Garfield.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

Woman's Power Over Man
Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.
IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

BOUNTIES PAID IN MAINE

Open Time All the Year Round in That State for Bears, Wolves and Bobcats.

It's open time all the year round in Maine, with a bounty on their heads, for bears, wolves and bobcats. The commonwealth bounty is $5 a wolf or a bear and $2 a bobcat. Last year the state paid out $595 in bounties for bears that were slain and $826 for bobcats. Most of them came from the counties of Franklin, Oxford, Washington and Hancock. No bounties have been paid on wolves for many years, as these animals are very scarce.

The history of Maine's bounties covers considerable ground. In the way of constructive bounties the state tried to help out the raising of wheat and corn. In two years it spent more than $200,000 and then gave it up. The state also tried to foster the raising of silkworms. One other thing the state has done in the way of constructive bounty legislation, and that was the attempt to make Maine a beet sugar state. For this the state paid out $7,000 per year for two years.

The list of destructive bounties is longer. It started in 1830, when the solons decided to kill off the crows. Before the state had enough it had spent nearly $15,000. —Lewiston Journal.

You are hereby notified that Erling Pederson Dahl, who gives Thief River Falls, Minnesota, as his post-office address, did on March 7th, 1912, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead, Entry, Serial No. 06015, made April 22nd, 1911, for NW 1-4, Section 35, Township 156, N., Range 41 W., 5th Principal Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that you, the said Owen Beauchene, have never resided upon, cultivated or improved said land: that you have wholly abandoned said land; and have been absent therefrom continuously since the date of said entry.

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be cancelled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by resistered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy to the contestant in person, proof of such service must be either the said contestant's written acknowledgement of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the post office to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.

You should state in your answer the name of the post office to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

TAKING PICTURES OF SKY

Great International Task That Is Most Important of Kind Ever Undertaken.

A photographic map of the sky has been occupying the attention of the astronomers of the world for many years and is still far from complete. The information so far derived is tabulated and published in books, each volume containing little but a mass of figures.

The work is invaluable from a scientific point of view. This great international task is probably the most important of its kind ever undertaken.

The entire sky is to be photographed twice—that is, with a short and long exposure. Each of the eighteen observatories participating will take about 1,200 photographs. The work has gone on continuously since 1892. The total number of separate stars in the sky, the positions and magnitudes of which by each observatory will be determined, is about two hundred thousand. Eighteen times that—to estimate the work of the other universities as well—brings the approximate total to nearly four million.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

First in 1878
First ever since

Save Their Cost Every Year of Use

If you are thinking about buying a cream separator, and have only a small amount of ready cash to invest, don't be tempted to put your money into one of the so-called, "cheap" machines.

Why pay your hard-earned money for a "cheap," trashy machine, when you can buy a reliable De Laval upon such liberal terms that it will more than earn its cost while you are paying for it.

When you buy a De Laval you have positive assurance that your machine will be good for at least twenty years of service, during which time it will save every possible dollar for you and earn its original cost over and over again.

If you purchase the so-called "cheap" separator, you must pay cash in advance and then take the chance of the machine becoming worthless after a year or two of use, to say nothing of the cream it will waste while it does last.

More De Laval machines are in use than any other make. There is a reason. Come in and we will tell you why.

Easiest to turn; easiest to wash, skims the cleanest lasts the longest

New Railroad a Certainty

The Manitoba Gazette, official paper of the province of Manitoba, has the following official publication:

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made at the present session of the legislative assembly of Manitoba for an act to incorporate a railway company for the construction and operation of a line of railway from a point at or near the city of Winnipeg and thence extending in a general southeasterly direction to a point on the boundary line between Canada and the United States of America at or near section one, townshop one, range 5, east of the principal meridian in said province.

Dated this twenty-ninth day of February, A. D. 1912.

George A. Elliot, solicitor for applicants.

The above may be accepted as conclusive proof that some railroad company is preparing to construct a new line between Winnipeg and Minneapolis just as quickly as possible. The various reports published, and heard about surveys being made, indicate that the line will be built by the Minneapolis and St. Louis; that it will enter the United States in Roseau county, near the western line; cross the Great Northern line near Greenbush, and then run in almost a direct line to Minneapolis. If this route is followed, the line will run through the bed where Mud Lake formerly lay.

Rev. Larson was here yesterday from Thief River Falls and held a meeting in the schoolhouse.

Ingvald Larson arrived yesterday [illegible] for a visit with his parents who reside north of town.

Severt Nelson, who has been here from Frederick, S. D., for a visit with Nels Gudvangen, left on Tuesday for Crookston and other points where he will visit before returning home.

Two women homesteaders, whose names we have been unable to learn, arrived on Wednesday from Alexandria and went out to build and take up their residence on claims in the eastern part of Mud Lake township.

We were busy moving our printing office the first part of this week and the confusion resulting has delayed us in getting out this issue of the paper. Hereafter The Northern Light office is located just north of Kolden's Lumber yard.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR

More Than 1,375,000 in Use

The Machine By Which All Others Are Judged

For more than thirty years the De Laval cream separator has been acknowledged as the World's Standard.

You may hear it said of some separator that "It's as good as a De Laval;" or if some competing salesman wants to make his argument particularly strong, he'll say "It's better than a De Laval."

The concern with a cheaply and poorly constructed machine says "Just as good as a De Laval and costs less."

But everywhere the De Laval is recognized by experienced creamerymen and dairymen and even by makers of would-be competing machines as the World's Standard.

The cream separator is more frequently used than any other machine on the farm, and for that reason, if for no other, only the very best should be purchased, and that's the De Laval.

LOOK AFTER YOUR HEALTH

If Your System Is Kept Toned Up You Will Escape Many Diseases That Find Easy Victims Among Pale People.

Enough disease germs enter the average human body every day to cause death if the healthful organism did not combat these germs and render them harmless.

Let the human system become run down, or debilitated, and this power of resistance to disease is weakened. Soon the disease germs get the upper hand, an acute sickness follows or the patient becomes a chronic invalid.

It is in the blood that the battle to maintain the health is fought. Keep the blood toned up, the bowels open and observe ordinary care as regards food and rest and you will avoid much sickness.

Debility is not a recognized disease but is a condition in which the sufferer cannot get a good night's sleep, wakes up all tired out, has no strength or ambition, is nervous, has a poor appetite, has trouble with the stomach, and is subject to headaches and backaches. It is most commonly met with in people who have to work hard, are confined indoors, eat improper food or have worries and grief.

The case of Mrs. M. V. McCaslin, of No. 202 South 27th Street, Lincoln, Neb., shows the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic for all run-down conditions of health. She says:

"I gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a trial for general debility from which I had been suffering about three years. I was thoroughly tired and worn out and had no ambition for anything. I became very weak and kept losing strength. My appetite was poor and I was nervous and had severe headaches.

"I needed a tonic treatment and tried several tonic remedies but none seemed to help me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was soon much improved in health and able to get around and do my work. I took the pills until cured and am pleased to recommend them to anyone who is run down in health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Send today for a copy of our free booklet, "Diseases of the Blood."

All in the Same Boat.

My aunt has a beautiful parrot, which, like many others of its species, is addicted to profanity. To break the bird of this habit, my aunt would "duck" him in water every time he would swear. On an April day he had been profuse in profanity, and had received the accustomed ducking. Now, it happened that a brood of newly hatched chickens had been drenched in a shower of rain and auntie brought them into the house and placed them in the kitchen to dry, beneath the parrot, who was drying his feathers. He seemed much interested and gazed intently at the little chicks for some time, and then exclaimed:

"D——n'd little fools; been swearing, too."

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

No Man's Land

A ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast and Katherine confer.

CHAPTER XV.—(Continued.)

"I'm afraid so. After he had consulted specialists in Berlin we spent some time at Monte Carlo and later at Ostend and Trouville. Douglas—went frequently to the casino with friends. He spoke once or twice of winning, but—"

"But never of losing."

She shook her head. "But what has all this to do—?"

"Don't you see, Katherine? . . . The man pretended to be well to do; in fact he had nothing. He married you for your money, and what you were to inherit. Disappointed in the latter, he took the former and gambled it away. That's why you're here, why he's making this desperate attempt to recoup. Appleyard guessed it down to the last detail!"

Bewilderment clouded her eyes. "But, Garrett, I'm afraid I don't understand. What 'desperate attempt to recoup?' Who is this Mr. Appleyard, and why should he concern himself with my affairs?"

"I'll tell you." In few phrases Coast sketched succinctly Appleyard, his connection with the secret service bureau, his theory as to the smuggling conspiracy and the part Blackstock played therein, together with the selection of No Man's Land as a strategic base and distributing depot.

"The thing's plain as a map," he wound up in a glow of triumphant reasoning, himself momentarily unmindful of their greater and more intimate trouble. "Appleyard was right in every guess he made. . . . The location of the island is ideal for the purpose, just far enough north off the main-traveled lane to be convenient; the steamer has only to swing a few points off her normal course to find herself in lonely waters, where she can make a transshipment without detection or noticeable loss of time. The wireless station is essential, enabling Blackstock to pick up the steamer on her approach and pass on the news to the schooner, which sets out, meets the steamer, takes off its consignment of dutiable goods, returns to No Man's Land under cover of darkness, the better to dodge the lookout on Gay Head, and leaves before morning to continue her innocent fishing trip. Other boats, small boats, call by night and remove the goods piecemeal, landing them at this small harbor or that—just as Appleyard figured it out. . . . And so we have them."

"You have them?" the woman repeated, perplexed.

"It's a practical certainty the schooner left New Bedford night before last; we saw her go, unless Appleyard is greatly mistaken. . . . And hasn't there been an unusual amount of wireless signaling going on the past day or so?"

"That is so. The day of the fog either Douglas or Mr. Power was constantly in the operating room. I remember now that as the fog continued Douglas seemed to grow more and more irritable . . ."

"Because it was keeping the vessels from finding one another. Since then there has been the storm to blow the schooner off shore. Most probably she will try to make a landing tonight."

The woman moved a little away, as if suddenly sobered and brought back to realization of her position; again her eyes sought counsel and consolation of the sea.

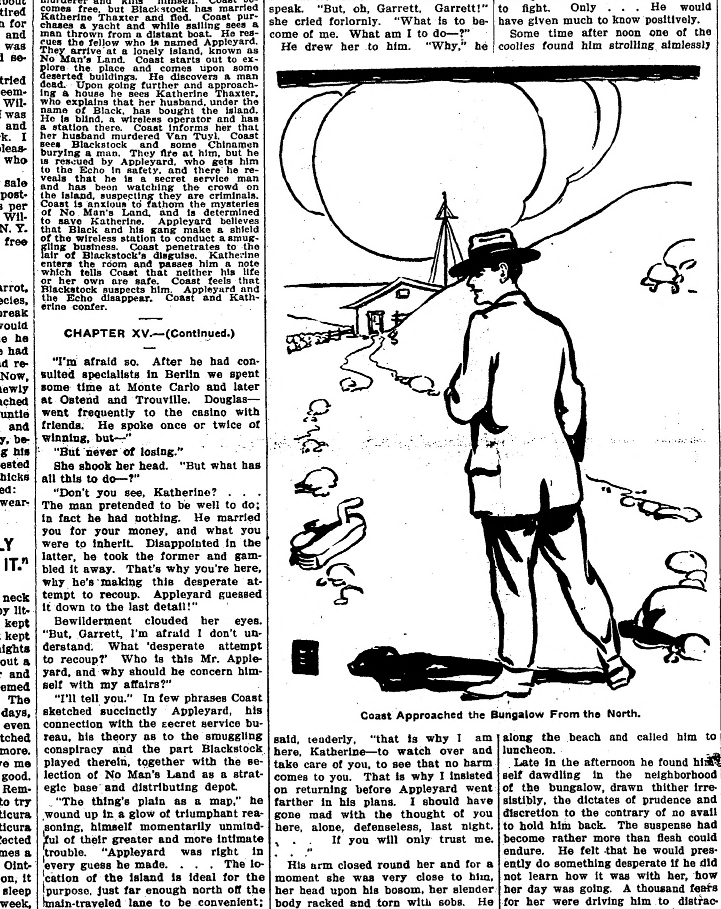
"And since then—he has been busy?" Coast pursued, heedless.

"Yes—and more irritable. That night he had been drinking more than usual; I attributed his bad temper to that. Almost all that evening he spent with Mr. Power in the wireless room, the door closed. . . . It was stupid of me, but I attached no especial importance to it. Now and then their voices sounded excited, but it wasn't anything unusual for them to quarrel, especially when Douglas was—drinking. I interrupted once, and Douglas caught my arm and put me out of the room. It was then he hurt me—as you saw. After that they quarreled more fiercely than ever—I think partly on account of the way Douglas had treated me. Mr. Power seemed to resent Douglas' roughness toward me. . . ."

"It wasn't an uncommon occurrence, then?" The rage smoldering in Coast's heart thickened his utterance.

She noticed and understood, and turned back to him quickly, offering her hand, her eyes beseeching. "Don't, Garrett," she said, brokenly; "don't think about that. It is over now—now that I know. I couldn't bear ever to have him touch me again." She struggled a moment against a rising tide of emotions, while he held her hand imprisoned in his own. There was despair in the face upturned to his that wrung his heart, so that he feared to trust himself to speak. "But, oh, Garrett, Garrett!" she cried forlornly. "What is to become of me. What am I to do—?"

He drew her to him. "Why," he said, tenderly, "that is why I am here, Katherine—to watch over and take care of you, to see that no harm comes to you. That is why I insisted on returning before Appleyard went farther in his plans. I should have gone mad with the thought of you here, alone, defenseless, last night. . . . If you will only trust me. . . ."



Coast Approached the Bungalow From the North.

His arm closed round her and for a moment she was very close to him, her head upon his bosom, her slender body racked and torn with sobs. He held her so, compassionate and pitiful, striving as best he might to soothe her—the while joy sang in his soul.

"Only trust me," he murmured—"trust me a little, Katherine; and all shall yet be well. . . . It is not the end, my dear, but just a beginning. . . . Have faith a little . . ."

Gradually her transports stilled. "I do trust you, Garrett." Tears gemmed her eyes like stars. "I do and shall . . . but, oh, be kind to me, for if I have been foolish and headstrong and—mad, I am paying for it, paying heavily for it. It's all so dark and hopeless, Garrett—I see no light. . . ."

"Yet there is light," he said; and again confidently: "The light is there."

"I know . . . I know."

She drew away and dried her eyes. "I must go," she said in a steady voice, "before he wakes. He was up late last night and I'm afraid drank a great deal. I left him sleeping heavily."

"The servants can't see you return to the bungalow from this direction, can they?"

"No. . . ."

"I'll make a detour. We must be careful for a little while. Can you bear up, do you think?"

"A little while—?" She smiled forlornly.

"Appleyard will be back with the Echo by night."

"I will try, Garrett, and I don't think I'll fail. I've got something to cling to." She hesitated an instant, looking up to him with her wistful smile. "I think," she said, slowly—"I think I see, far off but clear, Garrett, just a glimmer of the light."

CHAPTER XVI.

Taking a roundabout course eastward, which practically completed the circuit of the island, Coast tramped back to a lonely breakfast in the farmhouse.

During the remainder of the morning he saw nothing more of Katherine. Without giving the matter really definite thought he had assumed that Blackstock would send for him when he was wanted. Nothing of the sort happened, although he could not doubt that Blackstock was up and about; about mid-morning both coolies went to the bungalow to set it to rights, and intermittently throughout the slow dull hours he heard the drum of the wireless spark, its whip-lash crackling from a distance resembling a smart fusillade of pistol shots.

The sound filled him with apprehensions. It was quite possible that Blackstock would think to settle any doubts he might entertain about the identity of his new aide by questioning Voorhis via wireless. In such event the tissue of falsehood upon which he had bolstered up his position on the island would almost certainly be exposed. And then . . .?

But however disturbing it might be to contemplate, the possibility of such a contretemps was not a stranger to Coast's calculations; he was prepared to face it. Should the wind veer in that quarter, he would simply have to fight. Only . . . He would have given much to know positively.

Some time after noon one of the coolies found him strolling aimlessly along the beach and called him to luncheon.

Late in the afternoon he found himself dawdling in the neighborhood of the bungalow, drawn thither irresistibly, the dictates of prudence and discretion to the contrary of no avail to hold him back. The suspense had become rather more than flesh could endure. He felt that he would presently do something desperate if he did not learn how it was with her, how her day was going. A thousand fears for her were driving him to distraction.

Coast approached the bungalow from the north—the direction opposite the end in which the wireless station was installed. As he rounded the corner, with purpose to go directly to Blackstock, he passed out of observation from the farm-house and simultaneously caught sight of Katherine through one of the living-room windows.

Moving silently to the main entrance, he waited there where she could not but see him when she turned back into the room.

From beyond her came the rumble of her husband's voice. He was speaking quickly and with force, but Coast could not hear what he said.

The woman waited, moveless, until his voice dropped. Then she said quietly, in an ordinary tone: "Is that all?" To which apparently he assented. She added: "Very well. I'll be ready."

Cook Without Pans.

A missionary in an account of life in the South Pacific says: "The problem of cooking without pots or pans is already proved. The natives of the South Pacific cook their food in a hole in the ground, a wood fire being made at the bottom and covered with stones. On these the food is placed, wrapped in leaves, and the whole covered with earth. The result is delicious. When cooked the food is served on leaves, thus doing away with the necessity of crockery. I lived in the South Sea Islands without crockery, cutlery, chairs, tables or beds."

Baking Economy.

By the use of perfect baking powder the housewife can derive as much economy as from any other article used in baking and cooking. In selecting a baking powder, therefore, care should be exercised to purchase one that retains its original strength and always remains the same, thus making the food sweet and wholesome and producing sufficient leavening gas to make the baking light.

Very little of this leavening gas is produced by the cheap baking powders, making it necessary to use double the quantity ordinarily required to secure good results.

You cannot experiment every time you make a cake or biscuits, or test the strength of your baking powder to find out how much of it you should use; yet with most baking powders you should do this, for they are put together so carelessly they are never uniform, the quality and strength varying with each can purchased.

Calumet Baking Powder is made of chemically pure ingredients of tested strength. Experienced chemists put it up. The proportions of the different materials remain always the same. Sealed in air-tight cans Calumet Baking Powder does not alter in strength and is not affected by atmospheric changes.

In using Calumet you are bound to have uniform bread, cake or biscuits, as Calumet does not contain any cheap, useless or adulterating ingredients so commonly used to increase the weight. Further, it produces pure, wholesome food and is a baking powder of rare merit; therefore is recommended by leading physicians and chemists. It complies with all the pure food laws, both STATE and NATIONAL. The goods are moderate in price, and any lady purchasing Calumet from her grocer, if not satisfied with it can return it and have her money refunded.

Bathetic.

General Marion Maus has a keen and delicate taste in literature, and at a recent dinner at Vancouver Barracks, discussing a popular novel of little worth, General Maus said:

"The pathos of the book is really bathos. It reminds me of a private's widow. The good woman was about to sell her household furniture, her rugs, plated ware and what not. As she was going over these articles her eyes filled with tears, a host of memories rose to her mind, and, laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said:

"'Oh, dear! I can't let these go! They've been in poor George's mouth too often!'"

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Now's the Time —not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

SHE QUIT COFFEE

And Much Good Came From It.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did a woman of Apple Creek, O. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not quit drinking it, even if it took my life, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to go around at all. Had no energy, and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one day, it came over me, and I asked myself what is the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I can indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee, and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions, and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I like better than I liked the old coffee. One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right, and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework, and have done a great deal besides.

"My sister-in-law, who visited me this summer had been an invalid for some time, much as I was. I got her to quit coffee and drink Postum. She gained five pounds in three weeks, and I never saw such a change in any one's health."

"There's a reason."

TAFT NOW CLAIMS 278 DELEGATES

TWENTY-EIGHT TO BE CHOSEN THIS WEEK AT WISCONSIN AND GEORGIA PRIMARIES.

CLARK LEADS DEMOCRATS

The Speaker Has Seventy-Two Delegates, Wilson Ten, Marshall Thirty—Many Primaries in April.

Washington, April 2.—With the election of Taft delegates in Alaska and in the Ninth Missouri district, the Taft managers claim to have 278 delegates to the Chicago convention. During the coming week twenty-eight delegates will be elected. Of these twenty-six will come from Wisconsin, whose direct primaries are to be held on Tuesday. It is conceded that Senator La Follette will win in that state. On Thursday two delegates are to be chosen in the Seventh Georgia district, and it is said they will be for Taft.

Of the Taft delegates thus far claimed for him, 125 come from northern and western states, counting Missouri as a northern state, and 153 come from southern states. A majority of the Chicago convention will be 539 votes.

Attention is called to the fact that on March 30, four years ago, Taft had only 186 delegates. The combined opposition to him had on that day eighty-two delegates, and of the Taft delegates thirty-four were contested, all of them from the southern states.

Colonel Roosevelt is conceded thirty delegates by the Taft manager—eight in Indiana, one in New Mexico, seven in New York and fourteen in Oklahoma. Senator Cummins has two delegates from Iowa, Senator La Follette has ten delegates from North Dakota.

On the democratic side, the list stands: Clark seventy-two, Wilson ten, Marshall thirty, and the twelve delegates from Maine uninstructed, but supposedly pretty evenly divided between Wilson and Harmon. Delegates from New England of both parties are usually uninstructed. The six delegates from the Philippines are not instructed, but it is said they favor Clark. The convention which elected them passed resolutions saying Clark was its choice for president. Adding the Philippines to the Clark column, brings the total up from sixty-six to seventy-two.

The contest in Wisconsin is between Wilson and Clark, there being no Underwood or Harmon tickets in nomination.

Of the delegates thus far chosen at county conventions in Iowa, Clark has 187 and Wilson thirty-seven. These county delegates will be members of the district and state democratic conventions will elect delegates to Baltimore.

Primaries in April.

Republican conventions for April will be numerous. By the end of the month about two-thirds of the delegates to Chicago will have been chosen. Following is the April list:

2—Wisconsin direct primaries, for both political parties.

4—Seventh Georgia.

6—Utah state committee, to fix date for convention.

8—Thirteenth Indiana; Louisiana state convention.

9—New York state convention; first and second Vermont; seventh, tenth and eleventh Kentucky, Illinois primaries; Chicago primaries.

10—Kentucky state convention; Vermont state convention; tenth Michigan; Maine convention.

11—Michigan state convention; second Missouri.

13—St. Louis ward primaries; Pennsylvania district primaries.

14—Tennessee state convention.

15—Hawaiian convention.

16—Connecticut state convention; Delaware state convention; first Kansas; first South Carolina.

17—All the Connecticut congressional districts.

18—Nebraska direct primaries; Oregon direct primaries.

22—Sixth Missouri.

23—Twelfth Indiana.

24—Iowa state convention; second, third, fourth, fifth, tenth and eleventh Iowa; Rhode Island state and district conventions.

25—Missouri state convention.

29—Porto Rico convention.

30—Massachusetts direct primaries.

The list of democratic conventions for April is very incomplete, due partly to the fact that these conventions are coming from one to three weeks later than the republican convention. So far as reported in this city, the democratic April dates follow:

2—Wisconsin direct primaries, for both parties.

6—Arkansas county conventions.

8—Illinois direct primaries, for both parties.

13—District primaries in Pennsylvania.

19—Direct primaries in Nebraska and Oregon, for both parties.

29—Colorado state convention.

30—Florida primaries.

SENATOR BOB TAYLOR IS DEAD

NOTED TENNESSEAN SUCCUMBS AT WASHINGTON.

Operation for Gall Stones Proves Fatal to the "Fiddling Statesman."

Washington, April 2.—Robert Love Taylor, United States senator from Tennessee, "Fiddling Bob" to all the south, died, unable to withstand the shock of an operation for gall stones. Mrs. Taylor was at his side when the end came.

"Fiddling Bob" Taylor, so known because he played his way into the hearts of his audiences, carrying his violin wherever he campaigned, was 61 years old.

Once pension agent at Knoxville, then governor of Tennessee, from 1887 to 1891 and 1897 to 1899, Senator Taylor was sent to the national house of representatives from the same congressional district that had previously sent his father to congress and later his brother, Alfred A. Taylor, whom he subsequently defeated for governor.

Senator Taylor was a Cleveland democrat. Senator Taylor is survived by his widow, a son, David Taylor, and three married daughters in Tennessee.

USE PANAMA MACHINERY

Fisher Has Plan to Construct Government Railroad in Alaska.

Washington, April 2.—Secretary Fisher is urging the house to clothe the federal government with immediate authority to use the construction equipment and supplies on the Panama canal, as they are released there by completion of the work, for building a government railroad in Alaska from tidewater at Resurrection Bay to the Yukon Valley. Chairman Flood of the house territories committee has prepared a bill to provide for a report upon such a project to some future session of congress.

Secretary Fisher, in a letter to Representative Booher of Missouri, makes some suggestions for changes in the Flood bill and also outlines a substitute measure to provide for immediate action. The secretary presses the point that if legislation be delayed utilization of the Panama canal construction equipment will not be practicable. He calls attention to the government's engineering feat at Panama under a very simple act of congress and wishes to apply the same measures to the railroad in Alaska.

Resurrection Bay has already been selected as a coaling station site by the navy department.

MILWAUKEE WILL VOTE

Both Bading and Seidel Predict Victory at Tuesday's Election.

Milwaukee, April 2.—It was estimated that 50,000 people attended a score of mass meetings in various parts of Milwaukee at which both factions in the municipal campaign predicted victory at Tuesday's election which will decide the fate of the socialistic city administration, headed by Emil Seidel.

Dr. G. A. Bading, former health commissioner and fusion candidate, in speeches predicted his ticket would sweep the socialists from office Tuesday by not less than 20,000 votes.

Mayor Seidel, also speaking before crowded mass meetings, told his listeners the final result would find the socialistic party still in power with himself elected by at least 6,000 majority over his opponent.

Fire in Manila; Loss $1,000,000.

Manila, April 2.—The Standard Oil company's main storage here has been destroyed by fire. Three large petroleum warehouses and one for the storage of gasoline were burned. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

Torpedo Boats to be Sunk.

Washington, April 2.—Three torpedo boats, the Cushing, McKee and Ericcson, have been designated by the navy department to serve as targets for bombardment by the dreadnaughts in the Atlantic fleet.

Troubles Laid to "In-Law."

"The cause of more than half the family scraps that are scrapped to a finish," says an exchange, "is the 'in-law.' A man or a woman marries some one absolutely antagonistic to all the other members of the family, and then, putting this person on a pedestal, demands that all shall do her or his will. For the sake of courtesy, often a whole family will yield many points, and gradually the 'in-law' becomes more and more insistent, and so things drift along, always the one side giving in, until some straw, some trifle, will prove the drop too much, and after that the fracas. With the air cleared, a beginning can be made over again on a basis of equal rights, or else all intercourse can cease. Either way much has been gained."

A story your Great Grandfather knew

More men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade brands combined.

This great popularity is not a sudden spurt. It is not the fad of a minute. It is not due to fancy packages, big claims, nor eloquent salesmen. Chances are your great-grandfather's pipe held nothing else. For "Bull" Durham has held first place in the affections of American smokers for more than 52 years. Three generations have called it the best.

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

is the purest form of tobacco you can smoke. It is made from the choice, tender leaves of bright golden Virginia and North Carolina tobacco—with all the delicious flavor, unchanged by adulteration or fancy processes—with quality and quantity undiminished by an expensive, gaudy package.

These are some of the reasons why millions of loyal "Bull" Durham smokers buy it, and smoke it, and stick to it year after year. They have learned how much better a cigarette is when they roll it themselves from good "Bull" Durham. They know how good it is in a pipe.

SAW WAY OUT OF DIFFICULTY

Shifting of Positions Resulted in Comfort for Three Out of Four Parties Concerned.

Every one smiled as they entered the train. The grandmother was so stout and the granddaughter a child of twelve, so slim and unusually tall. In no instance was there a place with two seats vacant. The best they could do was each to sit in a half section with some one else. The grandmother plumped down beside a fat man, to the immense discomfort of both. The granddaughter, slim as a sapling, found a seat with an understudy for the Human Skeleton.

She looked around and saw her grandmother rapidly becoming apoplectic. At the same time she saw a way out of the difficulty. Crossing the aisle, she grasped her relative firmly by the two hands and tugged at her valorously. "Here, grandma," she said in her high, young voice, "you sit with him—he's thin." (She indicated the unfortunate youth who had been her own seat mate.) "I'll sit with him (she indicated the fat man, who was slowly regaining his normal size as grandma's bulk was removed) because I'm thin. And we'll all be more comfortable." And they were, except possibly grandma's newest neighbor.

Louisiana has a negro cult that has been practising "human sacrifice" and one woman confesses to having killed seventeen blacks with her own hands. She will probably pay the penalty with her own life, although some of the southern whites would doubtless regard the cultivation of this cult as an easy ultimate solution of the race problem.

As long ago as last September the express companies indulded in some little pleasantry by offering to reduce their rates a matter of twenty per cent, or thereabouts. They may have made that reduction, but we have not heard of its being practised in this part of the earth. Corporations may be soulless, but they are not all without a sense of humor.

The republican state committee met Tuesday to fix the dates for the coming conventions. The state convention to name delegates to the national convention is to be held in Minneapolis on May 16, and the state nominating convention in St. Paul on July 2. The committee, being mostly machine politicians, rejected the presidential preference primary idea by a vote of 28 to 7. It is now up to the republican voters of the state to select delegates that will really represent them to attend the county conventions. Otherwise this state will be grossly misrepresented at the national convention.

Not a week passes that we dont receive through the mails several bits of alleged "news" for publication, and the senders expect us to publish same free of charge. These communications are nearly always for the benefit of some organization or politician, and they always prefer to overlook the fact that a country editor is entitled to pay for his labor. For our part, experience has taught that boosting of that kind does not pay and is never appreciated. We would be pleased to accept this business on a business basis—cash with order preferred—but must decline to publish them free. We believe that if all the country editors would adopt the same rule, we would all improve our financial circumstances, and the value of our space would be far more appreciated.

THE REASON.

"Somehow, the colors in that marine view don't seem to mix properly."

"That's because the artist painted a water scene with oil colors."

SPOKE TOO SOON.

"Have you ever seen pink and green monkeys?"

"Certainly not."

"Then you are all right."

"Not so fast, I once saw a couple that were sky-blue."

Cupid's Lucky Move

By

OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Senator Elias Lansing wanted to get married again. So did Mrs. Marsh. That is, Senator Lansing had not dreamed of marrying until he saw Mrs. Marsh, and Mrs. Marsh had no desire to assume matrimonial vows for the second time until she met the senator.

They had met at a reception at the Italian legation one afternoon, and as soon as the senator had made his best bow to the bright little woman in the stunning gown and hat of king's blue Cupid began to get in his work. The blue velvet hat on the soft golden hair made her look very girlish, and the senator, looking from her to the slender girl beside her, wondered if he had heard aright when presented to her daughter.

Mrs. Marsh and Isabel met the senator often at teas, dinners, theaters and balls. Washington began to look wise and nod its head when the senator took to dropping into Mrs. Marsh's box after the first act, or walking home from church with the widow and her daughter. And Mrs. Marsh was always wearing violets these days—huge bunches—with the usual orchid.

The man was in love with the widow. But the trouble was this: He was poor—poor, as senators go. Having no one to support but himself, he was able to afford the show the world demands of a senator. He had an apartment that was all that an apartment should be. And his clothes, his servants and his car came up to the public demand. Until now he had resisted marriageable daughters, debutantes and widows.

On the other hand, Mrs. Marsh, after ten years' absence, had come back to Washington, taken a small house with a huge rent, and she and her daughter wore gowns which were the envy of every woman in the capital. It was true the gardener did run the electric car for them and the same maid was always in evidence, but what of that! Such gowns and such well-kept house seemed to signify an ample supply of money to the senator's simple mind.

"I won't marry any woman who can't live on my income," he said over and over again to himself. "Even if she has her own money I've got to feel I can keep her. No. It's no use; so I guess it's home to Wexford county for Elias when the session's over. Anyhow, it'll be good to get back to the old house and Jeremy will be glad to see me—good old dog—and Allen and his wife and the horses. Oh, the simple life for me; and yet things somehow won't seem just as they did before. Allen and Sarah do make me comfortable, that's sure; and Jeremy dog is a good old scout enough, mornings hunting and nights by the fire, but if there was just somebody to—"

That somebody wasn't so vague as it sounds. There was a clearly defined vision always before his eyes. But, strangely enough, instead of wearing blue velvet she was always clad in blue ginghams—sometimes with a dainty white apron and smiling at him across the breakfast table. Somehow he liked her in the gingham. He grew absent-minded and morose.

One night to get away from everything—at a debutante's ball—he hid behind some palms in the conservatory. The dance music, soft and dreamy so far away, and the faint splash of a fountain were soothing. He had his dreams to himself. Mrs. Marsh and Isabel were both at the dance, but both were in demand. He had danced two with the former, and there was a long interval until the next with her. He had none between. But if he couldn't have his lady love, or at least be with her, he was becoming contented with this vision of his—the lady in blue gingham.

The music and fountain became fainter and slowly stopped. The senator's head nodded and he slipped just over the edge of daydreamland into real dreamland with the same sweet golden lady leading him on. He did not know the dif-

TAFT NOW CLAIMS 340 DELEGATES

AS A RECALL OF THE SEVERAL PRIMARIES HELD LAST WEEK.

174 SAFE FOR ROOSEVELT.

Woodrow Wilson Climbs to 103 Leaving Champ Clark a Lead of Only Sixty.—Minor Candidates Make No Gains.

Washington, April 16.—The week closed with 340 delegates to the Chicago convention claimed for President Taft, 174 conceded to Colonel Roosevelt, 36 to La Follette and 4 to Cummins.

On the democratic side, Clark ends the week with 163 counting Arkansas, whose primaries have just declared for him, to 103 for Wilson and 30 for Marshall, while 102 are uninstructed.

During the coming week the republicans are to elect delegates as follows:

April 15—Hawaii.

April 16—Connecticut state convention, Delaware state convention, First Kansas convention, First South Carolina district convention.

April 17—Connecticut congressional district conventions.

April 19—Nebraska and Oregon direct primaries.

The democrats are to elect delegates during the coming week through the Nebraska and the Oregon direct primaries, on the 19th and in addition to that the Alabama state convention is set for the 17th.

The totals given above include returns from the Pennsylvania district primaries, which were held Saturday.

Claims of Taft Managers.

Of the convention set for this week Taft will get Hawaii with six delegates, the first Kansas and the first South Carolina, with two delegates each, his managers claim that he will have a majority in both Connecticut and Delaware. He may even have the solid delegation from both these states.

The Oregon and the Nebraska primaries probably will favor Roosevelt, or La Follette. In Nebraska there is a chance that Taft will get a few delegates, but this is not certain. In Oregon, it is likely that Roosevelt or La Follette will get the entire ten delegates.

Fifty-six delegates in all are to be chosen this week, and it seems likely that they will be rather evenly divided between Taft and Roosevelt or La Follette. Below is a tentative estimate as to how these delegates will be divided:

For Taft—Connecticut 10, Delaware 4, first Kansas 2, first South Carolina 2, Hawaii 6, Nebraska 4; total, 28.

For Roosevelt or La Follette—Connecticut 4, Delaware 2, Nebraska 12, Oregon 10; total, 28.

The delegates for Clark, not including Arkansas, are distributed as follows: Kansas 20, Missouri, 36, Oklahoma 10, Alaska 6, Philippines 6, Illinois 58, Wisconsin 7.

The twenty-nine Wilson delegates come ten from Oklahoma and nineteen from Wisconsin.

Marshall has only the 30 votes of Indiana, this being merely a "favorite son" acknowledgment.

The 102 uninstructed delegates represent the 90 from New York and the 12 from Maine.

Harmon is the only active candidate on the democratic side thus far without delegates to his credit.

Distribution for Taft.

The 329 delegates claimed for Taft come from the states and territories as follows: Alabama 22, Alaska 2, Colorado 8, District of Columbia 2, Florida 12, Georgia 26, Illinois 2, Indiana 20, Iowa 8, Kentucky 25, Louisiana 6, Michigan 16, Mississippi 20, Missouri 12, New Mexico 7, New York 83, Oklahoma 4, Philippines 2, South Carolina 16, Tennessee 16, Vermont 6, Virginia 24.

The 109 delegates conceded Colonel Roosevelt come from the several states as follows: Illinois, 56; Indiana, 8; Kentucky, 1; Maine, 12; Michigan, 2; Missouri, 6; New Mexico, 1; New York, 7; Oklahoma, 14; Vermont, 2.

La Follette has 36 delegates—10 in North Dakota and 26 in Wisconsin.

Cummins has 4 in Iowa.

HITS ICEBERG, AID BY WIRELESS

VIRGINIA IS RUSHED TO ASSIST TITANIC.

Many Prominent Americans Said to Be Aboard Disabled Vessel.

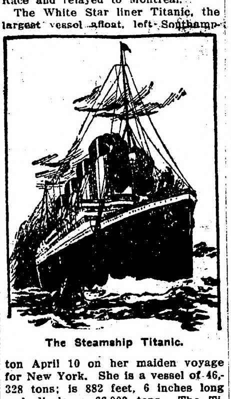
Montreal, April 16.—The new White Star liner Titanic is reported in advices received here to have struck an iceberg.

The news was received at the Allan line offices here in a wireless message from the captain of the steamer Virginia of that line. It was stated that the Virginian had been in wireless communication with the Titanic, that she had reported being in collision with an iceberg and asked for assistance. The Virginian was on her way to the Titanic.

The Virginian sailed from Halifax, and at the time the wireless was sent she is reckoned to have been about abeam off Cape Race. She has 900 passengers on board, but can accommodate 900 of the Titanic's passengers should their removal be necessary.

A message from the Virginian's captain was sent by wireless to Cape Race and relayed to Montreal.

The White Star liner Titanic, the largest vessel afloat, left Southampton April 10 on her maiden voyage for New York. She is a vessel of 46,328 tons; is 882 feet, 6 inches long and displaces 66,000 tons. The Titanic carried about 1,300 passengers, of whom 350 were in the first cabin. Among these are F. D. Millet, the artist and president of the Consolidated American Academy at Rome; Major Archibald Butt, military aide to President Taft; G. M. Hays, president Grand Trunk railway; J. Bruce Ismay, chairman and managing director of the White Star line; Henry B. Harris, the American theatrical manager; W. T. Stead, Mrs. Isador Straus, Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Widener, Benjamin Guggenheim and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Widener.



The Steamship Titanic.

Captain E. B. Smith is in command of the Titanic.

New York. — The Titanic, which struck an iceberg off the Newfoundland coast, having transferred her passengers to near-by boats, is being towed to Halifax, N. S., by the Virginian of the Allan line.

The passengers, who number 1,470, having been transferred to the Parisian and the Carpathia, will be retransferred late today to the Baltic, which will land them at Halifax.

The latest reports indicate that the transference of the passengers was carried on successfully and safely and it is probable that all are safe.

The accident occurred at 10:25 at night at a point about 400 miles south of Cape Race, Nfld., and about 1,100 miles east of New York. The Titanic is the largest steamer ever built. She is 882 feet long and has 46,328 tons displacement. She was launched last May and this was her maiden trip.

Faithful Messenger Rewarded.

San Antonio, April 16. — David Trousdale, the Wells-Fargo express messenger who killed two bandits who held up a Southern Pacific train near Eldridge, Tex., on March 13, and attempted to rob the express car, will be made supervising messenger between here and Houston at a salary of $2,000.

HAS 65 OF DELEGATION.

Woodrow Wilson Is Easily Victor in Democratic Race, Getting 74 to Champ Clark's Two.

Philadelphia, April 16.—The primary election in Pennsylvania resulted in a landslide for Colonel Roosevelt. As the returns continue to come in, the victory for the Roosevelt adherents becomes more complete. Of the 64 delegates elected in the 32 districts, 53 are pledged to vote for Roosevelt.

Added to this is the probability that the Republican state convention, which will choose 12 delegates at large to the national convention, will be controlled by the anti-Taft element, insuring at least 65 delegates for Roosevelt from this state.

Taft Men Stunned.

The Republican organization leaders are stunned by the overwhelming defeat of the Taft candidates. The Roosevelt campaign managers are celebrating their victory to the fullest extent.

With the exception of one or two districts in the state, Woodrow Wilson will have 74 of the 76 delegates from Pennsylvania to the Democratic national convention. In this city Taft got seven of the twelve national delegates. In the Twenty-eighth congressional district the two Democratic national delegates elected are favorable to Champ Clark.

Reuben O. Moon, who has been a leader on the Republican side of congress for several sessions, was decisively defeated for renomination. His successful opponent is George W. Edmonds, Republican-Keystone candidate.

Congressman Michael Donahue won the Republican as well as the Democratic and Keystone nominations in the Fifth Philadelphia district.

The Roosevelt delegates in Allegheny county, including Pittsburg, to the Chicago convention have been elected with the possible exception of one.

John Dalzell appears to have been renominated for congress in the Thirtieth district by a small margin, but the renomination of A. J. Barchfeld in the Thirty-second is in doubt.

Senators Penrose and Oliver and Governor Tener, who were confidently slated for delegates at large, cannot now even sit in the national convention. The Progressive Republicans will nominate a state treasurer and four congressmen at large.

BROKER IS LUCKY.

Lichstern Will Clean Up a Million in Wheat.

Chicago, April 16.—After a year's bitter fighting, while awaiting favorable developments in the wheat market, Adolph J. Lichstern now bids fair to reap a million dollars in profits from his manipulation of May wheat.

About a year ago Mr. Lichstern was reported as having approximately 7,000,000 bushels of May wheat. A week ago he is supposed to have had nearly 20,000,000 bushels. His holdings meantime have varied between 10,000,000 and 30,000,000 bushels. On this wheat he has been paying carrying charges that will approximate $7,500 a day and was in the hole $2,000,000. Mr. Lichstern las year was forcing the fighting and giving no quarter. This year he has been on the defensive and has been forced to buy continuously to keep the market at a figure equal to that at which he first contracted for his May wheat.

At a time when it appeared as if nothing except the enlistment of most unusual influences would help Mr. Lichstern, there came the reports of damage to the soft winter wheat in the Ohio valley, and prices started aloft.

The advantage was grasped quickly as it was offered and Mr. Lichstern began unloading the wheat he has been carrying through two seasons, and which it looked as though he would have to carry for still another, for within sixty days the next crop of May wheat will be coming in.

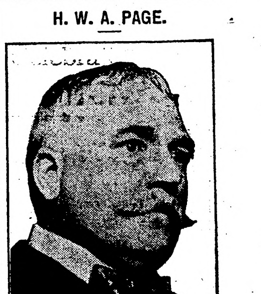
Wireless Station for Soo.

Winnipeg, April 16.—Marconi has sent word to his superintendent at Port Arthur, Ontario, to at once proceed to the Soo and set up there one of the best equipped wireless stations in America, with the object of supplying Port Arthur and Fort William with lake marine information.

Nebraska Storm Claims Life.

Hemingford, Neb., April 16.—The storm which raged in northwestern Nebraska claimed at least one victim and probably two. Mrs. Richard Path, who with her litle son started out at the beginning of the storm to bring the stock to shelter, was lost in the blinding snow and her dead body was found not far from her home. The child had not been found, but it is feared he perished. Richard Path, the husband, was at Alliance proving up on a homestead. The Paths lived 10 miles from here.

H. W. A. PAGE.



Mr. Page is the wealthy linen and cotton commission merchant of New York city who is charged with libeling Representative Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, chairman of the house judiciary committee, and other members of that committee, through the medium of a pamphlet in which he characterized the national legislators as "crooks." Page was indicted in Washington, arrested and released on bail.

RED CROSS NOT THERE.

Absence From Funeral of Founder Subject of Comment.

Washington, April 16.—Much comment was caused at the funeral of Clara Barton by the absence of any representative of President Taft or of the American Red Cross, the organization which Miss Barton founded. Nor were any flowers from either the organization or the White House in evidence.

The Woman's Relief Corps was the chief participant in the service. Mrs. John A. Logan was to have delivered a eulogy of Miss Barton, but was unable to attend the service and her address was read by her daughter, Mrs. Logan Tucker.

The principal floral tribute was a canopy of American beauty roses from the relief corps. A large number of the personal friends of Miss Barton attended the service, but her connection with the Red Cross organization was not officially recognized. The body was taken to Oxford, Mass., for interment.

PALACE FOR ALFONSO.

Authorities of Alicante Start Project by Subscribing $5,000.

Alicante, April 16.—The provincial authorities have headed a subscription with $5,000, the purpose of which is to present King Alfonso with a palace here. The edifice is to be of Arabic architecture. It will also have magnificent gardens. The palace is to be presented to Alfonso with the hope that he will spend the winters here and thus popularize the resort.

Man in Runaway Balloon.

Cossonay, Switz., April 16.—The Swiss Aero club's balloon, St. Gothard, is somewhere above the clouds with a man aboard who is totally ignorant of handling the air craft. The balloon was returning from a flight with a pilot and three passengers. During an attempt to land the basket was blown against a rock by a gust of wind and the pilot and two of the passengers were thrown out. Thus lightened the balloon shot up to a height of 15,000 feet and whirled away with the third passenger.

Eastern Millers Buyers.

Winnipeg, April 16.—Eastern millers were heavy buyers of Canadian wheat in Duluth. One million bushels were sold by Minnipeg holders to this class of buyers. Sensational news from Chicago of a late winter wheat crop was the cause of a panic and a big business was done on the local exchange. The Canadian Northern railway decided to discontinue grain shipments to Duluth, and lifted the embargo at Port Arthur, and will accept all grain shipments for Port Arthur terminals.

Woman Strangled With Rope.

New York, April 16.—Strangled to death with a rope, Mrs. Rose Cucenello, aged 40, was found lying on a bed in her home on the East Side. She had been dead for several hours, and the police believe it a case of murder. The woman's husband is said to be in Chicago.

Jack Johnson Is Denied.

Chicago, April 16.—Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, was refused permission to place his sister, Fannie Johnson, suffering from ptomaine poison, caused by eating oysters, in Rhodes avenue hospital, which admits no negroes.

Baby Advertised for Sale.

Chicago, April 16.—Anna Sapieha, 8 months old, is for sale for $5,000 by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sapieha, according to an advertisement in a newspaper here. There were six in the family before the arrival of Anna.

Aviator Injured in Auto.

Newton, Mass., April 16.—Harry N. Atwood, the aviator, his parents and Miss Hilda Norman were injured when their automobile collided with a streetcar.

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast assures Katherine of his protection, and she informs him that they are to abandon the island immediately.

CHAPTER XVI.—(Continued.)

Coast waited to hear no more. Dumb with rage—to be so tricked and bamboozled! to have his teeth drawn in such a manner, by a blind man, almost without a struggle!—he stooped, picked up a heavy monkey-wrench, and threw himself at Blackstock.

Before he had covered half the scant distance between them, however, he was caught up suddenly from behind, jerked back and held, struggling, kicking, helpless as a child in the arms of Chang.

As if he were wholly unaware of what was taking place, Blackstock's voice rumbled on: ". . . adopted this means of making my wishes known. I trust you won't resent it when you wake up to the reasonableness of my attitude. You weren't hurt—of that I'm sure—beyond your feelings, perhaps. And," he added, suavely sardonic, "I beg to apologize for the indignity, Mr. Handyside."

CHAPTER XVII.

To his own advantage Coast was gifted with the ability to recognize the irremediable and concede it as such. With quiet resolution he calmed himself at that moment when he was cold with despair, thrilled with apprehension, hot with anger, trembling with humiliation, and powerless in the grasp of one to whom his most determined struggles were as impotent as the writhing of the butterfly whose wings you imprison between thumb and forefinger. The arms of the big Chinaman wound round him were as sinewy and long as those of a gorilla, as strong as bands of steel; he could as readily break their embrace as he could summon a jinnee to his aid by twisting the ring upon his finger.

He schooled himself to resignation. "Very well," he said in a passionless voice. "You've got your own way of making a civil request, and I don't pretend to like it; but I'll be grateful if you'll instruct this Chinese giant to let me go."

"What! are you there, Chang?" Blackstock's simulation of surprise was admirable—if it were simulation. "You may release Mr. Handyside," he continued; "he has promised to be good."

Without a word the Chinaman dropped his arms and stepped aside. His face, when Coast saw it, was as stolid as always; only the yellow eyes, glinting like a cat's through their heavy, half-closed lids, seemed to hold a hint of derision.

Coast lifted his shoulders in a shrug not of bravado but of endurance, turned to the tool bench by the motor and replaced the wrench. His thoughts were all confusion; again an incident mocked him with hidden meaning. What was he to understand—that Blackstock recognized his voice and knew him for himself, Garrett Coast? That he suspected him of being another than Handyside—a spy of the Treasury Department, in short—and had determined to disarm him as a matter of common precaution, suspending sentence until he had determined precisely who he was?

"You're wondering," said Blackstock, "why I didn't demand this gun before taking it by force. Aren't you?"

"I am." Coast assented bluntly.

"For one reason, because I wouldn't 've got it. Would I?"

"Certainly not. What right—"

"One moment: I 'm coming to that." Blackstock smiled his secret smile, weighing the weapon reflectively before bestowing it securely in a hip-pocket. "It was a matter of discipline—morale is the better word. You had to be made to understand that on this island I am dictator, my word law, my wishes law's equivalent. Your personal independence doesn't amount to a row of tacks, so long's you're on No Man's Land; I'm boss, and you've got to come to me. I don't allow anybody but myself to tote a gun here, and since I knew you'd refuse a request, I took this spectacular means of making our relations clear as daylight. The main trouble with Power was his exaggerated conception of the importance of his blessed ego; when I gave him a practical demonstration of its relative insignificance in the cosmic scheme, he got peevish. Don't you make the same mistake."

"I'm surprised," retorted Coast, deliberately offensive, "that Power didn't beg to be allowed to stay and lick your boots."

"That," said Blackstock, with an open grin, "sounds suspiciously like mutiny, Mr. Handyside."

"Call it any name you like. Possibly you may find somebody to knuckle under to such treatment for the privilege of earning a bare living on this God-forsaken island, but . . . Well, it wasn't Power and it won't be me. I've had enough of you and I'm finished. Get Voohhis to send you another man as soon as you like: I leave, the first chance that turns up."

"Then the sooner you get that motor running, the quicker you'll be suited," returned Blackstock. "You'd better get busy."

"Go to the devil," said Coast coolly. "If you send out any messages from this station, some one else will have repaired your motor—I shan't. Good-night!"

"Good-night, Mr. Handyside," rang in his ears accompanied by a jeering laugh, as he took himself off, through the door to the open; but he paid no attention.

Lacking any excuse to linger in the vicinity of the bungalow, he continued at leisure toward the farm-house, consistently at every step more troubled with doubts, anxieties, forebodings. It was well enough (he thought) to make the best of a bad business! but—Appleyard was not to return until nightfall. It was now half-past four of a sultry, overcast and misty afternoon. In the two and a half or three hours of daylight to follow, what might not happen? What if Blackstock purposed leaving No Man's Land in the little catboat within that interim? What could possibly be contrived to stop him by one man, unfriended and unarmed? . . .

Pausing at the farm-house only briefly to make sure Katherine was not there, without purpose, in weary despondency he wandered on, down through the Cold Lairs toward the beach.

As he drew near the spot where the collie kept its vigil, the animal, apparently recognizing his footsteps, rose and whined a woe-begone welcome. He stopped out of sheer compassion, sensible of a vague feeling of fellowship with the dog, since he, too, was outcast, defenceless and impotent, the sport of malign circumstances. That thought rankled. . . .

Presently it occurred to him that the dog must be hungry. On sudden impulse he left it, went back to the farm-house kitchen, and without word of explanation to the Chinese there, foraged for scraps until he had heaped a pan with food; with which he returned to the collie.

It ate ravenously, as if breaking a long fast. And while he stood watching it, wondering at the dumb fidelity which had kept it steadfast beside the grave though it slowly starved—he heard a faint cry from seaward, turned in surprise, and saw Katherine stumbling hurriedly up from the beach. Though she had evidently been running for some distance and was flushed and breathless, there was something more than haste in her manner; there was its stimulus, a commingling of strong emotions so interdependent and confused that he found them unintelligible and recognized only intense excitement into which they merged.

"Garrett," she gasped—"Garrett—I want you to tell me the truth, if you know it—the truth, Garrett, though I'm afraid to hear it . . . " She paused, shuddering, the crimson ebbing from her cheeks and lips while terror played like lightning in her eyes.

Cautiously he looked round. . . . But the deserted buildings shut them off from the farm-house, and there was no one visible on the bluffs or downs. He took her tenderly in his arms.

"There," he soothed her gently. "Tell me . . ."

"I'm afraid," she breathed brokenly. "It's too awful, Garrett, too dreadful. It can't be true . . ."

"Tell me," he begged, though now he knew.

"It's—about Mr. Power, Garrett. I—I—he never left this island."

"I know," he said.

She drew away, her eyes widening. "You knew, Garrett?"

"They—" he stammered—"It happened yesterday morning, just before I came ashore—about daybreak."

"You—you know this to be so?"

He told her briefly what and how he knew of the tragedy. "This dog," he concluded, "has been there—you must have noticed—by his grave ever since."

She nodded. "I saw him," she said in a low, vibrant voice, "but—I didn't understand. I remember thinking it strange. He was here when we came—a legacy from the former tenant—and Power was kind to him. He never would have anything to do with any of the rest of us—except me; Mr. Power fed him and he followed him everywhere, but my—he the dog hated, and the Chinese, too."

The brief explanation had helped to quiet her; but now as she stood staring blankly seaward, tears trembled in her lashes, and her lips trembled as she breathed convulsively.

"It's so terrible," she said in a dull and even monotone, dispirited and cheerless. "Was I born only to bring suffering and terror and death to all men near me?"

"Don't say such things," Coast pleaded wretchedly. "Just a little longer and—"

"But nothing can ever make me forget, Garrett . . . Mr. Power was kind—I don't believe especially high-principled or good—but he was thoughtful as to me and resented his treatment of me. It was because of that they were constantly at odds—and now, because of that . . . Oh, Garrett, Garrett!" she sobbed.

Silent, who knew no words to comfort her, he let her grief spend itself in his embrace. When she was more composed, he ventured a question that had been troubling him ever since she had betrayed her fears: How had she learned of this?

"It was the boat—the boat they said he stole," she explained listlessly. "I remember thinking at the time it wasn't like him—that he would have waited until the fog cleared, and then would have taken the sail-boat. He knew a great deal about the water, and knew that the tides run very strong between here and Squibnocket." She named the nearest point on Martha's Vineyard. "I thought it strange he should try to row across with nothing to guide him and the danger of being swept out to sea—"

CORN IN THE NORTH

FARMERS HAVE ENOUGH FOR THEIR OWN PLANTING, BUT CANNOT SUPPLY SOUTH.

SEED WELL ACCLIMATED.

Producers All Over State are Eagerly Following Advice of Telephone Bulletins.—Prompt Action Necessary.

Minneapolis.—Farmers of northern Minnesota have seed corn sufficient for their own use, that is acclimated, and tests high, according to information obtained at the land show of the Northern Minnesota Development Association here. The report of the high test is based on the investigation carried on at the land show by C. E. Brown, chief of demonstration farms in the state, who took specimens of the corn exhibited by each county. Since the seed was selected merely from its appearance for show purposes, Mr. Brown believes it stands to reason that northern Minnesota's corn is of high quality relative to germination and acclimation.

W. R. McKenzie, manager of the show, declares that condition of corn in northern Minnesota is due to the one cause that the farmers do not plant as much as is planted in the corn sections of the southern half and are therefore much more careful in selecting seed.

Frank B. Logan, assistant superintendent of agriculture at the State Fair, who is a resident of northern Minnesota, was at the land show. Relative to the seed corn supply in the north, he said:

"Northern Minnesota farmers have just enough seed corn for their own use. Seed merchants of the Twin City have searched the entire northern part for seed but have found comparatively none. As a general proposition the corn in the northern part of the state was good. That which was harvested early makes fine seed, but, of course, we have some corn that would not germinate. No one realized until too late that southern Minnesota would run short of seed corn and if they had, let me assure you, that our part of the state would have been to the rescue with seed that germinates 90 per cent or over. The seed corn from the northern part is a rapidly maturing and hardy seed. It is an excellent seed to produce corn in any part of Minnesota and Iowa also has been clamoring for it in years gone by."

No further reports have been received by M. L. Lane, commercial superintendent of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange Company, that would indicate new developments. The work of telephoning farmers is by no means complete, said Mr. Lane. In telephonic communications each day with various managers in the corn belt, Mr. Lane says he has learned that the farmers are taking to testing seed corn like "ducks to water."

A. D. Wilson, superintendent of the extension division of the farm school, said that he was preparing a series of letters on seed corn and how to plant it. This series will be for the purpose of instructing farmers whose seed corn does not test 90 per cent how to plant it. The preliminary advice was to plant thicker and hold off planting for more favorable weather and condition of the soil. Of course, this advice is not for the farmers whose seed tests the required 90 per cent, these producers being advised to go ahead just as in other years.

NO HEALTH OFFICER

Rochester Council Expects Offer of State Board and Civic League.

Rochester.—The Rochester city council refused the offer of the state board of health and the women of the civic league to employ a health officer, who would give his entire time to the city at no cost whatever to the municipality.

A short time ago the state board of health made an offer to Rochester to pay $1,000 toward a fund of $3,000 if the city would engage a health officer a man recommended by the board. The result of his work in this city would be used to procure legislation at the next session of the legislature making possible the employment of a health officer who would give his entire time to the work in any community, county or city, with state aid to one-half of the amount paid for the services.

The women of the Civic league of Rochester at first offered to raise $1,000 of the amount if the city would appropriate $1,000, and later increased their offer to $1,500, leaving $500 for the city to raise. At the last meeting of the council the Civic league offered to pay all the expenses of the health officer.

It is probable that the offer will be made to some other municipality.

CATHOLICS GOOD GIVERS

$25,000 Raised at Rochester Service as Nucleus of School Building Fund.

Rochester. — Twenty-five thousand dollars was pledged in this city on Easter Sunday by the St. John Catholic congregation for the erection of a high school and an institution for girls. Ground will be broken this week and the work rushed in the hope of having the two schools dedicated next fall. Only a year ago Christmas the church debt of $20,000 was wiped out.

SHOPS AT ST. CLOUD.

Great Northern May Remove Plant From Crookston, Is Rumor.

St. Cloud.—That St. Cloud may get the Crookston car shops of the Great Northern Railway is a rumor which, though unconfirmed, is in general circulation in railroad circles. It is apparent that St. Cloud is in line for some big improvement, shown in the frequency of the visits of the high officials, the increased activity at the shops here and the recent intimation of proposed changes. The officials now are contemplating the piping of water from Sauk river into a huge reservoir to be erected at the shops. It is believed that this can be done by a gravity system if the well is made deep enough, furnishing the shops with a splendid supply of good water. Plans have already been prepared for this improvement.

The shops at Crookston have recently been involved in labor troubles, several of the officials having been placed under arrest on charge preferred by members of the union who were "fired," claiming that the reason given for their discharge was the fact that they did belong to the union. It is understood that agitators were at work among the local men, who refused to consider their propositions, claiming that they were being fairly treated.

The officials have had but little trouble with the men at the shops here and are evidently delighted with the showing that has been made.

TALKS BY GOVERNOR

Advocates Betterment of Rural Social and Civic Life.

St. Cloud.—Greeted by big crowds at each place, Governor Eberhart spoke in Avon, Albany and Holdingford. At each stop he advocated the betterment of the social and civic life in rural communities. He dwelt on the necessity of agricultural and industrial education, both in and out of the schools, the centralization of interests by the establishment of social centers and a community interest on subjects pertaining to the different districts.

"The people of Minnesota are becoming known," said Governor Eberhart, "for their interest in agricultural problems, and to the educational expert there is no better field for investigation than the rural communities of this state, for it is there that the real growth of the upbuilding of a community through systematic effort is best exemplified."

TO INSPECT HATCHERY

Commission Also Will Look Over Trout Streams Near Winona.

Winona.—The members of the Minnesota state fish commission will come to Winona early next month to inspect the new Homer government fish hatchery and also to look over the trout streams in this section, according to an announcement made by the Winona County Fishermen's association. Plans are being made to entertain the visitors while in the city and to make their inspection of the Homer institution a thorough one.

It had been planned to have the commission come here earlier, but because of the high water in the trout streams and the fact that the season at the Homer plant is delayed the trip was postponed. Those who will come to Winona are Superintendent E. W. Cobb, George J. Bradley, O. J. Johnson, J. A. Wessel, E. L. Ogilvie and H. A. Rider.

DRIVES OUT TRAMPS

Former Police Chief Again in Charge at Little Falls, Minn.

Little Falls.—This city, which has been the mecca for hoboes and beggars for the last two years, has been thoroughly cleaned of this class by the new police force, which went on duty April 3.

W. T. Tourtillotte, for many years chief of the local police force, and dropped by a change in administration, has again been put in charge. The chief has a reputation all along the line of the Northern Pacific, and every hobo who travels in this section has heard of him and his strenuous methods of dealing with tramps.

Twenty-four Pay Legacy Tax.

St Paul.—Inheritance tax on two estates, determined by Judge George R. Smith of the probate court, amounting to $13,095.26, was paid by twenty-four heirs. The estate of Charles A. Bovey, estimated at $560,000 by Appraisers William A. Durst and Lincoln A. Bodge, paid the state $7,859.28, the property being divided so that twenty-one persons paid taxes. Three heirs to the Katherine S. Winston estate, valued at $257,375, paid a tax of $5,235.98. According to the order determining the tax, the cost of administration on the Bovey estate was $7,500 and on the Winston estate $12,582.

Great Lakes Breaking Up.

Duluth.—The winter's ice in the lake is breaking up rapidly. The field now extends only about 15 miles from the ship canal. A few days ago it seemed to be solid to Two Harbors. The steady breeze from the northeast while not strong did effective work. Fifteen miles from the ship canal there is open water half way across the lake. At Twenty-fourth avenue East the ice seems to be giving away in the middle making a channel of water through the ice to the ship canal.

COFFEE HURTS

One In Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum." "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

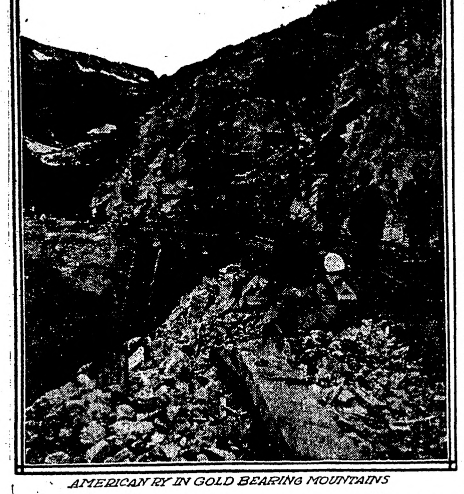
ALASKA'S TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM



AMERICAN RY IN GOLD BEARING MOUNTAINS

ALASKA'S greatest problem is transportation. And Alaska has problems of vital interest to every man in the United States who hopes for development of the country and for a square deal. People may fuss about the coal lands, may dispute about governmental action, may shiver at the thought of long and severe winters, but still the real problem before the great country of Alaska is transportation—not graft.

It is not every man who has taken time to consider Alaska as a part of the United States. It is not every man who has taken the trouble to learn that every Alaskan harbor south of Cook's inlet, on 60 degrees north latitude, is ice-free and open to navigation the year round. At the same time it is a well known fact that the ports of Montreal, Quebec, St. John, Albany and Buffalo are closed absolutely to navigation during the winter months. And the commerce of these Atlantic and lake ports is tremendous when considered with the shipping of the country year in and year out, writes A. H. Harris in the Los Angeles Times. As a matter of fact, the only important ports of Alaska that are closed by the severe weather of winter are Nome, St. Michaels and Fairbanks. Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway, Cordova, Valdez and Seward enjoy at least a weekly mail service from the United States by steamer.

Alaska, a country rich in minerals, in timber and in agricultural possibilities, 12 times the area of Ohio, has about 500 miles of railroad, operated by eight companies. Five of these roads are purely local, catering to the traffic of the mines in their respective territory. The other three, the Copper River and Northwestern, the White Pass and Yukon, and the Alaska Northern, are barely entitled to the title of railroads when considered on the basis of railroads in the United States proper. The White Pass and Yukon alone furnishes transportation facilities to the interior of Alaska by way of the Yukon river, partly through Canadian territory, with only 112 miles of track all told.

As the Yukon river freezes during a long period in winter, the White Pass road can only be used advantageously during the summer months. And it may be worth mentioning in passing that this railroad was built with London capital in an effort to develop that part of the great north country under the rule of the crown. In doing so it was necessary to pass through American territory to reach a port on the Pacific ocean. Even with the handicap of partial or complete idleness during the severe weather of winter, the road was a financial success from the beginning of operation.

Use Electric Cars.

At Seward a standard gauge road has been constructed for 72 miles and surveyed for 700 miles, including branch lines, through the very heart of Alaska. This road, the Alaska Northern, gives very good service with electric cars daily, and with steam freight trains as demand requires. The company does not attempt to operate in winter. Along the right of way of this road is the dog trail between Seward and the Iditarod mining district, used in winter as the only means of transportation.

At Valdez there is but little track laid, but the beginning of a road to the Fairbanks district has been made. The government trail to Fairbanks is one of the best in the country, and its building resulted in the opening of an immensely rich country tributary to Fairbanks and the Tanana river, and in developing a great gold-producing district. The Tanana River railroad, which is in 65 degerees north latitude, is enabled to operate trains all the year round.

Cordova, Valdez and Seward are and will be the real ports of Alaska. Skagway is an important port, but is mainly used in winter as the starting point for Dawson, which is in Canada, and not in Alaska, as many Americans seem to think. These three seaports are the natural termini for railroads to the interior, and the only places where the commerce of the country could be handled cheaply and successfully. Cordova is easily the railroad center of all Alaska, having more than 200 miles of track connected with the terminals on the coast. The Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate operates the road and gives pretty decent service. A man can take his camp equipment in 24 hours to interior points that before the advent of the road required months of unremitting toil to reach.

While railroad transportation is the great problem in Alaska, the building of roads and trails, especially wagon roads, is of great importance. In a country of such magnificent distances as Alaska claims, where much of the road-building must of necessity be in mountainous districts, the expense of constructing highways is enormous. And the system of construction so far employed has been piecemeal. Up to date the Alaska road commission has been handicapped for means to do the work necessary to meet the demands of settlements let alone to build feeders out into the country where the demand for roads is strong and continuous.

Good Roads Draw People.

In the building of roads and trails in Alaska Americans have much to learn from the Canadians, whose work in the Dawson country has put the average American road to shame. There is but little if any difference between the country on the American side of an imaginary line and that on the side of the Canadians, yet in the roads alone there is difference enough to designate the flag under which the work was done. On the Canadian side there are more people, drawn largely by the fact that they can travel, than there are on the side of the United States, and on one side is a well drained, smooth road with minimum grades, fit for automobile traffic, while on the American side strips of mud and rocks and roots are ruinous to man's body and soul. The Canadians have realized the need of permanent development, while the American has merely reached out for exploitation and profit.

When Americans and the United States congress get in as close touch with Alaska and her needs as have Canadians and the Canadian parliament with the needs of Canadian Alaska, then will come the end of Alaska's troubles. For at the bottom of it all is ignorance. Ignorance of its immense area; ignorance of its climate, varied and peculiar though it may be; ignorance of its resources aside from gold and coal; ignorance of its importance in the commerce of the world, and, worst of all, ignorance of its people. The most widespread and injurious misconceptions are probably those regarding the climate and the people. The generally accepted notion is that Alaska is a land of perpetual snow and ice, inhabited mainly by Eskimo, while the facts are that not one-third of the area of American Alaska is within the arctic circle, and that the majority of the population is white, a sturdy mixture of the best elements of the Caucasian race. In other words, the people of Alaska are of the same stock as those who built Oregon, Washington and California, that sturdy class which has ever been in the forefront of pioneering since the days of Plymouth Rock.

These people have troubles, but the greatest obstacle to progress is lack of transportation. And the solution is easy—money and brains.

Talk is said to be cheap, but did you ever take into consideration the actual cost of a session of congress?

IMPROVED DAIRYING METHODS AIDS IN INCREASING PROFITS

Personal Liking for Breed of Cows Dairyman Selects and Proper Care in Handling Them are Essential to Success—Sunlight is Best Disinfectant Obtainable in Barn.

A Champion English Jersey.

(By J. H. FRANDSON.)

It is certainly true in dairying as in any other business that one's success in a large measure is gauged by his love and interest of the business.

It is generally a conceded fact that dairying yields a larger profit than can be expected from any other branch of farming. A good cow will annually yield not much less than 300 pounds of butter which at 28 cents a pound is worth $84. Adding to this the value of 6,000 pounds of skim milk at 20 cents per 100 pounds, and ten dollars, which ought to be a fair value for the calf, we would have a total of $106. Allowing $50 as a fair allowance for feed consumed, we still have $56 as a profit to pay for the labor and interest on the investment.

However, in addition to this direct profit, we must not fail to lay stress on the importance of dairying as a means of retaining the fertility of the soil. By feeding the raw materials of the farm to the dairy cows, we are not only manufacturing high-priced products but we are retaining upon the farm almost the entire amount of fertilizing material taken from the soil by the growing crops.

By selling only cream, or butter, fully 95 per cent of the fertilizing material contained in the feed is retained on the farm. One ton of oats takes from the soil as much fertility as 4.1 tons of cream. As much fertility would be taken from the soil in $26 worth of wheat as in $390 worth of cream.

By dairying only about 5 per cent of fertility is taken from the soil, the balance of the finished product being made by plant life from water, air, and sunshine, and as a result, dairy farms in Europe have succeeded in maintaining their soil fertility for more than 1,000 years, while some of our grain farms have been almost exhausted in 50 years.

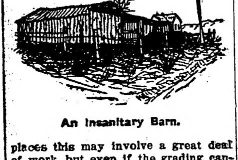
If one would be successful in the dairy business he must necessarily start with such cows as will give a good foundation stock and from which he can gradually build up a herd. To expect to build up a dairy herd from animals suited especially for making beef is beginning the business with a serious handicap.

A comparison of the beef and dairy types of animal is perhaps the most effective way of showing what are the distinct dairy characteristics. The beef breeds are blocky in form, are heavy and sluggish, while the dairy animal is spare and angular and refined with a soft and pliable hide well covered with smooth, soft hair. The head is lean and a little longer than that of the beef type. The neck is long and lean, joining to the body rather abruptly. The withers are sharp, with the spinal column prominent and the barrel long and capacious, indicating good feeding capacity. The ribs are sprung down and outward and wide spaced, the heart and loin girth large and the tail fine with a heavy switch. The form of the dairy cow is frequently spoken of as the "triple wedge" form. First, she shows increased depth of body towards the rear when viewed from one side. Secondly, she widens gradually from the breast to the points of the hips. Thirdly, looking down on the back the form widens gradually downward like a wedge. The udder is well developed and evenly quartered; is soft and pliable but not flabby when emptied. The milk veins are large and tortuous and enter the abdominal wall in two or more large milk wells.

The dairy type can be found in many of the breeds, but most characteristically in the distinct dairy breeds. By the dairy breeds are meant those that have become most noted for uniformly conforming to the true dairy type. They are Holsteins, Jerseys, Guernseys and Ayrshires. Owing to the careful work of the breeders in maintaining the purity of the breeds and fixing their characteristics, these breeds can, in most cases, be counted on to reproduce their dairy qualities and their ability to produce butter-fat in large quantities. It is largely for this reason that the dairyman who desires success to follow his efforts should stick close to one of the dairy breeds.

If wholesome and sanitary milk is to be produced the farmer should realize that the cows must be kept out of the mud as much as possible. Conditions in and around the barn can, in many cases, be greatly improved by draining and grading. Draining is not of itself sufficient, as the tramping of the cattle soon puddles the surface, thus practically preventing the water from reaching the tiles below.

The barnyard should have good slope such as will insure good surface drainage, and should have a good top layer of gravel or cinders. In many places this may involve a great deal of work, but even if the grading cannot all be done in one year arrangements should be made by which at least part of it is done every year.



An Insanitary Barn.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that we have no better disinfectant than good, old-fashioned sunlight. For this reason in planning our barns much more attention should be paid to the question of securing sufficient light. Dairy authorities suggest that four square feet of glass should be allowed for each cow in the barn. Long windows reaching well to the ceiling have been found the most satisfactory.

SUITABLE FEED FOR THE CATTLE

Method Depends Wholly on Age and Future of the Stock—Good Ration for Young Calves.

The feeding of cattle depends upon the age and the future of the animals. If fed for market a liberal supply of palatable food is necessary. If for merely holding through the winter, feed the coarser, cheaper feeds, Cattle to be grazed during the summer will do the best if not turned on the grass too fat. The change of feed retards the growth. The feed that is consumed to put on this surplus of fat is lost.

Calves should have the best roughage available. There should be sufficient palatable and nutritious foods to keep them at their maximum growth until they are put on the grass. When the calves are from six to twelve months old they should not be fed the coarser feeds. A good daily gain for a calf is from one to one and a half pounds.

Seed Planting.

The germination of seed requires three essentials—heat, moisture and air. Therefore it is folly to put seeds in the ground until it has been warmed by the sun. Corn planting time in your locality is about the proper time for the majority of seeds.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD

NEW APPARATUS FOR OCULIST

Swiss Scientist Perfects Electromagnets for Extracting Metal Particles From Eye.

Electromagnets of special construction have been made use of for some time by oculists in extracting metal particles which accidentally penetrate the eye, but this apparatus, designed by a Swiss oculist, is of a new and advanced type, says the Popular Mechanics. An important feature is the form given the active pole, for the less the pole projects out of its windings the stronger is its power of attraction. The field of operation, however, must not be obstructed, so the new electromagnet is made bell-shaped. The windings near the pole are of the same general shape so as to leave the field of vision equally free on all surrounding sides of the operating point.

USE FOR ELECTRIC TRUCKS

Boston Terminal Railroad Company Employs Electricity for Handling Baggage and Freight.

Small electric trucks are used for the South station, Boston, for handling both freight and baggage.

The adoption of the electric truck has been brought about by the huge volume of material handled at this railway terminal. When the freight was handled by hand, it was almost impossible to properly take care of it.

These trucks are built low to the ground, and have a wheel base of 52 inches. A platform is provided on which the operator may stand when the truck is in service. The battery box is located directly under the platform, but in such a position as will not interfere with the wheels in making the sharp turns to which the truck is subjected.

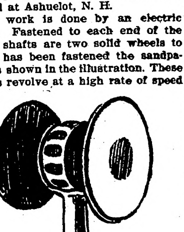
For this class of work the electric vehicle has been found ideal in every respect. The simple and easy control, the reliability, the safety and lack of any disagreeable odors or noise, are the reasons why it has been adopted in Boston.

ELECTRIC MOTOR SAVES TIME

New Hampshire Box Factory Has Novel Method of Doing Sandpapering—Works Quickly.

Sandpapering by electricity is what is being done in a large box factory located at Ashuelot, N. H.

The work is done by an electric motor. Fastened to each end of the motor shafts are two solid wheels to which has been fastened the sandpaper, as shown in the illustration. These wheels revolve at a high rate of speed and do the work in about one-quarter of the time required to do it by hand.



Sandpapering Machine.

This sandpapering device is only one of the many applications of electricity in the plant. In all, 30 motors of varying sizes are used to operate the plant.

Electric Railways.

Electric railways have been extended further and further into the country, linking together the villages and hamlets, the cities and towns, until it is quite possible to travel from Boston to Chicago via the trolley cars. Steam railroads have been electrified and self-contained cars of the gas-electric type now operate on the many short lines

BARLEY THRESHED BY MOTOR

Ohio Farmer Breaks Record for Time When He Adopts Electrical Method for Quick Work.

William Stroop, who has a farm in the Miami valley, near Dayton, O., had a crop of barley that he wanted threshed last fall, so he sent for the owner of the local threshing outfit to do the work. He came with his 33-inch separator and his big steam traction engine and proceeded to set up for business.

Mr. Stroop had been using a 15-horsepower electric motor about his farm buildings for cutting and grinding feed, sawing wood, etc., shifting it to various positions, as desired, and making connections with little trouble. He suggested to the owner of the thresher that the motor be used in place of his engine, to which the latter agreed, though his engineer doubted the ability of the small motor to run the separator at full capacity.

The machine was set, however, and the belt adjusted, and when the power was turned on its strength was speedily demonstrated by the rapidity with which the sheaves disappeared and the grain poured out. Hour after hour the work proceeded without stopping, and when the job was finished it was found that in less than 12 hours more than 1,700 bushels of grain had been threshed, an average of 150 bushels an hour.

WAY OF DISINFECTING BOOKS

Problem of Preventing Spread of Contagious Diseases Is Solved by Mississippi Man.

Every public library faces the problem of disinfecting its books so as to prevent the spreading of contagious diseases and in some localities this has become quite a serious problem. A Mississippi man has a novel solution for it, says the Popular Electricity. He places the books on a revolving rack against which small electric blowers are forcing jets of air. The breeze not only rotates the whole rack, but also spreads out and flutters the leaves so that the air can readily pervade them. By dropping some disinfectant into the chamber from which the blowers get their supply of air, this is finely distributed through the books.

Improve Efficiency of Telephone.

The efficiency of the present telephone apparatus has been greatly increased by a Danish banker. Knowing that sound is more readily transmitted through rarefied air he has constructed an apparatus to warm the transmitter, whereby the air in it becomes thinner and the sound is intensified. Conversations between Copenhagen and Nykjobing, a distance of some 75 miles, could be clearly followed some distance away from the instrument.

ELECTRICAL NOTES

Massachusetts is believed to lead all of the states in its percentage of motor-propelled vehicles.

Electric lights are to be installed in one of the oldest and most famous Hindu temples in India.

It takes three-tenths of a second for a signal to pass over the 2,700 miles of an Atlantic cable.

New York is installing additional high-pressure motor-driven fire pumps in two of its pumping stations.

Electric taxicabs are being extensively used in the larger cities of Europe, notably Paris and London.

It is stated that the weekly royalties of Mr. Edison from moving picture inventions amounts to $8,000.

A motor plow for throwing up trenches on a battlefield to afford protection to soldiers is a recent invention.

One of the newest musical instruments, operated by electricity, reproduces the notes of 45 orchestra performers.

In 1909 there were only four electric furnaces used in Europe in preparing steel for castings. There are now over 400.

New Zealand now has over 2,780 miles of railway. Electrification of certain sections is now under contemplation.

A new submarine cable between England and France has resulted in telephonic communication between England and Switzerland.

Street lighting has been developed until many cities boast a "Great White Way" and night is practically turned into day in the business sections.

Electric smelting and refining processes are said to produce steel that is denser and more homogeneous than open-hearth steel of the same general composition.

In 1909 the telegraph and telephone companies, together with similar concerns that use electric wires in this country, expended over $7,000,000 in the purchase of poles.

SOCIETY WOMEN AS MILLINERS

A SCORE or more of well-known society women of New York gathered in the home of Mrs. Henry L. Burnett and plied their needles with a vim, turning out pretty spring bonnets, which were to be distributed among one hundred and eight little maids of the Sunday Kindergarten association, who, by good behavior, have won each a prize of an Easter hat. The hats made by the women were judged by a man milliner and prizes for the best style and workmanship were awarded in the form of orders for portraits to be painted by six well-known artists. The photograph shows Miss Yvonne Stemmler (on left) and Miss Helen Rich.

HUGE TURTLE FIGHTS BATTLE

Jumping on Its Back, John Jordan, Aided by Servants, Landed the Monster.

Palm Beach, Fla.—John Jordan of Buffalo, a guest of William J. Conners, his brother-in-law, was attacked while bathing by one of the largest turtles ever seen here, and for 15 minutes was threatened by severe bodily inury, if not death by drowning. He escaped with bites on his arms and legs. A turtle has not been known before to attack a man in these waters.

Mr. Jordan entered the water alone in front of the Conners cottage and was swimming about 200 feet from shore when the turtle rose under him. It immediately struck him and he jumped on its back. The turtle swam for deep water and then dived, unseating Mr. Jordan. Coming to the surface it again struck at him viciously. Unable to swim away, Jordan figured his safety lay in clinging to the turtle's back, and using his feet as a rudder, and holding to the flippers he steered it towards shore.

Miss Alice Conners, seeing his plight from the piazza, summoned two Japanese servants, who rushed with a clothesline. Forming a noose they got it over the turtle's head after a struggle, in which both were bitten. The turtle measured five feet and a half.

KITTENS ARRIVE IN THE HAY

Little Family Travels Fifteen Days From Northern Illinois to New Home.

Montclair, N. J.—Thomas Wood of Label street is the possessor, though not the owner, of a cat and five kittens that came to him in a carload of hay from a small town in northern Illinois. The Erie railroad, over which the car arrived, assures him it will put in no claim for the animals. A blue ribbon around the neck of the mother cat possibly may lead to her identification.

The bill of lading shows the car was in transit 15 days, and was not opened until it reached here, so that the cat must have lived for that time without food or water. Wood will keep the cat unless her owner can prove claim to the property. The kittens will be offered to buyers of the hay, with a brief history of their adventure. The largest kitten will go with the first sale.

FUNERAL IS ROUTED BY FIRE

Hundred-Year-Old Descendant of Betsy Ross Buried at Coe's Landing.

Huntington, W. Va.—While funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Edith A. Floyd, grand-daughter of Betsy Ross, the maker of the first American flag, were in progress at Coe's Landing, the Methodist Episcopal church in which they were held took fire. The building was burned to the ground.

Mrs. Floyd, whose funeral was being held, was past one hundred years old. She was the grand-daughter of the maker of the original Stars and Stripes, and her husband, Finlay Floyd, who died forty years ago, was a grandson of the Floyds who signed the Declaration of Independence.

GROUND HOG IN LONG TRIP

Animal With Wanderlust to Come by Way of Chicago on Journey Around World.

Salt Lake City.—The wonderlust of a small ground hog, which entered Salt Lake recently on the brake beam of a Western Pacific passenger train, is to be gratified by a trip around the world. Western Pacific railroad men, who adopted the animal, have prepared a crate plastered with directions as to his care and a resume of his travels, which will carry him east over the Rio Grande to Denver and thence to Kansas City, Chicago, New York, Washington and Boston, across the ocean and around the world as a special guest of transportation men.

BABIES ARE IN FASHION

Last Year 5,462 More Children Were Born in First City of the U. S. Than During the Preceding Twelve Months.

New York.—You, Mr. Bachelor, and you, Miss Suffragette, don't sniff and turn up your noses at the babies—heaven bless them! The time has at last arrived when babies are in fashion again among the fashionable. Just read here what Dr. W. H. Guilfoy, head of the department of records at New York's health department, has to say.

"The birth rate in New York is gradually going up. Since 1898 it has risen about 3 per cent.

"Last year there were born in New York City just 134,542 babies, an increase of 5,462 over the year before. Now, had the rate not increased since 1898, when the greater city was first inaugurated, there would have been 15,000 fewer babies born than actually were. Pretty good record for pleasure loving New York!"

And it takes only half an eye to see for yourself the meaning of Dr. Guilfoy's statistics. There are babies in bunches, here, there and everywhere, all over the big city. The east side has its share, but so has the west side and the central districts of the town, where wealth and fashion dwell in luxury.

There used to be a threadbare story about there being no babies to speak of along 5th avenue, and much was made out of the talk that the rich were not doing their duty by society or the community. All of which was largely tommyrot. The real reason was and is—that New York's most distinguished thoroughfare—where trade has not crept in—is given over to the mansions of middle aged and elderly people whose children are all grown up.

But walk over to the eastward a bit in the side streets from 5th to 3d avenue and see the babies and the baby carriages there. You can get a mighty good idea of how fast the babies are coming to the well to do. These side streets are inhabited by the grownup sons and daughters of the rich and socially prominent.

Remember, these are not the babies of apartment house people, but the children of those who live in brownstone houses—not yet in the mansions of their fathers and mothers which they stand to inherit. And the mothers of these shiny-faced infants are the young matrons of society, just as the fathers of them belong to all the best clubs in the city.

Why, the only way a clubman can get his son into the exclusive Knickerbocker club, where the initiation is $200 and the dues $100 a year, is to "put him up" as soon as he is born, and the waiting list of the club is today filled with the names of baby boys. One proud father, who lives in a house with forty rooms, has three babies on the list just waiting till they are 21.

AIMS AT JAIL GOODS

Congress Passes Bill That May Uproot Convict Labor.

Measure if Enacted by Senate Probably Would Mark Beginning of the End of Long Struggle Between States and Unions.

Washington.—Almost unnoticed the house has passed a bill which may mark the beginning of the end of a struggle which organized labor has been making for over a hundred years against convict-made goods, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. This bill, which was introduced by Representative Booher of Missouri, provides, in effect, that "all goods . . . manufactured wholly or in part by convict labor, or in any prison or reformatory, transported into any state . . . shall, upon arrival and delivery in such state, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state . . . and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced in original packages or otherwise."

"Should this pass both houses," said Julian Leavitt, author of recent magazine articles on the prisons of the United States, "it would root out the contract system from all the state prisons in a few years."

The bill has a long and, to labor, discouraging history. It was originally framed by the industrial commission of 1900. It has been pushed by the labor people ever since, but with little progress until the present congress. Recently, however, it has had the support not only of the labor people, but also of employers of free labor in several states who, as the report of the house committee on labor affirms, "unite in affirming that when any convict-made product is placed in competition with the product of free labor the market becomes demoralized, even a small sale affecting prices far out of proportion to the amount of the sale. Every state objects to being made the market for convict-made goods produced in other states."

It appears that half the states in the union have abolished the contract system in their prisons, while the other half retain it in one form or another. The abolition states, however, have merely become the dumping ground for the convict-made goods of other states, so that working women of New York, for example, still must meet convict competition from Maryland, Kentucky, Missouri and so on, although New York herself drove out the contract system in 1894. The bill simply aims to subject convict-made goods to the laws of the particular state into which they are imported.

"The manufacturers," said Representative Hensley of Missouri, in reporting the bill to the house, "look upon the competition of prison-made goods from other states as a special grievance.

Organized labor, it is understood, as well as some of the manufacturing interests of the country, are combining their efforts to urge upon the senate the necessity for the passage of this bill. It is now in the keeping of the senate committee on judiciary.

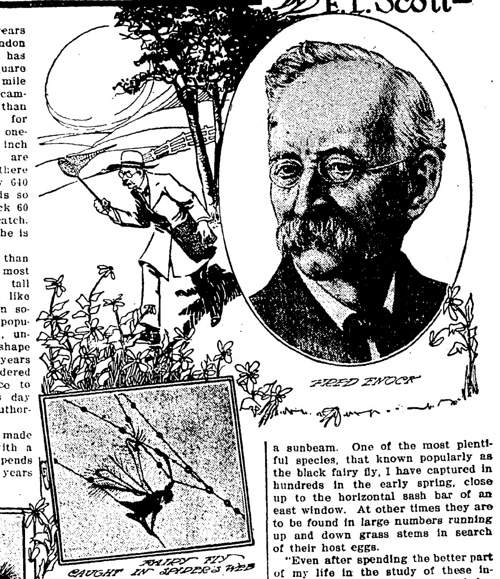
HUNTS 33 YEARS for RARE FLY

By E. L. Scott



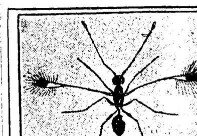
FRED ENOCK

FAIRY FLY CAUGHT IN SPIDER'S WEB

FOR more than 33 years Fred Enock, a London man of science, has been scouring square mile upon square mile of England with a cambric net no bigger than your hat, looking for an insect less than one-twentieth of an inch long. So scarce are some kinds of these insects that there are said to be only two in every 640 acres, and the finding of them is so rare a feat that one must go back 60 years to read of a previous catch. Now Enock has landed one, and he is the happiest man in England.

Enock is a fellow of no fewer than four scientific societies and a most learned looking man, with a tall dome of a forehead. He talks like an annual report of the Linnean society. The insects have ben popularly christened fairy flies, and, until Enock fell in love with the shape of one under the microscope 33 years ago, men of science had considered them of not enough importance to waste time over. And to this day Enock remains almost the sole authority upon their playful habits.

Surely much ado was never made about less. Here is a man with a more than ordinary brain who spends almost two score of precious years looking for a few insects that will never be of any possible use to humanity or probably to science, and the total result of his long search could be put in a peanut shell. Of course, he has done other work; he is a mounter of insects for collectors, and he tells me that according to accurate records he has kept he has mounted no fewer than 200,000 specimens. In addition, he is a lecturer, in popular style, on natural history subjects, and he travels about England explaining to the rising generation, the evolution of the spider, the wasp, the bee, the butterfly and his lifelong friend, the fairy fly. But how many valuable hours have been stolen from more productive fields of effort to spend with his net, his bottles and his microscope on the invisible trail of the elusive fairy fly only Enock knows. If it were possible to calculate the amount of money wasted by him in his strange quest, it would probably be found that his fairy flies are worth many times their weight in radium. It will be entertaining to let Enock tell of his queer search in his own words, but you must remember that when he speaks of fairy flies as the most beautiful insects in the world he is like a fond parent describing his favorite child, and prone to exaggeration.



BATTLEDORE WING FLY

"My introduction to the fairy fly," he said, "was at a meeting of the Royal Microscopical society of 1878. A species no larger than a fiftieth of an inch entangled in a spider's web was shown to us, and I immediately lost my heart to it. It had four wings exquisitely shaped and margined with hairs. I determined that I would search out the life history of these insects, and thus began my long quest for some of the rarer species.

"At that time practically nothing was known of them. They were so small that they had quite escaped the attention of scientists. The first mention of them was in 1797, and then nothing was heard of them for more than 80 years. I soon found out that they belonged to the same order as the honey bee and the wasp—sort of poor relations, so to speak. In size they vary from a twentieth to a ninetieth of an inch in length. Figures as small as that convey no impression to the ordinary mind. Perhaps it might be better if I say that a dozen of these beauties could walk abreast through an ordinary pinhole. They search out the eggs of certain other insects and in them lay their own, thus destroying the host eggs. Each species has a different kind of host egg, and in no circumstance will they lay their eggs in any other way.

"During the 30 odd years I have been searching for these flies, I have discovered eight new genera and at least 150 new species. For the last four years I had the assistance of Charles Owen Waterhouse, formerly a member of the staff of the Natural History Museum, at South Kensington, who, like myself, became fascinated by the marvelous beauty of these fairy flies when seen under the microscope, and decided to devote his time to searching them out."

One can picture these two men, both hovering around the middle 60s, armed with cambric nets, a collection of empty glass tubes and microscopes, both possessed of the enthusiasm that knows no discouragement, tramping over the fields of England day in and day out, content if once in a blue moon either caught a new species.

Enock gave to the writer a description of probably the greatest moment in his life, when he discovered in the bottom of his net the male fairy fly of a certain species, for which he had been searching patiently for the whole 30 odd years of his acquaintance with the insects. Females he had landed before, but the male was so rare that 60 years had elapsed since anyone had put one between glasses and submitted it to the prying eye of the microscope.

"Waterhouse and I had been sweeping Burnham Beeches with our nets all one Saturday afternoon," he said. "I intended going home for dinner, and as Waterhouse was staying out we parted, he going to the west and I staying in the field. I determined to have a few more sweeps before leaving, and at their conclusion I examined the bottom of my net with my microscope. I became dizzy with excitement when I saw there the very insect I had given more than 30 years of my life to find—the male of a rare species of which there are only two in every square mile. In honor of King George I immediately christened it Mymar regalis. In my excitement, however, I almost lost the treasure. He hopped away, and although I immediately closed the net I thought I had lost him. During the next few minutes I was almost dead with anxiety, but an examination soon convinced me that I still had him captive and in a few seconds he was safely bottled.

"Wonderful as this catch was, it was rendered more wonderful still by the fact that in the same net I discovered a species of a minute insect of which there was no record of any previous catch for 90 years. I soon had it, too, safely in a bottle and started as fast as my old legs would carry me after Waterhouse to tell him the great news. I ran and walked four miles that day before I finally found him. 'What do you think this is?' I asked him, trying to remain as calm as possible and showing him the Mymar regalis. As soon as he realized, he offered me his congratulations. Then I showed him my other find and there were more congratulations. That was a day to remember all the rest of one's life.

"But these fairy flies are not all as scarce as the Mymar regalis. Far from it. Despite the fact that they have been overlooked by the great body of naturalists, they are to be found in every garden and on every window—in houses, in conservatories and in trains. When I was younger and my sight was better I used to catch them with my hands as they flew, like tiny specks of gold, across a sunbeam. One of the most plentiful species, that known popularly as the black fairy fly, I have captured in hundreds in the early spring, close up to the horizontal sash bar of an east window. At other times they are to be found in large numbers running up and down grass stems in search of their host eggs.

"Even after spending the better part of my life in the study of these insects I am compelled to acknowledge that I know very little of them. Of the 21 genera now comprised in the British fairy flies, I have been able to work out the life history of but two. Of course, I know considerable about others of the remaining nineteen, and year by year I am adding links that I hope will eventually complete the life cycles.

"The common black fairy fly lays its eggs in those of a small water beetle, found on stems of plants below the water line. In order, therefore, to get to its host eggs this fairy fly must dive beneath the water. The Alaptus, another common species, searches for the eggs of a fly resembling the common green fly, the pest of the gardener. The tiny Camptopera papavis, one of the smallest of fairy flies, sometimes appears in hundreds on windows, and at my home in Woking I have captured no fewer than 600, all female, at one time.

"One of the most extraordinary little insects is that known as Caraphractus cinctus. It is aquatic in its habits, using its delicately fringed wings for 'flying' through the water. Its legs are kept perfectly still during the operation and the fly progresses with a jerky, zigzag motion.

"These insects appear in early spring—some of them in March—and I have captured them as late as December. They are difficult to breed because of the difficulty of discovering their host eggs.

"Of all insects, that popularly called battledore wing fly is without doubt the most wonderfully formed and most beautiful I have ever looked upon. It is less than one-twentieth of an inch in length, with its two front wings shaped like long-handled battledores, surrounded by a fringe of long hairs. The hind wings, so tiny that even under a powerful microscope the ordinary observer does not see them, are armed with three minute hooks on the upper edge, which fix into grooves on the upper wings and so form a strengthening bracket. My first capture of the battledore wing fly was made 33 years ago and it was only last year, after constant efforts, that I was able to breed it."

Speaking generally, Enock had high praise for the work of the bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture. He constantly corresponds with Dr. Leland O. Howard, its famous chief, for whom he has a great admiration.

"If we only had the brains in this country that you have in the United States," remarked Enock, sorrowfully, "we might be able to give something worth while to science. We know absolutely nothing about the life history of the majority of crop pests, and there is no organization such as your bureau of entomology to advise the farmers of Great Britain. The trouble is there is no money available for field work, and when a government grant is made the money is spent in some ineffective way that is of absolutely no practical use to the farmer. Some day I suppose we shall wake up."

125,000 AMERICANS GO TO CANADA IN 1911.

THE YEAR 1912 WILL SHOW A GREAT INCREASE.

In a report of the House Committee (Washington) appears the following: "Canada offers a three-year homestead upon good land, easily reclaimed and cultivated, with six months' leave of absence each year and most lenient regulations."

All of which is true and it is now the part of the careful reader to consider the opportunities that exist in Western Canada which, in addition to the above, are attractive features. The evidence of these is found in the letters contributed by some of the settlers. For instance: A former Minnesotan, writing from Warner, Southern Alberta, speaks of that district, but what he says, applies generally to all of Southern Alberta. He says:

"I have seen six crops, four of them were first class, one of them a very good crop, and the other a poor crop. Government statistics for the last fifteen years show that this country has averaged about fifteen or sixteen inches of moisture. In 1910 there was only seven inches, and in 1911 twenty-two inches. The 1909 crop was about as good as I have seen in this country and we had about twelve inches of moisture, so that I am thoroughly convinced that with normal conditions, that is, from twelve to fifteen inches of moisture, and with the natural increase of population and immigration, that Southern Alberta will be one of the very best mixed farming districts in the world. We have good soil, good water, and a good climate, and altogether just as desirable a country to live in as Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, or Wisconsin."

Hundreds of letters are on file from former American settlers, which give good reasons why the Western Canada lands are being settled so rapidly. Full particulars can be had of any Canadian Government Agent, who will furnish literature and give low rate certificates. Excursions are being run daily.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

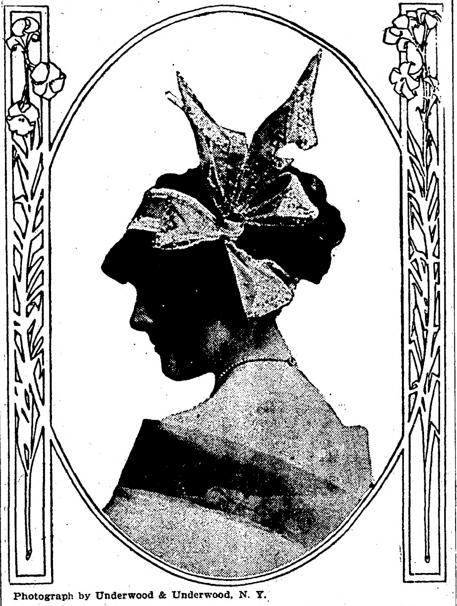
Jeweled Evening Bow, One of the Prettiest of Season's Fads



Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

For a very young girl, this is the most appropriate of evening hair ornaments, as it does not cover the coiffure. It is composed of white maline, white liberty satin, and rhinestones.

NOVEL IDEA FOR PINCUSHION

By the Use of an Old Napkin Ring and Silk Remnants Useful Article Is Procured.

An unusual and decidedly charming pincushion for a desk or writing table can be made from an old silver napkin ring.

Wind zephyr until you have a ball large enough to slip into the ring and be quite tight. Cut a circle of soft silk two inches wider in circumference than the opening of the ring and place this over one side of the ball. Sew it all around the ball.

Now press this through the ring until the silk side rises above the edge of the ring. Cut a circle of cardboard the exact size of the ring and glue it to the bottom of the zephyr ball so that the ring stands flat on it, and you have a cushion that can be made new in a few minutes when the silk becomes soiled.

A cushion made from a carved wooden ring or one of the many fancy and curious Japanese rings makes a pretty gift for any one.

Hat Ornaments.

In ornaments on hats the latest cry is for amber, crystal and pearl. The last named have been used more in the foreign markets than in America, but it is expected that pearls will gain in favor as the season advances. They are a natural decoration for laces, maline and such delicate materials. Amber is a novelty surely and a very lovely one. The beauty of its coloring harmonizes with the new biscotte and burnt orange shades. Amber is stunning on white and very effective in black, dark blue and brown. The crystal effects are strongest in bands. Bugle trimming and fringe are made of crystal, says Millinery Trade Review. It is also applied on some straws, on lace and, of course, on allover nets and chiffon.

The continued popularity of the mopcap, the beguin or whatever one cares to call it, is responsible for the greater number of sales in this dainty trimming. It is also in demand for coiffure ornaments, for scarfs or for dress trimming.

Fashion for Flowers.

The woman who neglects opportunities for decorating her costume with artificial flowers is indeed careless. Never were made blossoms more lifelike, whether of velvet, satin or gauze.

All smart evening gowns carry a group of mixed blooms, or three orchids with ferns. The single American Beauty rose is a favorite, also the red poinsettias. Small flowers are not in fashion.

When Shoes Creak.

Nothing is quite so annoying as a pair of creaking shoes.

To remedy this, soak the sole in linseed oil, using a plate or shallow pan, allowing the sole only to come in contact with the oil.

The creak will disappear after a few hours and the shoes will last much longer on account of this treatment.

For Indoor Dress.

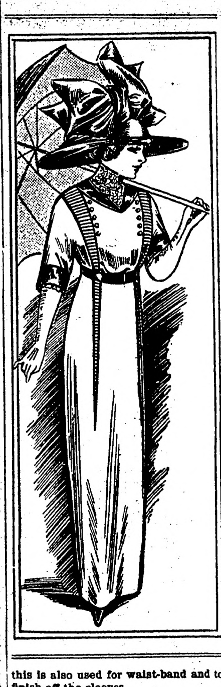
The indoor frock must be soft and graceful and distinctively a house frock. Chiffon, crepe de chine, lace veiled with chiffon, permo weaves combining worsted with mohair in supple, lustrous effect and the very fashionable new taffeta that is soft and satiny in texture are all liked for these graceful indoor frocks for the afternoon.

SUITED FOR ALL OCCASIONS

Handsome Costume in Pewter Gray Cashmere, With Effective Contrasting Trimming.

Pewter grey cashmere is selected here, with trimmings of black satin and black and white striped silk; pieces of the latter are let in on the shoulders of the Magyar bodice, they become narrower as they near the waist, then are continued off to a point on the skirt, which is otherwise quite plain.

Piece lace forms the yoke, which is edged with a trimming of black satin, this is also used for waist-band and to finish off the sleeves.



Hat of Tagel to match, trimmed with a large satin bow.

Materials required: 4 yards cashmere 42 inches wide, ¾ yard satin 20 inches wide, ½ yard piece lace 18 inches wide, ½ yard striped silk 20 inches wide, 1 dozen buttons.

For the Little Laddie.

The very little laddie, just out of babyhood, wears a simple, boyish frock of stout linen, and an ideal frock of this type is of brown Holland with white trimmings. The chubby boy of five is particularly manly in a middy suit of snowy duck, with chevrons and bo'sun's whistle and cord. At seven a sailor suit of dark serge or wool mixture, with embroidered sleeve chevron and collar and belt of contrasting fabric, will be the proper costume. At eight the small boy acquires conventional masculine garb and has his hair cut.

THE VALUE OF A DEFINITE MESSAGE

By Rev. H. W. Pope,

Superintendent of Men of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—This then is the message which we have heard of Him, and declare unto you.—I John 1:5.

The world has always been willing to listen to a man with a real message from heaven. Since the days of John the Baptist whenever anyone has manifestly been sent from God, and has borne witness of the truth, the people have turned out to hear from. Luther in his day, and Wesley and Whitefield in their, were recognized as true messengers of God. William Carey brought another great thought from heaven, and Robert Raikes another. In our own land Dwight L. Moody and Francis E. Clark and Frances Willard have each been the bearer of rich messages from God. All these have met with stout opposition, for "My thoughts are not your thoughts, saith the Lord," and yet eventually their message has been received, and has been incorporated into the life of the church.

One accent of the Holy Ghost,
The heedless world hath never lost.

That God has messages for the church of today no one can doubt. Never was there an age which needed divine wisdom more than ours. Great problems confront us, great dangers threaten us. Many of God's people seem dazed by the difficulties before them, and cry out in pitiful tones, "Who is sufficient for these things?" Instead of waiting upon God for a renewal of their strength, they resort to all manner of worldly expedients to gain the attention of the fickle crowd. Others recognizing clearly the same difficulties and dangers are clamoring loudly for "A man with a message."

Why should not every Christian be "A man with a message?" Was it not said of our day, "I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams?" Was it not said of all believers, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me?"

How to Obtain a Message.

There are grave difficulties in the way of even those who are busiest in the service of God. This is an age of hurry and worry, and unless we are very careful we shall fall into the spirit of the age, and allow ourselves to be robbed of that quiet and repose which is essential to a deep acquaintance with God. Somehow we must get time to be alone with God, time to let the truth as it is in Jesus filter down through our being until our whole life is saturated with its spirit. So shall we come forth from our closets each day with the dew of heaven upon our hearts, and with a fresh message upon our lips. "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches."

Avoid the Danger.

It is a dangerous thing to know God's will and not do it. And one of the most perilous things a Christian can do, is to try to hold his own simply, and not go forward into the deep things of God when thus led by the spirit. I have read of a Christian man who became so engrossed in his business that he largely lost his fellowship with God. After a while his business began to fail; he found that in a few weeks the vein of coal from which he had been drawing his supplies would be exhausted, and all his investment would be useless. He was also impressed that his business troubles were due to his departure from God, and this led him to much prayer.

One night in a dream a voice seemed to say to him, "Go deeper." It seemed to him to be the voice of God, and it led to an entire transformation of his life. As he entered upon a closer walk with God his heart was filled with new joy and power. But still the voice kept speaking to him so persistently that he began to think it had something to do with his business. And so one day he proposed to his foreman that they should abandon the old vein of coal, and sink a new shaft with a view of finding a deeper store. The foreman ridiculed the idea for all the indications were against it. But he insisted and at length a shaft was sunk, and after they had gone down a reasonable distance they struck, not a vein of coal, but lo, an immense vein of iron, and suddenly the bankrupt miner found himself a millionaire.

Is not this God's message to us today, "Go deeper?" If we have exhausted all the satisfaction and power there is in our present knowledge of truth, let us enter into the deep things of God, depths of wisdom.

Dwell deep, O my soul, deeper yet, hour by hour.
Dwell deep, deeper yet, in his fullness of power.

You can never tell by the length of a man's face just what he will do in a horse trade.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. ESTELLA GILLISPIE, R.F.D. REMEDIES FOR RHEUMATISM

Are Many but the Important Thing Is to Enrich the Blood and Cleanse the System of Rheumatic Poison.

There are many remedies for rheumatism. Most of them are considered successful if they relieve the pain and stiffness. That means a temporary suppression of the symptoms while the disease remains in the blood to appear again on the next rainy day.

Mrs. J. W. Rapp, of R. F. D. No. 1, South Omaha, Neb., says: "Several years ago I was a sufferer from rheumatism which followed a general run-down condition and exposure to wet and dampness. The pains started in my hands, which had a sort of pricking sensation like needles were being thrust into them. As the disease grew worse the joints of my fingers became affected. They were swollen and were so painful that I could hardly bear it. Gradually the disease began to affect my limbs in the same manner. They became terribly swollen and I had to give up my work. The pains then spread all over my body and were sharp and shooting. They would suddenly shift from one part of the body to another but fortunately did not seem to affect my heart. For three months I was propped up in a chair and had to be waited on. I could not get any sleep and was losing flesh all of the time. The doctor treated me a long time but did not give much relief as the pains were as severe as ever when I quit taking his medicine. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were brought to my notice while reading a booklet and I made up my mind to give them a trial. A wonderful change came over me as soon as I commenced using the pills. They absolutely cured me from the terrible rheumatic pains and I have never had them since. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to many persons and always explain that they cannot help giving benefit as they are a blood medicine."

A new edition of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free on request to anyone interested. Write for it today.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

CHICAGO POLICE VERSUS MILITIA

SITUATION CLIMAX TO ACTION TAKEN BY JUDGE IN POLITICAL MATTERS.

INJUNCTION IS SECURED.

Armed Men Facing Each Other—Never In History of Party Has Such Grave Situation Developed.

Chicago, April 16.—An eleventh hour victory for control of the Cook county democratic convention was obtained by the Sullivan forces over the Hearst-Harrison faction when an injunction was issued by Judge M. L. McKinley of the superior court restraining the carrying out of County Judge John E. Owens' unusual order, which placed a republican in the position of temporary chairman of the convention.

It was rumored that Judge Owens might refuse to recognize Judge McKinley's injunction order and that the fight when the convention opened would be even more intense than had been anticipated. It was said that Judge Owens would obey only a state supreme court order.

Armed Men Face Each Other.

Armed men were facing each other as the hour for the opening of the convention drew near. In the armory of the Seventh regiment, Illinois National guard, where the convention is to be held, 120 guardsmen slept.

Outside was a cordon of city police to be re-enforced later by hundreds of blue coats and as many more special deputy sheriffs. Chief of Police McWeeny and Sheriff Michael Zimmer will command the sheriffs and police in person.

Never in the history of the democratic party in Chicago has a situation of such gravity developed. Mayor Harrison became angered when he learned of the presence of the national guardsmen at the armory, and in addition to sending a telegram to Governor Deneen demanding that the militia be kept away from the convention hall, he asked Colonel Moriarity, commander of the Seventh regiment, to refrain from any interference with the police arrangements. The mayor declared that the presence of the guardsmen at the armory to protect state property was but a subterfuge.

To Protect Property.

Colonel Moriarity answered the mayor by declaring that he would have a squad of men on duty in the armory under the regimental adjutant, Captain Thomas T. Octigan, with orders to protect government and state property. He denied that his men would take part in any riots which might start when efforts are made to open the convention.

This situation came to a climax to action by County Judge Owens, who took control of both the democratic and republican county conventions from the hands of party leaders. Judge Owens appointed Anthony Czarnecki, republican member of the board of election commissioners, to sit as temporary chairman of the democratic convention, and Dr. Howard S. Taylor, democratic member of the board, to act as temporary chairman of the republican convention.

The republicans said that they would accept Dr. Taylor and would treat him with courtesy. But a storm of protest arose from the democrats. Roger C. Sullivan, head of the faction opposed to Mayor Harrison, issued a statement in which he questioned the right of Judge Owens to enter such an order.

Chicago, April 16.—County Judge Owens took personal charge of the police force of Chicago at noon and directed the chopping down of the door of the Seventh regiment armory, so the democratic county convention could be held there, according to his orders as head of the election machinery of Cook county.

The soldiers were drawn up at attention inside, but offered no resistance. Behind Schuettler were 300 policemen. A hundred policemen entered the hall with Judge Owens, Election Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki and other officials.

Delegates Are Admitted.

Czarnecki, the republican election commissioner, then prepared to call the democratic convention to order and read his instructions from Judge Owens. With the police guarding the doors and scattered through the hall, the delegates who had been waiting since 9 a. m. were permitted to enter.

The police ordered all delegates having credentials to form a line. They were admitted after the credentials of each had been examined. It was estimated it would take nearly two hours before all could be admitted. The Sullivan and Dunne followers among the delegates did not attempt to enter the hall. They did not offer their credentials, but their leaders withdrew for a consultation, at which the advisability of holding a rump convention was discussed. The convention was completely in control of the Hearst-Harrison faction.

The republican county convention proceeded harmoniously. Resolutions indorsing the administrations of President Taft and Governor Deneen were adopted before the list of delegates to the state convention and several Cook county congressional district congressional district conventions was

MEXICANS ARE WARNED AGAIN

FEDERALS AND REBELS MUST RESPECT AMERICANS.

Demands Especially Aimed at Orozco, Head of the Insurrecto Troops.

Washington, April 16.—Warning was issued by the United States to the Mexican government as well as to General Pascual Orozco, chief of the revolutionary forces, that "it expects and must demand that American life and property within the republic of Mexico be justly and adequately protected and that this government must hold Mexico and the Mexican people responsible for all wanton or irregular acts sacrificing or endangering American life or damaging American property or interests."

Acting Secretary Huntington Wilson of the state department, who issued special instructions to Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson at Mexico City and Marion Letcher, American consul at Chihuahua, authorized the statement that intervention was not contemplated by the United States.

Ambassador Wilson was ordered to communicate at once the views of the United States to the Mexican minister for foreign affairs and a copy of his instructions was likewise sent to Marion Letcher, American consul at Chihuahua with special representations addressed to General Orozco.

Orozco recently refused to recognize Mr. Letcher as the American consular representative because the United States withheld recognition of the rebel cause. The representations to Orozco accuse him of "practical murder" of Thomas Fountain, an American gunner, enlisted with the federals, but summarily executed last week when taken prisoner by the insurrectos.

Though declining to justify participation of Americans on either side, the United States expressly stipulates that American combatants when taken prisoners must be given human treatment in accordance with the international rules of war.

FLOOR FALLS; TWO DEAD.

Score of Others Are Injured in New Jersey Church Accident.

Harrington Park, N. J., April 16.—Two persons were killed and more than a score injured, several seriously, when the collapse of the floor of the church of "Our Lady of Victory" precipitated nearly three hundred persons into the basement. The church was only partly completed and the assemblage was in connection with the formal ceremonies of laying the cornerstone.

President Saves $30,740 in a Year.

Cincinnati, April 16.—Listing a gold watch valued at $100 and disowning any household goods, dogs or agricultural implements, President Taft's tax duplicate is on file in the Hamilton county court house today, showing the executive's taxable property has increased in value $30,740 over last year. The record shows that Taft now holds $50,000 in stocks, increasing such holdings from a total of $10,000 worth listed a year ago. The total value of his personal property is $51,940, with debts amounting to $6,500.

South St. Paul, April 16.—Cattle—Steers, $4.00@5.00; cows, $3.50@5.25; calves, $3.25@6.75; hogs, $7.55@7.75; sheep and lambs, $5.50@7.25.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, April 16.—It was a wilder day in the wheat pit today than ever during the worst scare stampede last week. Fluctuations today were more violent and punished not merely one side, but both.

Excitement started with the first rap of the gong, and kept at boiling point while transactions ran into an aggregate of millions of bushels. Countless reports of crop damage gave fire to speculators, who believed that the market was going higher despite the 10-cent advance which other traders, no less confident, thought had fully discounted the injury, however great.

Difference of opinion was so wide that the market at the outset varied from ⅞c lower to 1¼c higher as compared with Saturday night. The sharpest price changes showed in the May option. The month started at $1.10 to $1.11, an upward jump of ¼@1¼c, touched $1.11¼, dropped to $1.07½ and then whizzed back to $1.10½. Meanwhile July twirled in bewildering fashion from $1.05½ to $1.07, snapping from ½c below to more than a cent above the final figures of the previous session.

A spasm of weakness seized the corn market at the beginning, but the market soon wheeled into line with the advancing tendency, which at the moment promised to rule in wheat. The leading bulls had apparently given their attention at first to the more expensive grain, and had been caught napping, the benefit going to commission houses that had been heavy sellers. July opened ⅜@½c to ⅞@1c down, at 78@78½c, declined to 77⅝c and then rallied to 78⅛c.

Free unloading carried oats lower, but the offerings were promptly gobbled up and the market soon recovered. July started ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c cheaper, at 54¾@55c, and then turned upward to 55⅛@55¼c.

Activity and strength prevailed in the provision trade. Realizing of profits by longs, however, checked the rise, which was due to firmness at the yards and dear corn. Initial sales ran from Saturday night's level to 7½c higher, with September delivery $18.37½ for pork, $10.62½ for lard and $10.42½ for ribs.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, April 16.—Cattle—Receipts 20,000; market steady to 10c higher; beeves, $5.60@8.85; Texas steers, $4.75@6.10; western steers, $5.60@7.10; stockers and feeders, $4.30@6.65; cows and heifers, $2.65@7.75; calves, $5.50@8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 37,000; market slow, steady to shade higher; light, $7.50@7.90; mixed, $7.55@7.95; heavy, $7.55@7.97½; rough, $7.55@7.70; pigs, $5@7.25; bulk of sales, $7.80@7.90.

Sheep — Receipts, 25,000; market steady; native, $4.40@6.20; western, $4.50@6.90; yearlings, $5.75@7.10; lambs, native, $5.50@7.12; western, $6.25@8.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. Albert W. Kahl, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have used Castoria in my practice for the past 26 years. I regard it as an excellent medicine for children."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the blood and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes MRS. WM. HEYER, of Ladysmith, B. C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines."

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time.

Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

It becomes more apparent every day that Taft cannot be re-elected to the presidency if nominated by the republican national convention.

The Minneapolis Journal speaks of Roosevelt as "the most astonishingl successful politician the country has ever known." The efforts of the big city newspapers to mislead the people are not quite so successful as they used to be, and the Journal is evidently preparing to get in line with the common people again.

The trans-atlantic liner "Titanic," the largest ship ever built and one of the most magnificent, lies at the bottom of the ocean, destroyed by a collision with an iceberg, and thirteen hundred human beings went down with her. The catastrophe is most appalling, and brings before the mind a vivid portrayal of how very puny is the best human effort compared with the power of the Creator.

Pennsylvania, following the example of Illinois, went into the Roosevelt camp with a rush that jarred the old state political machine all to pieces. Prior to the Pennsylvania primaries the Taft managers claimed that Taft would be nominated on the first ballot and have a couple of hundred votes to spare; they now admit that their majority may not be more than thirty or so. They may not be claiming that much when the convention meets.

"Do you put much belief in the cry that the government is dishonest?"

"No; for years I've been buying postage stamps from the government and I've never been cheated yet."

DESERT WEAPONS.

There are, not counting the rifles and carbines captured from the Italians nor the regulation arms dealt out by the Turks, weapons of every kind and age in the camp, writes the Tripoli correspondent of the London Express. I have seen within a few hundred yards of one another a chassepot rifle, a double barreled shotgun, a two handed Crusader's sword (a magnificent piece of steel over four feet long), a slender, inlaid scimitar, a Moorish curved dagger and an automatic pistol.

There is no doubt that the desert is supplying Turkey with soldiers as efficient as it provided her with food for them to eat. A wonderful place, the desert, able to pour forth unexpected riches.

Miss Clara Solum went to Thief River Falls yesterday.

S. S. Kolden left on Wednesday for a business trip in the Thief Lake country.

P. A. Risberg went to Warren on Wednesday to attend to some business matters.

S. L. Lewis was here yesterday from Red Lake Falls hustling some life insurance business.

Rudolph Dahl and Ernest Piche were business visitors in town Monday from East of Mud Lake.

Attorney G. Halvorson and G. H. Sandum were up from Thief River Falls Wednesday looking over some land east of town.

Services will be held in the Holt church next Sunday. The Young People's Society will meet at Gunheim's the same evening.

Tony Anderson had five loads of lumber and building material hauled out this week to use in the erection of new buildings on his claim in the northern part of Mud Lake township.

Quite a number of the assessors were in town this week on their way to Warren, where they met yesterday to consider their schedules and receive their supplies from the county auditor.

The big Stevens dredge started up work on the Thief River on Tuesday and, barring any bad luck, will keep the dirt moving some until close up to next Christmas.

Tom Severson this week received two new 24-inch brush breaking bottoms for his gasoline plowing rig. They are sure enough monsters, all steel, and so heavy that he will have to bring in his engine to move them.

A. J. Nelson, Great Northern agent, went to Crookston yesterday to meet his family on their way here from Elbow Lake. They will make their home in the Knudtson building, formerly occupied by Mrs. I. Thomas.

A. G. Bell was in from Rollis on Monday to haul out lumber for building on his claim. Mr. Bell will represent The Northern Light at Rollis hereafter, to send us the news, subscriptions, etc. Residents thereabouts will confer a favor by keeping Mr. Bell posted on local happenings, and giving him their subscrsptions.

The hospitable home of T. G. Dahl, east of Mud Lake, was the scene of a happy occasion Saturday evening when a hundred or so of the friends and neighbors gathered to welcome home Tony Anderson and his bride, formerly Miss Hilda Dahl. The visitors came many miles in some instances and were royally entertained.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

The World's Standard

Used Exclusively by 98% of World's Creameries

Ten years ago there were a dozen different makes of creamery or factory separators in use. To-day over 98 per cent of the world's creameries use De Laval separators exclusively.

When it comes to buying a separator why not profit by the experience of the creameryman, which qualifies him to advise you correctly.

He knows which separator will give you the best service and be the most economical for you to buy. That's why 98 per cent of the world's creameries use the De Laval exclusively.

There can be no better recommendation for the De Laval than the fact that the men who make the separation of milk a business use the De Laval to the practical exclusion of all other makes. They know from experience.

Easiest to turn, easiest to wash, skims the cleanest lasts the longest

SOONER OR LATER YOU WILL BUY A DE LAVAL

DICKENS IS FOR ALL TIME

Jeannette L. Gilder Declares the Fame of the Great Novelist Will Endure.

"What do I think of Dickens? I can answer that question best by the one word—everything. I think everything of Dickens. Dickens, Thackeray and Balzac are my favorite novelists, and I cannot say which I like the best.

There is absolutely no question of the permanence of Dickens' fame and his lasting literary importance. Dickens is for all time. His books will last forever, will always be read and loved. The reason for this lies in the universality of his characters. His types are not types of merely one time. They belong to today as much as to the day when he wrote them. There may be a fad or two in Dickens' novels, but for the most part they are not fads, but belong to all time, and appeal to a steady audience.—Jeannette L. Gilder, in the New York Times.

DEADLY MORPHINE

It is a general fact that persons under the influence of morphine have less power to resist physical and mental impressions, and easily succumb to temptations and suggestions from without. The legal responsibility of such persons is seldom recognized in court. An eminent judge recently charged the jury that where the prisoner was proved to be a morphine user incompetency and impaired judgment should not be recognized. He urged that such persons should not be punished as responsible. Later the judge himself was found to be a morphine user, and it was evident why he realized the incompetency of others.

Another Power Plow Bought

Axel Nelson and Svenke Svenke- have bought a new power plowing rig and expect to start it to work early next week on Mr. Nelson's farm on the west shore of Mud Lake. The engine is a 30-horse power, Rumely oil-pull, which will pull two 24-inch bottoms, turning over land at the rate of about 15 acres per day. The owners intend to use this rig almost entirely for breaking the new and wonderfully fertile lands in the great Mud Lake drainage area. It should prove an ideal rig for that purpose and will be sure to get all work its hustling owners can handle.

PROVED HONESTY

"Do you put much belief in the cry that the government is dishonest?"

"No; for years I've been buying postage stamps from the government and I've never been cheated yet."

DESERT WEAPONS.

There are, not counting the rifles and carbines captured from the Italians nor the regulation arms dealt out by the Turks, weapons of every kind and age in the camp, writes the Tripoli correspondent of the London Express. I have seen within a few hundred yards of one another a chassepot rifle, a double barreled shotgun, a two handed Crusader's sword (a magnificent piece of steel over four feet long), a slender, inlaid scimitar, a Moorish curved dagger and an automatic pistol.

There is no doubt that the desert is supplying Turkey with soldiers as efficient as it provided her with food for them to eat. A wonderful place, the desert, able to pour forth unexpected riches.

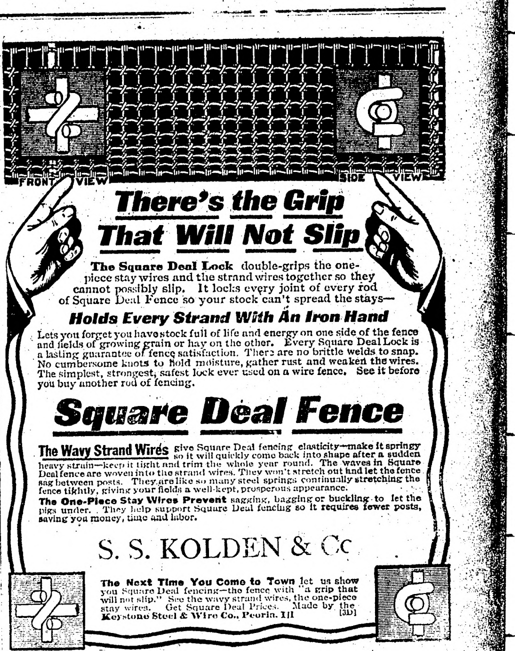
READ HISTORY IN THE MAKING

HISTORY IS BEING MADE DAY BY DAY, EXACTLY SUCH HISTORY AS TELLS THE ADVANCEMENT OF THE HUMAN RACE, AND THIS NEWSPAPER CHRONICLES IT DAY BY DAY AS IT HAPPENS.

Could anything be more interesting or more important? Can any living man afford to let events pass without knowing about them?

Every man, woman and child who can read should read one paper at least and should read it regularly and carefully. Justice to himself, to his neighbors, to his country and to future generations demands this. Every man should know what is going on. He should read THIS NEWSPAPER.



There's the Grip That Will Not Slip

The Square Deal Lock double-grips the one-piece stay wires and the strand wires together so they cannot possibly slip. It locks every joint of every rod of Square Deal Fence so your stock can't spread the stays—

Holds Every Strand With An Iron Hand

Lets you forget you have stock full of life and energy on one side of the fence and fields of growing grain or hay on the other. Every Square Deal Lock is a lasting guarantee of fence satisfaction. There are no brittle welds to snap. No cumbersome knots to hold moisture, gather rust and weaken the wires. The simplest, strongest, safest lock ever used on a wire fence. See it before you buy another rod of fencing.

Square Deal Fence

The Wavy Strand Wires give Square Deal fencing elasticity—make it springy so it will quickly come back into shape after a sudden heavy strain—keep it tight and trim the whole year round. The waves in Square Deal fence are woven into the strand wires. They won't stretch out and let the fence sag between posts. They are like so many steel springs continually stretching the fence tightly, giving your fields a well-kept, prosperous appearance.

The One-Piece Stay Wires Prevent sagging, bagging or buckling to let the pigs under. They help support Square Deal fencing so it requires fewer posts, saving you money, time and labor.

TITANIC, THE TITON OF THE OCEAN, FINDS WATERY GRAVE ON FIRST TRIP.

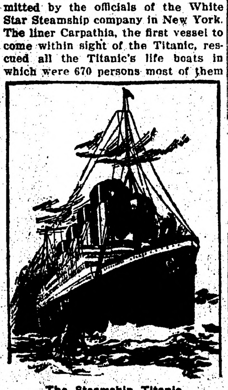
OVER 1,400 PEOPLE ARE DROWNED

WHITE STAR LINER STRIKES AN ICEBERG, WHILE GOING AT FULL SPEED AT 1:25 MONDAY MORNING AND GOES DOWN IN LESS THAN AN HOUR.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE SAVED

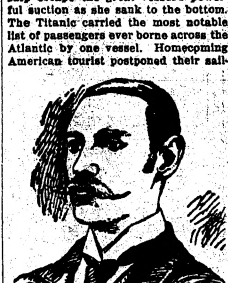
But Many Wealthy and Prominent Men Are Lost, Among Them Col. John Jacob Astor, Maj. Archibald Butt, Isidore Straus, George D. Widener, J. Bruce Ismay, Benjamin Guggenheim, Col. Washington Roebling, J. B. Thayer, the Artist Millet and Many Others.

New York, N. Y. — The White Star liner Titanic, the world's greatest steamship has gone down some 500 miles off Cape Race, with 630 of her 1,300 passengers and her full crew of 860 men on board. That the greatest catastrophe in marine history has occurred to a vessel of their line is admitted by the officials of the White Star Steamship company in New York. The liner Carpathia, the first vessel to come within sight of the Titanic, rescued all the Titanic's life boats in which were 670 persons most of them women and children. Many women and children, however, have perished.



The Steamship Titanic.

When the Carpathia reached the ill-fated vessel no sign of life was to be seen anywhere, the mountainous ocean swells giving much evidence to the stupendous disaster. Early reports stated that all the passengers and the crew of the Titanic had been taken off by the Allen liner's Virginian and the Parisian, and the Carpathia, but wireless message received here discredit these reports in every detail. No hope is held out at the offices of the White Star line that any man on board has survived to tell the story of the final sinking of the levithian, although some of the women in the boats may have witnessed the sinking. Only by a miracle, it is pointed out, could any person who stood by the ship escape the great vessel's powerful suction as she sank to the bottom. The Titanic carried the most notable list of passengers ever borne across the Atlantic by one vessel. Homecoming American tourist postponed their sailing weeks ago so as to ride the new wonder of the season on her maiden voyage.



John Jacob Astor.

Dispatches state that the Titanic went down at 2:20 o'clock Monday morning. The delay in the transmission of the news is attributed to the fact that all dispatches have been subject to difficult relays.

The collision of the Titanic with an iceberg is now known to have been a headon crash that occurred while the liner was proceeding little less than her best speed. She was a day ahead of her schedule and it is considered probable that an attempt to make a record-breaking voyage was the hope of her crew when she entered the ice field.

MAJOR ARCHIBALD BUTT.

Her forward plates were completely wrecked. A gaping wound opening below her water line and letting the water into her forward compartments.

In the meantime the lifeboats were manned and into them were placed as many of the women and children as they could hold. The boats were put off while there was yet some hope of saving the Titanic afloat until wireless could summon help. Later and more conservative estimates tell of great bravery on the part of the men passengers. There was a minimum of disorder. John Jacob Astor, who, with his bride, was returning from their long honeymoon abroad, saw his bride placed in a life boat safely away. Col. Astor was drowned. The work of getting the life boats away, the work of allaying the fears of the great crowd of passengers as much as possible, the work of keeping the pumps in operation and the engines throbbing—these tasks and countless others were directed by Captain Smith, the venerable commander of the Titanic, and before her advent the commander of the Olympic who displayed almost superhuman power of mind and body at the world's most horrible sea disaster, crowned his long and honorable service on the high seas.

A wireless message from the Virginia states that the occupants of the small boats which she picked up have been transferred to the Carpathia which is proceeding to New York.

The Titanic struck the iceberg at 1:25 Sunday night and floundered at 2:20 Monday morning.

At daybreak the Carpathia arrived on the scene and her passengers and crew brought the small boats with their precious human cargo into New York.

The boats which rushed to the Titanic's aid found only the scattered life boats and a dismal scene of wreckage.

"Sinking by the head and women are being rushed into the life boats," were the last words that sputtered into the wireless room of the Virginian from the Titanic. All through the night and until her wireless station was silenced over hundreds of miles of seas from the antennace of the giant liner flashed the mystic and magic "S. O. S." the world-wide cry of distress on the ocean.

FACTS ABOUT THE TITANIC.

The largest vessel afloat.

On her maiden voyage. Was due in New York Tuesday, April 16.

Left Southampton April 10.

Forty-six thousand three hundred twenty-eight tons register.

Displacement, 66,000 tons.

Total length, 882 feet 6 inches.

Breadth, 92 feet 6 inches.

One hundred and seventy-five feet from the keel to the top of smokestack.

Eleven decks, with accommodations for 4,000 persons, including passengers and crew.

Two regal suites on the Titanic cost $4,350 per trip, occupants having private promenade deck.

Titanic was nearly four times as large as the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which, 10 years ago, was one of the largest, finest and fastest boats in service.

Officers of Titanic were: Captain, E. J. Smith; surgeon, W. F. N O'Loughlin; assistant surgeon, J. E Simpson; purser, H. W. McElroy; second purser, R. L. Brocker; chief steward, A. Lattimer.

Every wireless operator within range of the doomed vessel dropped other messages to locate and many relayed the fatal message to the world.

The collision occurred in latitude 41.46 North and longitude 50.14 West, 1,150 miles east of New York and 450 miles south of Cape Race, the most westerly point of Newfoundland Contrary to earlier dispatches there was no storm when the vessel struck. The weather was clear and calm.

Almost as soon as the Virginian picked up the distress signal it was recorded by the operator on the Olympic, the Titanic's sister ship, and next to her the largest vessel afloat. This was at midnight. At that hour the Olympic was 200 miles from New York enroute to Southampton.

The Baltic, famous for her rescue of passengers of the steamer Republic and for her Jack Binns, who sat aloft and braved death to summon help—was the next ship to pick up the brief story of the Titanic's plight.

She was on her way from New York to Liverpool but turned about and put on full speed toward the Titanic's position. The Parisian, according to her messages reached the flotilla of rescue ships shortly after the Baltic.

A wireless message from Captain Haddock confirmed the fears of the White Star Line officials that all but the 670 women and children who escaped in the small boat from the $10,000,000 steamship had perished. A part of this message was witheld, but enough was divulged to make certain an appalling account of the catastrophe. Not until Captain Haddock flashed "Horrible disaster—all but 670 lost," would the White Star officials believe the largest ship ever launched had gone down on her maiden voyage. The scene in the White Star Line offices was phitiful. Brought to a realization of the stupenduous wreck—the complete destruction of the fruit of their dreams—gray haired men—many of them veteran seamen, wept.

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt Safe.

New York.—Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt received a cablegram from Alfred G. Vanderbilt, her son, saying that he had not sailed on the Titanic and was safe in London.

ANXIOUS OVER BUTT.

President Has Frequent Inquiries Made Concerning the Safety of His Aide.

Washington.—President Taft had frequent inquiries made of the newspaper offices and the steamship companies for his aide, Major Archibald W. Butt, one of the passengers on the Titanic. No word had been received at a late hour at the homes of Frank D. Millet, the painter; Coloned Archibald Gracie, or Clarence Moore, the three other Washingtonians aboard.

LIES TWO MILES DOWN.

No Hope of Salvage From Wreck of the Titanic.

Halifax.—The death bed of the $10,000,000 steamer Titanic is two miles at least below the surface of the sea.

About 500 miles from Halifax and about 70 miles south of the Grand Banks is where the Titanic is believed to have gone down.

This location is midway between Sable Island and Cape Race.

PASSENGERS SUFFER.

Remain in Life Boats Eight Hours Before Rescued.

New York.—Those who were saved after the Titanic disaster have gone through hardships of exposure and peril which may have left many of them in a serious condition. A dispatch given out at the White Star offices said that those rescued by the Carpathia were picked up from lifeboats at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, eight hours after the Titanic sunk.

CABLE STEAMER RECOVERS BODIES

NUMBER OF VICTIMS WITHOUT IDENTIFICATION MARKS ARE BURIED AT SEA.

64 CAN BE IDENTIFIED

Ship Detailed to Cruise in the Vicinity—Search to Be Continued Until the Hope of Recoveries Is Passed.

St. Johns, N. F., April 23.—Sixty-four bodies have been recovered by the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, which has been searching the vicinity of the Titanic disaster. It is said a number of other bodies which were recovered were sunk again as they were without identification marks, The names of those identified could not be obtained through the Cape Race wireless station.

The 64 bodies recovered are regarded as identifiable, according to the report. Those that were sunk were presumably in a condition making their preservation impossible.

Reports of Finding Bodies Confirmed.

Halifax, N. S.—Confirmation of report that numerous bodies of victims of the Titanic were afloat in the vicinity of the disaster was received in a wireless dispatch from the steamship Bremen, via the Sable Island and Camperdown wireless stations.

The message reads:

"The steamer Bremen, bound for New York, and the steamer Rhein, passed on Saturday afternoon in 42:0 north latitude, and 49:20 west longitude, in the neighborhood of three large, icebergs. Sighted numerous pieces of wreckage and a great number of human bodies with life preservers on, floating in the sea. Sighted and spoke the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett on the way to recover the floating bodies."

(Signed) 'CAPT. PREAGER."

The cable steamer probably is unable to communicate with Cape Race, which is about 360 miles away, because its wireless range is only about 200 miles.

Ship Was Detailed to Patrol Scene.

New York.—Two wireless messages, addressed to J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine company, were received at the offices of the White Star Line, from which the cable-ship Mackay-Bennett, via Cape Race, one of which reported that the steamship Rhein had sighted bodies near the scene of the Titanic wreck. The other message, which was dated April 20, reads:

"Steamer Rhein reports passing wreckage and bodies 42:1 north, 49:13 west; eight miles west of three big ice-bergs. Now making for that position. Expect to arrive 8 o'clock tonight.

(Signed) "Mackay-Bennett."

Before his departure for Washington, Mr. Ismay, after reading the two messages, said:

"The cable ship Mackay-Bennett has been chartered by the White Star Line and ordered to proceed to the scene of the disaster and to do all she could to recover bodies and glean all information possible.

"Every effort will be made to identify bodies recovered and any news will be sent through immediately by wireless.

"In addition to any such messages as these the Mackay-Bennett will make a report of its activities each morning by wireless and such reports will be made public at the offices of the White Star Line.

"The cable ship has orders to remain on the scene of the wreck for at least a week, but should a large number of bodies be recovered before that time she will return to Halifax with them. The search for bodies will not be abandoned until not a vestige of hope remains for any more recoveries.

"The Mackay-Bennett will not make any soundings, as they would not serve any useful purpose, because the depth where the Titanic sank is more than 2,000 fathoms."

Bring Slain Americans Home.

Panama, April 23.—Caskets containing the remains of Leonard Gross and Leroy Cannon, the two Americans executed by ex-President Zelaya of Nicaragua in November, 1909, on the charge of being implicated in the revolution, were shipped by Senor Vasquez, the Nicaraguan consul here, to New Orleans, enroute to New York. From New York the caskets will be sent to the respective homes of the men, in Texas and Pennsylvania.

Arrested for Infanticide.

Green Bay, Wis., April 23.—William Belling of West Green Bay was arrested charged with the murder of his infant child.

Explosion; Five Dead.

Madisonville, Ky., April 23.—Explosions of gas in the Coil Coal company's mine at the edge of his city set the mine on fire and caused the death of five men, Joseph Hollswell, a mine foreman, and four negroes.

Mary Maddern Dies.

New York, April 23.—Mary Maddern an old-time actress, is dead at her home here after a long illness. She was an English woman and an aunt of Mrs. Fiske, of whose company she had been a member for many years.

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

Women are beginning to realize more fully that good health is not to be found in the use of cosmetics and face powders. The appearance of health may follow facial treatment, but health itself lies much deeper than the surface.

Most important to the health of every woman is regularity of the bowels and digestive organs. The weary eyes, bad breath, frequent headaches, pimples and general air of lassitude, is in most every case due to constipation or indigestion, or both. There are various remedies prescribed for this condition, but the easiest, most pleasant and certainly effective, is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This simple remedy is far preferable to harsh salts and cathartics and violent purgative waters that disturb the whole system without affording more than temporary relief.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a tonic laxative, mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in its effect, strengthening the muscles of stomach and bowels so that after a short time these organs regain the power to perform their natural functions without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it, write for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.; he will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

A Slight Mistake.

"Katie, I can't find any of the breakfast food."

Logical Millinery.

"People say there is no reason, no logic, in Easter millinery. What a falsehood."

The speaker was George Ade. He continued (the occasion was an after-theater supper in Chicago):

"Hats, whether Easter or otherwise, are full of logic, full of reason. A little boy said to his father one day:

" 'What's a wide-awake hat, pa?'

"That father logically and reasonably replied:

" 'A wide-awake hat, my son, is, of course, one without a nap.' "

THANKSGIVING PSALM
A Rhythmical and Grateful Chant.

A teacher in a Terre Haute public school joins in the chorus:

"Teaching is a business which requires a great deal of brain and nerve force. Unless this force is renewed as fast as expended the teacher is exhausted before the close of the year. Many resort to stimulating tonics for relief.

"For 3 years I struggled against almost complete exhaustion, getting what relief I could from doctors' tonics. Then in the spring of 1903 I had an attack of la grippe and malaria which left me too weak to continue my work. Medicine failed to give me any relief, a change of climate failed. I thought I should never be able to go back in school again.

"I ate enough food (the ordinary meats—white bread, vegetables, etc.), but was hungry after meals.

"I happened at this time to read an article giving the experience of another teacher who had been helped by Grape-Nuts food. I decided to try Grape-Nuts and cream, as an experiment. It was a delightful experience, and continues so after a year and a half of constant use.

"First, I noticed that I was not hungry after meals.

"In a few days that tired feeling left me, and I felt fresh and bright, instead of dull and sleepy.

"In three months, more than my usual strength returned, and I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"I finished the year's work without any kind of tonics—was not absent from duty even half a day.

"Am still in best of health, with all who know me wondering at the improvement.

STORY OF TITANIC DISASTER AS TOLD BY A SURVIVOR.

AS SHIP SINKS BAND PLAYS "NEARER MY GOD TO THEE"

Captain Smith Was Seen Standing on the Bridge as the Titanic Was Going Down.

HEROIC CREW GIVE UP THEIR LIVES

Colonel Astor, Henry B. Harris, Jacques Futrelle and Other Notables Go to Their Death With Equal Heroism.

New York, April 18.—Seventeen hundred and twenty-six lives were lost on the Titanic which struck an iceberg at 11:45 P. M. Sunday and were at the ocean's bottom two hours and thirty-five minutes after. Of the Titanic's 341 first cabin passengers 212 were saved; 154 of them were women and children, and of the 262 second cabin passengers 115 were saved, 102 of them were women and children.

Of the third-class, 800 in number, 138 were saved, 83 of whom were women and children. Of 985 officers and crew, 199, including 22 women, were rescued.

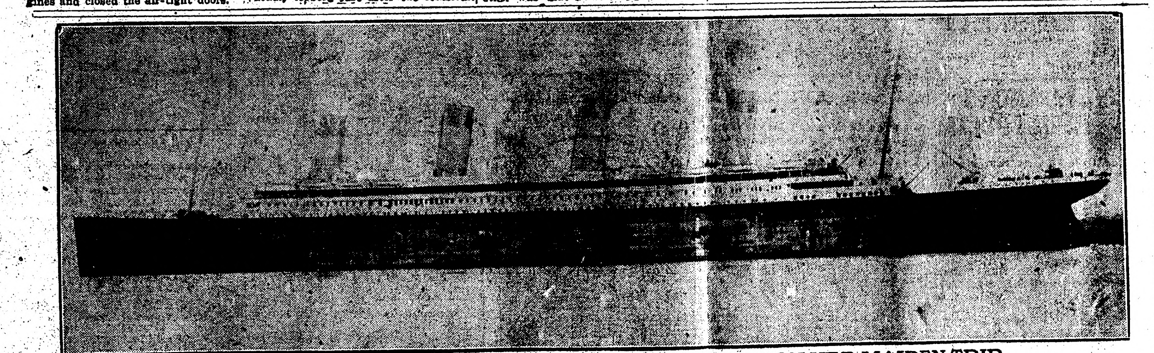
No survivors can question the courage of the crew, hundreds of whom gave their lives with a heroism which equaled, but could not exceed, that of John Jacob Astor, Henry B. Harris, Jacques Futrelle and others in the long list of first cabin passengers.

The bulk head system, though probably working, prevailed only to delay the ship's sinking.

EXPLOSIONS BREAK SHIP IN TWO

The position of the ship's wound on the starboard quarter admitted icy water which caused the boilers to explode and those explosions broke the ship in two.

The crash against the iceberg, which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile, came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated from the bridge which stopped the engines and closed the air-tight doors.



THE TITANIC, LARGEST VESSEL EVER BUILT, WAS SUNK ON HER MAIDEN TRIP

CAPTAIN ORDERS LIFE BOATS LOWERED.

Captain Smith was on the bridge a moment later. He summoned all on board to put on life preservers and ordered the lifeboats lowered. The first boat had more male passengers as they were the first to reach the deck.

ENFORCE "WOMEN FIRST" RULE WITH DRAWN REVOLVERS.

When the rush of frightened men and women and crying children to the decks began the "women first" rule was rigidly enforced. Officers drew revolvers, but in most cases there was no use for them.

Revolver shots were heard shortly before the Titanic went down, caused many rumors, one that Captain Smith had shot himself, another that First Officer Murdock had ended his life, but members of the crew discredit these reports.

CAPTAIN SMITH ON THE BRIDGE AS BOAT GOES DOWN.

Captain Smith was last seen on the bridge just before the ship sank, leaping only after the decks had washed away.

What became of the men with life preservers was the question asked by many since the disaster. Many of those with life preservers were seen to go down, despite the preservers, and dead bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away.

It is stated positively the ship's string band gathered in the saloon near the end and played "Nearer My God to Thee."

Mrs. Isador Straus refused to leave her husband's side and both perished together.

Harold Cotton, the marine operator of the Carpathia, did not go to bed at his usual time Sunday night, and as a result caught the first message of the Titanic's plight. He had been relaying messages to the Titanic on Sunday night, and shortly after 11 o'clock bade the Titanic good night.

Just as he was about to take the receiver off his head the C. Q. D. call sounded. This was followed by the words "We've hit something; come at once."

Cotton at once communicated with the Carpathia's officers and her course was at once changed in the direction of the Titanic at full speed of eighteen knots for the full distance of sixty miles intervening between the two ships.

"I'M AFRAID WE ARE GONE."

Before Cotton could make reply to the C. Q. D. the Titanic's "I'm afraid we are gone," Cotton sent word of the coming of the Carpathia. No further communication was had with the doomed ship.

The Titanic's speed of twenty-three knots an hour was never slackened, and she was going at that speed when she struck.

S. V. Silverthorne of St. Louis was one of the three or four saloon passengers on the Titanic who saw the deadly iceberg just after the collision.

NONE WAS ALARMED AT FIRST.

"I was in the smoking room reading near a bridge whist game at one of the tables. When the crash came I said, "We've hit something," and went on the starboard side to look. None of us was alarmed. It occurred to me that we might have bumped some small craft.

"I went back in the smoking room with the others. One of the bridge players had not left the smoking room at all and was waiting impatiently for the others to come back and resume the game. They returned and took up their hands and we were all about to settle down when an officer ordered us on deck and told us to get into the boats."

NOT ENOUGH WOMEN TO FILL THE FIRST BOAT.

"There not being enough women on deck to fill the first ones, we did not like the idea of leaving the ship then, but did as we were told. Had we been in our rooms we would have had to stand aside as other men did then."

MR. HURD'S STORY.

New York, April 18.—The Morning World tomorrow will publish Mr. Hurd's story in detail. In addition to the foregoing Mr. Hurd says in part:

"Facts which I have established by inquiries on the Carpathia, as positively as they could be established, in view of the silence of the few surviving officers, are:

OFFICERS KNEW ICEBERGS WERE NEAR.

"That the Titanic's officers knew, several hours before the crash, of the possible nearness of the icebergs.

"That the Titanic's speed, nearly 23 knots an hour, was not slackened.

"That the number of the life boats on the Titanic was insufficient to accomodate more than a third of the passengers to say nothing of the crew. Most members of the crew say there were sixteen life boats and two collapsibles; none say there were more than twenty boats in all.

The 700 who escaped filled most of the sixteen lifeboats and the one collapsible, which got away, to the limit of their capacity.

"Had the ship struck the iceberg headon at whatever speed and with whatever resulting shock, the bulkhead system of watertight compartments would probably have saved the vessel. As one man expressed it, it was the impossible that happened when, with a shock unbelievably light, the ship's side was torn for a length which made the bulkhead system ineffective.

WAS SPEEDING FOR RECORD.

"The Titanic was 1,799 miles from Queenstown and 1,191 miles from New York, speeding for a maiden voyage record. The night was starlight, the sea glassy. Light were out in most of the state rooms, and only two or three congenial groups remained in the public rooms.

"In the crows' nest, or lookout, and on the bridge, officers and members of the crew were at their places, awaiting relief at midnight from their two hours' watch.

"At 11:45 o'clock came the sudden sound of two guns, a warning of immediate danger.

"The crash against the iceberg, which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated by those on the bridge, which stopped the engines and closed the water tight doors.

"Captain Smith was on the bridge a moment later, giving orders for the summoning of all on board and for the putting on of life preservers and the lowering of the life boats.

"The first boats lowered contained more than passengers than the later ones, as the men were on deck first, and not enough women were there to fill them.

CREW DIDN'T HAVE TO USE REVOLVERS.

"When a moment later, the rush of frightened women and crying children to the deck began, enforcement of the women first rule became rigid. Officers loading the boats drew revolvers but in most of the cases the men, both passengers and crew, behaved in a way that called for no such restraint.

RUMORED THAT CAPTAIN SHOT HIMSELF.

"Revolver shots, heard by many persons shortly before the end of the Titanic, caused many rumors. One was that Captain Smith shot himself, another was that First Officer Murdock had ended his life. Smith, Murdock and Sixth Officer Moody are known to have been lost. The surviving officers, Lightoller, Pittman, Bothall and Lowe, have made no statement.

CAPTAIN JERKED AWAY FROM WOULD-BE RESCUERS.

"Members of the crew discredit all reports of suicide and say Captain Smith remained on the bridge until just before the ship sank, leaping only after those on the deck had been washed away. It is also related that when a cook later sought to pull him aboard a lifeboat he exclaimed: 'Let me go,' and, jerking away, went down.

DEAD BODIES ON SURFACE.

"What became of the men with life preservers is a question asked since the disaster by many persons. Dead bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away.

"To relate that the ship's string band gathered into the saloon, near the end, and played 'Nearer My God to Thee' sounds like an attempt to give an added solemn color to a scene which was in itself the climax of solemnity. But various passengers and survivors of the crew agree in the declaration that they heard the music:

" 'So by my woes I'll be Nearer my God to thee,
Nearer to thee.'

"WOMEN FIRST" WAS ORDER

"In the loading of the first boat restrictions of sex were not made, and it seemed to the men who filled in beside the women that there would be boats enough for all. But the ship's officers knew better than this, and as the spreading fear caused an advance towards the suspended craft the order 'Women first' was heard and the men were pushed aside.

COURAGE OF MEN ASSERTED.

To the scene of the next two hours on those decks and in the waters below, such adjectives as "dramatic" and "tragic" do but poor justice. With the knowledge of deadly peril gaining greater power each moment over those men and women, the courage of the greater part of the men, both among cabin passengers, officers, crew and steerage, asserted itself.

MRS. STRAUS REFUSED TO LEAVE HUSBAND.

Isidor Straus, supporting his wife on her way to a life boat, was held back by an inexorable guard. Another officer strove to help her to a seat of safety, but she brushed away his arm and clung to her husband, crying, "I will not go without you."

Another woman took her place and Mrs. Straus, clinging to her husband, became part of a picture now drawn indellibly in many minds.

ASTOR AND HARRIS SIDE BY SIDE.

Colonel Astor, holding his young wife's arm, stood decorously aside as the officers spoke to him and Mrs. Astor and her maid were ushered to seats. Mrs. Henry B. Harris, parted in like manner from her husband, saw him last at the rail, beside Colonel Astor.

Walter M. Clark of Los Angeles, nephew of the Montana senator, joined the line of men as his young wife, sobbing, was placed in one of the craft.

"Let him come. There is room," cried Mrs. Emil Taussig, as the men of the White Star motioned to her husband to leave her. It was with great difficulty that he released her hold to permit her to be led to her place.

George D. Widener, who had been in Captain Smith's company a few moments after the crash, was another whose wife was parted from him and lowered, a moment later to the surface of the calm sea.

SAW NOTHING OF BUTT OR STEAD.

Of Major Archie Butt, a favorite with his fellow tourists; of Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk; of Benjamin Guggenheim or of William T. Stead no one seems to know whether they tarried too long in their state rooms or whether they forebore to approach the fast filling boats; none of them was in the throng which, weary hours afterward, reached the Carpathia.

CHECK RUSH OF STEERAGE MEN.

As they reached the water, those in the boats saw what those on the decks could not see—that the Titanic was listing rapidly to starboard and that her stern was rising at a portentous angle. A rush of men steerage passengers toward the boats was checked by officers with revolvers in hand.

NO PROVISIONS IN BOAT.

Some of the boats, crowded too full, drifted for a time. None had provisions or water, there was lack of clothing, and the only lights were the still undimmed arcs and incandescents of the settling ship.

STEWARD'S GREEN LIGHT KEPT THEM TOGETHER.

On one of the boats a steward, who explained to the passengers that he had been shipwrecked twice before, appeared carrying three oranges and a green light. That green light, many of the survivors say, was to the shipwrecked hundreds as the pillar of fire by night. Long after the ship had disappeared, and while confusing false lights danced about the boats, the green lantern kept them together on the course which led them to the Carpathia.

PASSENGERS AND SAILORS LEAP OVERBOARD.

As the end of the Titanic became manifestly but a matter of moments, the oarsmen pulled their boats away and the chilling waters began to echo splash after splash as passengers and sailors in life preservers leaped overboard and started swimming away to escape the expected suction.

Only the hardiest constitution could endure for more than a few moments such a numbing bath. The first vigorous strokes gave way to heartbreaking cries of "Help, help," and stiffened forms were seen floating, relaxed in death.

Revolver shots were heard in the ship's last moments. The report spread among the boats was that Captain Smith had ended his life with a bullet.

SAY CAPTAIN JUMPED AT LAST MOMENT.

Then it was said that a mate had shot a steward who had tried to push his way into a boat against orders. None of these tales has been verified, and many of the crew say the captain without a preserver leaped in at the last and went down, refusing a cook's offered aid.

The last of the boats, a collapsible, was launched too late to get away and was overturned by the ship sinking. Some of those in it—all, say some witnesses—found safety on a raft or were picked up by a lifeboat. In the Marconi tower, almost to the last, the click of the sending instrument was heard over the waters.

MUSIC OF ORCHESTRA GROWS FAINTER.

As the screams in the water multiplied, another sound was heard, strong and clear at first, then fainter in the distance. It was the melody of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," played by the string orchestra in the dining saloon. Some of those on the water started to sing the words but grew silent as they realized that for the men who played the music was a sacrament soon to be consummated by death. The strains of the hymn and the frantic cries of the dying blended in a symphony of sorrow.

TITANIC DISAPPEARS.

Led by the green light, the boats drew away, and the bow, then the quarter, then the stacks and last the stern of the marvel ship of a few days before passed beneath the waters. The great force of the ship sinking was unaided by any violence of the elements, and the suction, not so great as had been feared, rocked but mildly the group of boats now a quarter of a mile distant from it.

WOMEN WEEP; MEN CHOKE BACK TEARS.

Sixteen boats were in the procession which entered on the terrible hours of rowing, drifting and suspense. Women wept for lost husbands and sons and the men choked back tears and sought to comfort the widowed. They strove, though none too sure themselves, to convince the women of the certainty that a rescue ship would appear.

CARPATHIA'S SMOKESTACK APPEARS.

Early dawn brought no ship, but not long after 5 o'clock the Carpathia, far out of her path and making eighteen knots instead of her usual fifteen, showed her single red and black smoke stack upon the horizon. In the joy of that sight griefs were forgotten for the moment.

Soon afterward, Captain Rostron and Chief Steward Hughes were welcoming chilled and bedraggled arrivals over the Carpathia's side.

The silence of the Carpathia's engines, the piercing cold, the clamor of many voices in the companion ways had caused me to dress hurriedly and awaken my wife at 5:40 A. M. Monday. Our steward, meeting me outside, pointed to a wailing host in the rear dining room and said, "From the Titanic. She's at the bottom of the ocean."

WOMEN FALTER AS THEY ARE HELPED ABOARD.

At the ship's side a moment later I saw the last of the line of boats discharge their loads and saw women, some with cheap shawls about their heads, some with the costliest of fur coats, ascending the ship's side. And such joy as the first sight of our ship may have given them had disappeared from their faces and there were tears and signs of faltering as the women were helped up the ladders or hoisted aboard in swings. For lack of room to stow them, several of the Titanic's boats were set adrift.

PART BRIDAL COUPLES

Only One of Ten Was Not Separated Before Titanic Went Down.

Special to the Pioneer Press.

New York, April 18.—There were ten bridal couples aboard the Titanic, and only one of them was not separated. This fortunate young couple, in an interview given on the pier, said they were the only ones who did not become separated, all of which, they maintained, was due to the fact that there was no panic at first. The bridegroom, therefore, was allowed to enter the boat with his bride. The lucky couple got away from the pier shortly after their experiences had been told to the reporter by a man on the pier. He said he believed they were Mr. and Mrs. George Harder.

"The groom," said the reporter's informant, "related an incident to me of a man less fortunate than himself. This man, the groom told me, just before the panic set in was standing at the gangway where the women were being loaded into a boat and made a move as though to enter the boat. An officer approached and ordered the man away. Not moving quickly enough to satisfy the officer, the latter walked to the man and knocked him down. The man, instead of falling to the deck, fell head first into the boat, and, though stunned by the fall, he soon revived and found himself still in the boat, which by that time was being lowered. The man was saved as a result.

His Creed a Selfish One.

The philosophy of the man in the street is to get through life with a minimum of self-sacrifice and a maximum of self-indulgence.

Women's College for Buddhists.

A university is to be founded by the Buddhists for the high education of women. A meeting is reported to have taken place at the Nishi-Hongangi temple, Kyoto, in which it was unanimously decided to carry on the undertaking as a work of the Women's Association of this Buddhist sect. The cost for the institute is estimated at 280,000 yen.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Fourteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elgin, Ill.—"After fourteen years of suffering everything from female complaints, I am at last restored to health.

"I employed the best doctors and even went to the hospital for treatment and was told there was no help for me. But while taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use until I was made well."—Mrs. HENRY LEISEBERG, 743 Adams St.

Kearneysville, W. Va.—"I feel it my duty to write and say what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female weakness and at times felt so miserable I could hardly endure being on my feet.

"After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your special directions, my trouble is gone. Words fail to express my thankfulness. I recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. G. B. WHITTINGTON.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

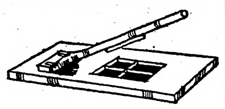
GROWING AND CULTIVATING POTATO CROP IS PROFITABLE

Sandy Loam Soil Usually Produces Tubers of Better Quality Than Heavy Land—Good Drainage Is Another Essential—Machinery Saves Much Time and Great Amount of Labor.

A sandy loam soil usually produces potatoes of better quality than a heavier soil does. It also has the advantage of remaining in a more mellow condition during the growing season, thus giving the tubers a chance to become more shapely, and making it easier to dig the crop. A heavier soil will sometimes produce a larger yield because it is often more fertile, but brown rot of the tubers is apt to be worse on such soils.

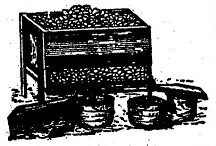


Seed Potato Cutter.

Soil which has produced a scabby crop of potatoes should be avoided, because the scab spores live over in the soil and will cause more or less scab on the tubers for five or six years afterward.

Potatoes grow well on any slope, but a northern slope is most desirable, because on it the crop will suffer less during hot dry weather.

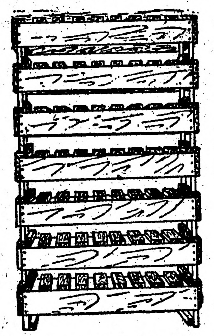
Good drainage is important. Potatoes will stand less excess of moisture than other common farm crops, and artificial drainage should be provided wherever natural drainage is at all deficient. Potatoes rot more in low, wet land than in well drained upland in years when rot occurs. The same is true of heavy soils compared with light soils, which is because heavy soils do not part with their excess moisture as rapidly as light soils do.



A Convenient Potato Hopper With Boards and Knives Fastened In Them for Cutting Seed Potatoes.

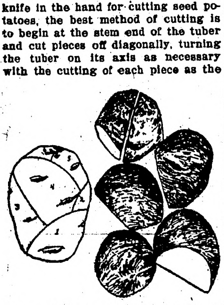
No best time for planting can be given that will fit every year. If a dry spell occurs early in the season, and is followed by plenty of rain, late planted potatoes yield the best, while on the other hand, when a dry spell occurs in the latter half of the growing season, early planted potatoes do best.

A number of machines for cutting seed are available on the market. One trouble with most of them is that they leave pieces without eyes.



Racks Showing How Seed Potatoes May Be Stored in a Small Space.

A rapid method of cutting seed potatoes by hand is to stick a sharp knife firmly into a board and cut the tubers by pushing them against the knife. This enables the use of both hands on the tubers. When using the knife in the hand for cutting seed potatoes, the best method of cutting is to begin at the stem end of the tuber and cut pieces off diagonally, turning the tuber on its axis as necessary with the cutting of each piece as the work progresses toward the other end, and when the seed end is reached cut it in two, so as to divide the extra number of eyes there found.



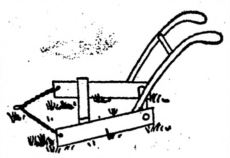
Potato Marked to Show How It Should Be Cut by Hand, and the Individual Pieces of Another Tuber Cut in Same Manner.

In planting potatoes in large quantities a tremendous amount of time and hard work can be saved by the use of a machine. It plants the potatoes at a uniform depth and covers them evenly, thus insuring a better stand. Large numbers of these machines are now in use, and as they are made of various sizes, the cost is within the reach of the average farmer. A handy implement for covering the potatoes may be made of inch boards eight inches wide and 2½ feet long. It has a cross-bar of 2x4x2 feet long at the front end and one foot at the rear. A small chain is attached to the front of the runners for drawing with a horse. Old plow handles guide it. So simple an implement can be made by even an inexperienced hand.

Eleven bushels is a more profitable quantity of seed potatoes to use per acre than five or eight bushels.

Potatoes affected with brown rot should not be used for planting.

Potato growers should follow a system of rotation in which the potatoes follow clover. They should also pay more attention to potato culture in all its stages.

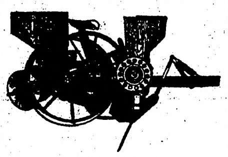


A Potato Coverer.

Potato growers can improve their "seed" stock by proper selection of potatoes for planting.

The most practicable insecticide for the potato beetle is Paris green. It should be used at the rate of not less than one pound per acre for each application.

Most farmers do not cultivate their potatoes the most profitable number of times. It must be remembered that the potato crop suffers readily from drought, and that frequent cultivation is practically the only means by which the moisture can be conserved. Frequent cultivation also sets free much plant food that would otherwise remain locked up in the soil. Potatoes should be cultivated once a week from the time the rows can be followed until the cultivator wheels injure the plants.



A Potato Planter.

CHOLERA AMONG FARM POULTRY

Ailing Birds Should Be Destroyed or Separated to Prevent Distribution of the Germs.

(By B. F. KAUPP, Pathologist Colorado Agricultural College.)

The symptoms usually noted are as follows: The bird begins to mope, remains on the roost with feathers ruffled, head down and wings more or less droopy; the bird presents a "ball" appearance. The bird is weak, and diarrhea is present. The discharge is of a greenish-yellow color. The bird usually lives from three days to a week.

We have studied this disease and conducted experiments with it in chickens, turkeys and ducks.

When the abdominal cavity is opened, the liver will be noted to be much larger than normal, and darker. The spleen may be enlarged. The intestines are congested and may appear inflamed.

As to treatment: The henhouse and yards should be cleaned thoroughly. The house and, so far as possible, the yard, should be sprayed once a day with a five per cent. solution of carbolic acid, zenoleum or creolin. Birds should be watered from drinking fountains. These should be cleaned and disinfected once a day, using disinfecting solution same strength as for house and yards. The feed should be given in troughs which are so constructed as not to allow stepping into them. These should be cleaned and disinfected once or twice a day. As the germs escape from the sick birds from the discharge, the birds, as soon as noticed to be ailing, should be destroyed and burned, or at least separated so as to prevent further distribution of the germs.

As treatment sulphocarbolate tablets containing the suphocarbolate of calcium, sodium and zinc, have given us the best results in our experimental work. Vaccination has also been successfully carried on.

Flowers in Profusion Adorn the Season's Millinery Models

SINCE the days of the "Merry Widow," of beloved memory, hats have not been so flower-laden as they will be this spring. From the simple wreath about the wide brimmed shape, to the bonnet entirely covered with flowers and trimmed with a stiff, standing bunch of blossoms and foliage, flowers are the feature of trimmed hats. They merit this consideration for there never was a time when artificial blossoms were made with such marvelous fidelity to nature. They are more than faithful copies, they may be said to be even lovingly made, for every little graceful turn of stem and curl of petal has been reproduced.

Conventional Wheat of Satin and Silk Fibre.

Beside those flowers which are copies of nature there is a great liking for what may be called "conventional" flowers. These are made of silk or satin folded into flower forms but only suggest the original models. They are used more sparingly than others and in small wreathes and tiny bunches. They are liked immensely on children's millinery.

A favorite way for using small flowers is illustrated here. Roses or other blossoms are banked about the under brims of straw shapes, sometimes covering them completely. With this underbrim trimming, ribbon is usually selected to make a finish for the upper brim.

In all—flower hats, the brim-edge is usually bound with velvet and the under-brim covered with maline or chiffon. As a rule such hats set close to the head, for naturally the hats entirely covered with flowers are in the smaller shapes.

COAT AND SKIRT COSTUMES

Charming Designs and Many Models Are Provided from Which to Make a Selection.

Tailormade coat and skirt costumes are very much under discussion at the moment, and many of them are carried out in fine navy serge and adorned with long rows of embroidered buttons.

Others, again, are trimmed more or less elaborately with black silk braiding, and arranged with smartly cut coats, lined with white satin, and finished with collars of black corded silk.

A new and very effective navy serge costume has a skirt which opens down the center of the front to show a narrow panel of the same material, covered closely with black braiding. The coat, which is made in a short three-quarter length, has broad revers braided to match the panel which adorns the front of the skirt, the cuffs being braided to correspond.

In the course of the last fortnight a fair number of new models in cloth taffetas and charmeuse have been launched upon the Paris stage and at the races. One point is certain, the vogue of the long sleeve is established, and, in nine cases out of ten, we find it adapted to the principal creations of the rival camps in the dressmaking world.

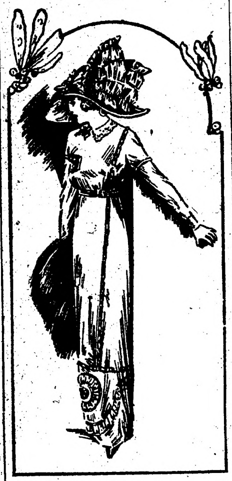
The principal object in reviving this sleeve is to reveal the shape of the arm in all its beauty. In thick materials for tailor costumes, such as serge or cloth, the sleeve starts from the shoulder seam, and is cut on almost tight fitting classical lines.

New Accessories.

Chantilly and Malines laces are among the newest ideas for spring veils, particularly the cream white tones, which are becoming against the skin. Some of these are long, draped gracefully round the hats and hanging at the back.

The return of the wastline has given opportunity for the display of neat belts. These are in suede and patent leather, quite narrow, and the more decorative are adorned with jewels. Jeweled shoes also are a fashionable fad of the moment. Diamonds and other precious stones adorn shoes of gold and silver brocade and duchesse lace.

FASHIONABLE ALLIANCE



A walking gown of dull prune satin trimmed with black taffetas ruchings and frills; touches of wool embroidery on breast pocket and neck; hat to match.

About the Fashions.

So many of the smart little taffeta coats have three-quarter sleeves that long silk gloves will be sure to have great popularity this summer. The shops are showing delightfully dainty glove wear—long-wristed affairs of champagne color with embroideries in self-color; or of white silk with white embroideries or small cameo patterns embroidered in black.

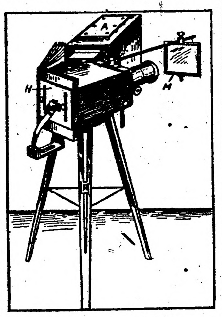
The vogue of the high-buttoned boot for wear with all types of costume has brought, as a natural result, the trim, dainty, buttoned oxford. These buttoned oxfords are cut so cleverly that in them the foot looks as slender and dainty as in a slipper.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

PICTURES ARE EASILY TAKEN

After Much Experimenting Apparatus Is Perfected That Does Away With Lantern Slide.

Much experimenting to find a way to produce a picture upon a screen from just a photograph, postcard or book, without making the usual lantern slide, has been done and to a certain extent these efforts have succeeded. The accompanying illustration of a new lantern for this purpose serves to illustrate the method used. To the regular stereopticon, minus the slide holder, is connected a metal attachment containing a book or picture holder and proper lenses. The light from the arc is focused upon the picture in the holder and the picture itself, acting as a reflector, passes the light on through lenses to a mirror suspended at the proper angle to reflect the rays upon the screen, says the Popular Mechanics.



Direct Reflection Projector.

The apparatus produces clear pictures when located about twenty feet from the screen and displays any colors present on the postcard or picture in the lantern.

USE RADIUM TO TREAT GOUT

Special Apparatus Used From Which Chemical Product Is Transported In Current of Air.

Radium-laden breezes are the latest thing in the treatment of gout. One of the papers read at the German medical congress, which has just been held at Wiesbaden, was on the application of radium in the aerial state. Radium "emanatoria" have been established in Berlin and at Bad Homburg, and now Ems is to have one. A special apparatus from which radium is transported in a current of fresh, cool air is fixed in a room, and the patients have merely to sit in the room and talk or read the newspapers or play draughts; the radium in solution in the air does the rest, and affects the blood through the lungs. This treatment is especially recommended for all gouty ailments. In the recent torrid conditions of the atmosphere it has afforded to gouty subjects something more than an amelioration—amounting almost to a pleasing compensation for their aches and pains.

LIFTER FOR THE LABORATORY

Convenient Little Device for Handling Dishes and the Like Is Quickly Made and Cheap.

(By GEORGE A. JAMES, in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.)

A very convenient little device for the home laboratory is illustrated herewith. It consists of a detachable handle for lifting receptacles such as evaporating dishes and the like. The lifter is made of a heavy piece of wire bent to the shape indicated in the drawing. One end is curved to fit against the outside of the dish, while the other end fits over the rim inside. The parts that come in contact with the dish are rubber covered, two short pieces of rubber being slipped over the wire. The device is so useful, and can be made so quickly and cheaply, that it should find a place in every amateur's laboratory.

STARS MADE BY COLLISIONS

Professor Bickerton, British Scientist, Believes Luminous Bodies Caused by Solar Agitation.

Prof. A. W. Bickerton, a British scientist, believes new stars are caused by solar collisions. The collision of two suns, he said, resulted in the formation of a third body. If two dead suns came into collision they would burst into flame. The collision would take about three-quarters of an hour. In each case the collision would take the same time, as the colliding bodies would get up a velocity proportionate to their size. Then there would flash out a brilliant star, which would become a permanent body. The effect of a complete collision of two gaseous suns would be to make a new sun. Such collisions were not accidental. They did not occur at random. Included among a number of agencies tending to develop such collisions was gravitation. Before suns collided they fell toward each other and got up speed for hundreds of years. The tremendous speed thus developed was stopped suddenly in the colliding parts and converted into heat. Thus in about an hour a new star was born, explosive force expanded it, and it swelled out its diameter at a speed of millions of miles an hour. The sudden flareup of a light thousands of times the brilliancy of the sun had induced astronomers to imagine that a collision of suns had caused the phenomena. The spectra observed, however, were absolutely inexplicable to them because they had overlooked the third body, the new star. Professor Bickerton contends that the appearance of Nova Persei, a new star so brilliant that nothing equal to it had appeared for 300 years, was explained by his theory. Nova Persei was 10,000 times as brilliant as the sun.

MEGAPHONE THAT ROLLS UP

Made of Broad Strip of Non-Absorbent, Flexible Fiber and Occupies Very Little Room.

A simple variation of the ordinary megaphone has been devised by a Massachusetts man. It is one that rolls up. It is made of a broad strip of non-absorbent, flexible fiber with snap fasteners to hold it in any position wanted. The flexible handle also unsnaps at one end so that when the apparatus is rolled up it can be wrapped around it and hold it together in what appears to be a music roll. As will readily be understood, there are numerous advantages to this rolling megaphone—or rather, it is a convenience to many people—notably the owners of small launches, where room counts and a megaphone can be stowed away in a corner.

HOME OF FANNY CROSBY

MRS. FANNY CROSBY, the blind hymn writer, celebrated her 92nd birthday the other day at her home in Bridgeport, Conn. Up to the present time she has written more than seven thousand hymns. Among the most famous of them are "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross" and "Jesus the Water of Life Will Give." Mrs. Crosby was born at Southeast, N. Y., on March 24, 1820, and has been blind since she was six weeks old. She is still enjoying good health, and spends most of her time knitting when not dictating hymns.

BIG POTASH DEPOSIT

From Six to Ten Million Tons Found in Mojave Desert.

Located in Old Lake Bed—Many Have Lost Lives in Traversing Waste Which Will Now Yield Product of Much Value.

Washington.—Following the announcement by the geological survey that a survey party in connection with a party from the department of agriculture had located a potash deposit in the Mojave desert, the agricultural department tells more about the deposit and the circumstances under which it exists.

The department states that a pocket has been found down in the Mojave desert in southern California containing from 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 tons, so far as can be ascertained now. The prospect is that it will last twenty or thirty years and tide the country over till a more thorough search can be made.

The deposit was struck simultaneously by the two searching parties in the Borax lake region of the Mojave. This section, like most of this southwestern country, is an old lake bed. The borings for potash were made in a section of plya or hard desert sand.

The region that has been investigated is underlaid by a big body of natural brine that comes to the surface in the form of wells when borings are made.

Borax lake, or Searle lake, is one of the many playas or intermittently wet and dry lakes common throughout the arid regions of the west. It lies between the Argus and Slate ranges, in the Mojave desert. Borax lake was the original scene of famous borax mines. The lake or flat is about ten miles long and five miles wide and has received the drainage from the surrounding mills for many thousands of years, vast quantities of dissolved minerals being thus concentrated in it. The water has been evaporated under the intense heat of the long, hot seasons, but the salts have remained, so that for most of the year, in fact often throughout the year, the bed is a glistening plain of white salts, in attempting to cross which under a brazen sun men have lost their lives.

The mirage plays its strange tricks here, and at the driest places the traveler can generally see what appears to be a broad expanse of water covering the bed a little way ahead—always a little distance off, until he approaches the shore of Borax lake. Then when he looks behind him he sees the water apparently covering the ground over which he has just come. The lake occupies a valley made by faults—breaks and slips in the earth's crust—where a great area has been dropped down.

The salts are not evenly distributed over the surface of the lake. Borax was found plentifully over about three square miles, common salt is everywhere, and sodium carbonate and sodium sulphate are widely distributed. One boring is said to have passed through 28 feet of solid trona (hydrous carbonate of soda) of great purity. At other places there is 25 feet of solid mixed sulphate and carbonate of soda, with smaller quantities of other salts.

Several years ago an English company attempted to work the soda deposits on an extensive scale, but for some reasons the project has not been pushed.

Seek Medals For Women

One Rescued Father From Vicious Steer and the Other Saved Her Husband.

Topeka, Kan.—Because of heroism displayed by Mary Boughton, aged fourteen, of Hamilton county, and Mrs. Nora Munday of Gray county, in saving lives in western Kansas during recent snowstorms, friends of the two have started a movement to obtain for them Carnegie hero medals.

While rounding up cattle before a blizzard, Mary Boughton's father was attacked by a vicious steer. He was thrown from his horse and the animal was about to gore him when the girl, mounted upon a cow pony, drove the steer away. A few days later a rural mail carrier became lost in a storm. Mary Boughton found him, dug him out of a drift and saved him from freezing.

Mrs. Nora Munday, wife of S. P. Munday, who lives near Cimarron, Kan., when her husband failed to reach home after a heavy snowstorm March 14, started in search of him. For miles over the prairie she followed an almost obliterated trail and found her husband in a deserted hut almost frozen. Both Mrs. Munday's hands and both her feet were frozen.

PRIMARY ELECTION IS COSTLY

$1.50 to $10.50 a Vote Is Expense New York Taxpayers Have to Pay.

Buffalo, N. Y. — It cost the taxpayers from $1.50 to $10.50 a vote for each vote at the recent primaries in western New York, according to figures compiled by the local election commissioners. The minimum cost was $1.50 and most of the figures shown were considerably above that figure. The cost in New York city is said to average about $3 per vote.

Has Pensions For Mothers

French Government's Scheme to Solve Birth Rate Problem—Priest on Marriage.

Paris.—Although its enemies designate it as "an attempt to blackmail nature," much support, both journalistic and legislative, is being given the petition now before the senate to pension the French mother for every child to the extent of 20 francs ($4) a year during the child's minority. More than this, under the same measure, the mother of eight children would receive a medal corresponding to the medaille militaire granted in recognition of valor. The measure will probably become a law, as the senate committee appointed to report on the matter has signified its approval of the scheme to the ministry of the interior.

Another interesting occurrence on a similar subject was the first of a series of lectures by the well-known priest, Mgr. Bolo, on "The Marriages of the Future," in which the ecclesiastical speaker took a view quite advanced for his profession.

"Not only are there more bachelors, but they are becoming systematic," he said. "No longer do they render homage to matrimony by regretting that they are bachelors because they cannot do better. Theirs is the philosophy of the good man to whom some one said, 'Your son is not old enough to marry; you ought to wait till he knows what he is doing,' to which this good man replied: 'You are mistaken, for if my son grows wiser he will never marry.'"

Mgr. Bolo continues by upbraiding the men of today for their hesitancy in the matter of marriage. "If you wish me to use the proper word, allow me to utter it in an attenuated and inoffensive sense: I will say that you have become cowards. You are afraid. Being rich, you fear that if you marry you will have to work. Being a workman, you are afraid that you will have to do without tobacco and absinthe. With a modest pay you prefer to give no thought to healthy happiness and to the pride of taking your revenge on a hard life by the success of your children, and you do not care to risk years of difficulty or criticism of the landlords, who have no liking for children."

BOY OF 11 IS LIFE SAVER

Trenton (N. J.) Lad Jumps Into Creek and Rescues Drowning Playmate.

Trenton, N. J.—Raymond Morton, eleven years old, son of Clarence Morton of Clay street, proved himself a hero when he jumped into the Assanpink creek here and rescued his playmate, Norwood Skinner, ten years old, from drowning.

Skinner fell in but could not swim, and immediately sank. Morton, realizing the danger of his playmate, jumped in after him, and after a few minutes' struggle succeeded in rescuing his friend. Two other boys who witnessed the struggle carried the young hero home on their shoulders.

Hungry Pair Desert Isle

London Phosphate Company's Caretaker Gives Up the Job After Six Years' Service.

San Francisco.—Gustav Schultz and Daria Pinzen, caretakers for a London phosphate company on the Clipperton islands, a small group 600 miles southwest of Acapulco, who arrived here on the steamer Newport, told of having lived three months on fish and sea fowl when the steamer Russia, sent by the government, failed to arrive with supplies.

Schultz and his housekeeper, who called themselves king and queen, have lived on one of the islands six years and in that time have seen no one until their departure a month ago except the Mexican garrison of ten soldiers and the crew of the supply steamer.

Schultz and "Senora" Pinzen are awaiting the settlement of the ownership of the islands in April, when Victor Emmanuel of Italy will arbitrate a dispute between France and Mexico concerning them.

AMERICAN GRAFTERS IN PARIS

by STEPHEN ALLEN REYNOLDS

ALONG the boulevards between the Madeleine and the Place de la Republique, along the Champs Elysees from the Arch to the Obelisk, in little brasseries along the Seine, in the so-called "American bars" of the Opera quarter, in the pastry shops along the Rue de Faubourg St. Honore, at the prix fixe tables d'hote along the Boul' Mich of the Latin quarter — in fact, in almost any of the twenty arondissements within the fifty-six gates of the French capital, will be found the ubiquitous American grafter.

Attracted to you by either the American roll to the brim of your derby or your Brockton made shoe, he will unerringly single you out as a fellow-countryman abroad on pleasure bent, therefore fish for his net. He may be working on one of the three commoner "lays"—the "touch," the "loan" or the "guide." In other words, he may brazenly ask you for a small sum of money with which he may obtain food or lodging, he may tell you a hard luck story about a mythical delayed draft and ask you for a loan to tide him over, or he may offer to guide you around and about Paris at so much an hour or a day.

Grafters working the "touch" plan are easily got rid of. A small piece of silver and a decided refusal to give more will usually suffice to send them on their way, although your name and temporary address will be passed around sooner or later, together with a "tip" as to the amount you gave the first begging countryman.

The pleas of those after a "loan" are in many cases both heartrending and plausible. A cable message is often displayed which may read: "Sorry delay. Draft for thousand first mail." Who could refuse a clean-cut young fellow from Milwaukee after he had told you of the clothing locked up at his hotel, of two sleepless nights passed in walking the streets of Paris? With tears in his eyes he assures you that not a morsel of food has he swallowed in eight and forty hours; then he exhibits the cable message, and you part with 50 or 100 francs—never to see it again.

The beggars are a nuisance, the borrowers are a pest, but the so-called American "guides" of the great French city are most unquestionably the worst of the lot, in that their dealings with American visitors, while apparently straightforward, are as crooked as the proverbial ram's horn. Graft, under a thousand different cloaks, enters into their propositions. They toil not, nor do they spin, yet few tourists eat better food, drink better wine or wear more fashionable attire than do these buccaneers of the boulevards.

They pounce upon you as you leave your train at the Gare St. Lazare; they scan the columns of the newspapers for the names and addresses of the newly arrived Americans; they haunt the vicinage of the Grand hotel; they hail you as you leave the Credit Lyonnais after cashing a draft; but possibly of all places their favorite stamping ground is along the northern side of the Boulevard des Capucines. Here, upon every hand, particularly during the late afternoon and evening, you will encounter the American "guide" airily swinging his rattan stick, his shifty eyes looking for the telltale American derby.

Naturally, if it be your first visit to Paris, you desire to see all Paris, both before and after dark. He will help you. You hail with delight the coming of the interpreter-guide who speaks your language, for are not the sights and mysteries of Paris as an open book to him?

His rates are only a louis a day and expenses, but even this sum can be shaded should you plead your inability to afford that sum. Should you be unable to afford a half-louis, or even a measly five-franc piece, it is more than likely that the guide will yawn, gaze up and down the boulevard, and then deliver himself substantially as follows:

"Well, I'm sorry. Times are pretty slow over here and I'm not very busy. But look a-here—I'll tell you what I'll do: I've nothing on today or tonight, and seeing that you're from Little Old New York—my home town—I'll show you around for nothing, just for the sake of passing away the time. You pay the cab fares, the lunch, the supper, and I'll show you everything that's to be seen. I'll save you money and keep you from being skinned. It'll cost you less if I take you around than it would if you tried to get around alone—and take it from me, the Apaches are pretty bad this year and it isn't safe for an outsider to pike around Montmartre without a guide who knows all the ropes. What do you say? Will we start now?"

Who could refuse such an invitation? Not the average American tourist upon his first visit. True, with the aid of a guidebook he might find his way to the Louvre. His boarding school French might even serve to get him to Versailles and back again without serious mishap or extraordinary expenditure. But nearly all American visitors, both male and female, desire for once in their lives to witness the far-famed near-naughtiness of Paris at first hand, and that is where the guide comes in.

Versailles, the Bois de Boulogne, the Louvre, a dinner at the Cafe de Paris, followed by a night at the Folies Bergere, might suit a small minority of the American visitors, and a few of the women folk, after a cheap glove hunting trip, a day in the dressmaking establishments in the Rue de la Paix and a grenadine at one of the marble topped tables along the Boulevard des Italiens, feel that they have seen all that is fit to see of Paris.

Not so, however, with the great majority. Male and female alike clamor for the Moulin Rouge, the Bal Tararin, the Abbaye, Maxim's, the Tavern of the Red Ass, the Rat Mort and other resorts of lesser repute. They seek to comb the narrow streets of the Latin Quarter that they may see Bohemia with their own eyes. They are anxious to buy wine at the Dome for models who sometimes pose; they do not rest until they have visited the Bal Bullier, famous on five continents. Hence the guide—for it is an easier matter for a multi-millionaire to get by St. Peter than for an "unsteered" stranger to find some of these establishments.

When an obliging young man offers to show you around town without any expense to yourself, what is more natural than for you to accept such a kind offer.

Having accepted the gratuitous offer of the American guide, you map out a tour for the afternoon and evening, we will say. Singularly enough, your guide is not satisfied with the first cocher who cracks his whip and solicits your patronage—he needs must go down the line and pick out a certain driver.

"This feller's on the level with his charges," the guide explains as you drive off. "I know him for a square cocher. Some of the others would most likely drive you off into some side street where the Apaches would hold you up and split with him."

Having arrived at your destination by a more or less circuitous route, you pay the driver a sum which seems cheap when compared with a drive of the same length in the States, and yet it is usually twice or three times the amount of the legal fare. You notice that the guide seems to be very friendly with the driver and that when you dismiss the cabby he shakes hands with the guide. Indeed, this handshaking continues throughout the entire evening, for no matter where you stop to drink or eat or gaze the proprietors always shake hands with the guide—invariably at the moment you take your leave.

It seems quite unnecesary to add that from the moment you enter a resort a careful account is kept of your expenditures, and at the moment of your leavetaking a commission varying from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. passes from one palm to another. It is usually 50 per cent. in the resorts which appeal to the inner man, as well as at the show places and cabarets of Montmartre.

Even should you venture into a place where your guide is personally unknown to the management he still obtains his commission, for when you enter his first move is to whisper to the proprietor or manager these four magic words: "Je suis l'interprete." The commission is added to the price, and rare indeed are the shops or resorts which do not make it "worth while" for the man who accompanies you.

Indeed, some of these self-styled "interpreter-guides" have been residents of Paris for such short space that their French vocabulary is practically limited to those four words.

In the early hours of the morning, after the guide has shaken hands with the last cocher in front of your hotel, you thank your companion for his kindness in helping you to pass an enjoyable evening. You may even take pity on him on account of the dull state of his business and surreptitiously slip a half-louis into his receptive palm. He will not object. He has spent twelve hours, more or less, with you, and seems to have been well acquainted wherever you went. You are confident that he has saved you money, and naturally you feel grateful toward him.

The fact of the matter is that he has been driven all over the city at your expense; he has lunched and dined with you, to say nothing of the midnight bite at the Cafe Weber; and if you have spent the sum of 200 francs during the afternoon and evening you may rest assured that gold and silver amounting to some 80 or 100 francs—once yours—is safe in one of the pockets of the guide's fashionably cut trousers.

It was one the privilege of the writer to listen to the absinthe inspired confidences of a number of American "guides" and panhandlers. A young man wearing a frock coat and well ironed silk topper approached the table and begged for the privilege of a few words with me. His linen was spotless—his story seemed flawless. He had, so he said, been robbed in Montmartre while seeing the town a few nights before. He had cabled for funds, but a heartless landlord had locked up his ten suits of clothing and turned him into the street. Would I kindly come to his relief with a small loan for a few days until the arrival of his draft? He exhibited a typewritten cable message which looked promising, and the tears came to my eyes as I thought of his predicament and overpeppered my bouillon.

"I'm sorry I can't help you out," I told him. "You see, this happens to be my third visit to Paris, and I've heard all about these heartless landlords and delayed drafts before. Those sleeve buttons of yours ought to fetch enough at the Mont de Piete to tide you over for a few days should you be on the level."

The man in the frock coat was about to slink away, when I asked him to join me and have an aperitif. Over an absinthe-au-sucre he waxed confidential and told me his story.

"You're wise," said he, as he surveyed the opalescent contents of his glass. "There sure is a bunch of American grafters over here having a pretty soft time. I've only been over here two months, but some of the push have been here for years."

He helped himself to my cigarettes and continued:

"Paris is a cheap place to live in. A perfect dinner costs very little. The rent of a nice room is about half what you have to pay in New York, less than that once you can speak French and know how to make a bargain. Clothing of the best sort can be had for a song, and a two-horse carriage can be hired for about twice the price of a carfare in the states.

"Pickings are good during the tourist season, and the only kick that the boys have is on the French shoes and cigarettes. Several of the bunch import their own smokes. Of course, the favorite graft is the American tourist. He always has money, and is over here to spend it and have a good time. If we spin a good yarn about hard luck it's pretty easy to make a "touch" for a louis, and 'most any New Yorker will fall for a five-franc piece."

"I used to keep a set of books in Cleveland," another American grafter told me over a glass of Algerian "Bordeaux" in a little brasserie in the Rue Vignon. "I'd saved a bit of money and felt too strong to push a pen any longer, so I came over here to take in the sights. I went broke the third day after my arrival, and as I found so many people willing to help me I've stayed here ever since. Paris is all right after you've lived here awhile and know the ropes. I'm here going on seven years now, and I expect to live here the rest of my life."

Jewels Closely Guarded.

The sale of Abdul Hamid's jewels leads a Paris contemporary to refer to the way in which the valuables of other sovereigns are guarded. We learn that the jewels of the Russian royal family, which are of an enormous value, are kept in the Kremlin, where they are looked after by 150 officers who have retired from the army. The Italian crown jewels are guarded in a subterranean chamber on a little island in the Tiber. The crown treasures of Austria are in the custody of the Imperial bank. The Austrian jewels are of great value, but of those of Germany the same cannot be said. These are also in the custody of a bank. The Bulgarian jewels, valued at $3,000,000, are kept at a castle on the banks of the Danube. Most of the French state jewels have been dispersed, but some of great value are to be seen at the Louvre.

His Sort.

"I hate to hear a man with a bad cold telling jokes."

"Why so?"

"Because he's bound to hand you out hoarse chestnuts."

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast assures Katherine of his protection, and she informs him that they are to abandon the island immediately. The blind man and his coolie servant overpower Coast.

CHAPTER XVII.—(Continued.)

"But this boat—you say you have found it—the row-boat?" Coast demanded excitedly.

"Yes. When I had called Chang, I went down to the beach. I wanted to be alone, so that I might think. Today has been dreadful to me—alone there with him, the man I was married to, knowing he was a murderer: always fearing he suspected and trying to behave as if nothing had happened—"

Coast folded her close. "I know, I know," he said softly.

At their feet the dog stirred restlessly, whimpering; and alarmed, the woman deftly disengaged herself, with a terrified glance up the straggling, deserted street. But still they were gratefully if desperately alone and unwatched.

"Then—the shock of being told we were to leave the island . . . I wanted to think. . . . I went west along the beach, without noticing—some distance beyond the western point. Then suddenly I found the boat, drawn up close under the bluff, invisible from above. . . . At first I thought it meant Mr. Power had come back, and then I saw how unlikely that was, and tried to explain it. And suddenly it came to me—the real meaning of it. And I hurried to find you . . ."

"Thank God!" said Coast.

She looked up, wondering at his tone.

"I mean it's one way out," he said soberly; "a mightily slim chance—but yet a chance: I mean, the boat. I've been puzzling all along—if worst came to worst, there was the catboat—but how to get you aboard her? You couldn't swim that far . . ." She shook her head. "I could; but even then would it be possible to work her inshore and take you aboard unobserved? For if they saw us, I'd be under fire and . . . Blackstock has my pistol," he ended lamely.

She uttered a low cry of distress; but he could only shake his head in melancholy confirmation of the tidings, detailing the way Blockstock had seized the weapon.

"But now," he wound up with a sorry show of optimism, "it's another story. With the rowboat, we can get off. As things stand, Appleyard . . . Well, we'd better not risk waiting for him. The cat lies out of easy range, and if they try to swim out to stop us, I can beat them off with a boathook or an oar. I think we can make it—at least, it's worth trying. I'll go now and have a look at that boat."

She drew a deep breath, with a nod endorsing this forlorn hope. "Very well," she said tersely. "Go, then. I must hurry back, for fear he may miss me. . . . Yes, I can brave it out; don't worry—I shan't let him suspect. . . . And there's another reason," she continued stubbornly, when he tried to object: "I can get you a revolver if I go back. Yes, my own. I have it in my trunk; I'm sure he doesn't know of it, for I never thought to show it him. It is loaded, too; and I can get it easily. . . . Now I will go."

"Very well," he consented reluctantly. "They won't miss me, that's sure; but you . . . Try to slip away about dusk. Make some excuse, and—I'll be waiting here, all prepared. And . . . make sure of that revolver, first thing you get back. Take care of yourself above all things. . . . Oh, don't worry about me; he doesn't; with my fangs drawn, I'm no longer a factor in his calculations. . . . Go, then, and—God keep you, Katherine."

He could imagine the effort that her brave smile at parting cost her. . . .

Unsmiling, somberly thoughtful, he watched her away, then hurried down to the beach.

Ten minutes of steady walking brought him to the place where he had bathed that morning—ages ago! A scant hundred feet further on, at the very foot of the bluff that arched a slightly concave face above it, lay a rowboat, bottom up, screened by a huge boulder. Hope palpitant in his bosom, leaping and dying like a candle in the wind, he hastened to it, bent over, hands beneath the thwart, and stood it on its side. A low cry of disappointment sighed out from his lips. He let the boat fall back to its original position.

There were neither oars nor rowlocks. . . .

Despair blackened the sky for him. He swung about mechanically, in a daze of frustrated hope, and started back, plodding heavily as with weighted feet.

Fifty yards away from the boat, a resounding crash behind him brought him to the about face with a start.

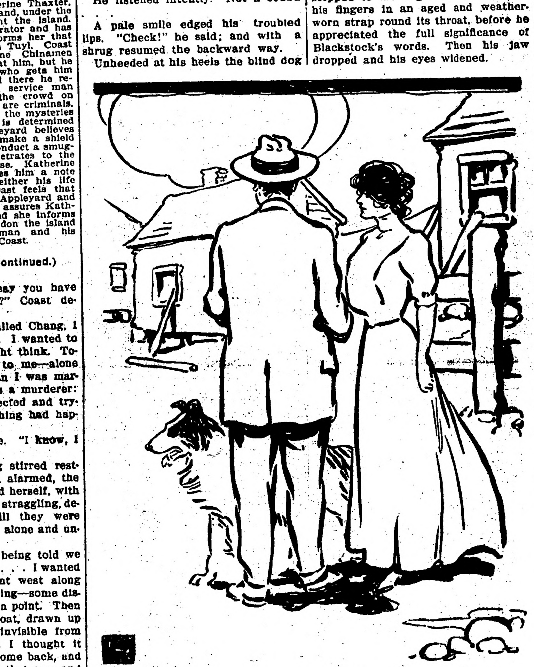
Whether by accident of nature or human design a portion of the overhanging bluff, just at its verge, had given way, precipitating upon the boat, in a cloud of pebbles, earth and dust, a rock several hundred pounds in weight; one entire side of the dory had been crushed in.

Coast's gaze ranged upward. Along the edge of the bluff nothing moved.

He listened intently. Not a sound . . .

A pale smile edged his troubled lips. "Check!" he said; and with a shrug resumed the backward way.

Unheeded at his heels the blind dog dragged, muzzle and tail adroop, uttering now and them a woeful whine so faint that it seemed hardly more than a sigh. . . .



. . . I Wanted to Think. . . .

CHAPTER XVIII.

Evening was advancing in utter calm when Coast regained the beach before the deserted village. The wind had died away to mere vagrant breaths, barely strong enough to darken that dully polished, unquiet floor of water, widening in loneliness from those desolate, fog-bound shores.

Pausing beside the beached catboat Coast stared hungrily at the little vessel off shore, gently swinging at its mooring. How to reach her, how make use of her if needs must? . . . He shook his head in doubt, strongly assured now that he would set foot upon her decks only through exercise of force.

His hopes reverted now to Appleyard as the last resort. Without the little man and the Echo—or some other boat—he was powerless, a figure for the mirth of his enemies.

At his feet the blind dog crouched, motionless as stone, seeming to search the infinite with the unwinking stare of its dead, colorless eyes. . . .

Abruptly a sound of pelting feet transformed the scene. The blind dog lifted up with a jump and faced round, growls, rumbling in its throat. Coast turned, startled and apprehensive.

Down the way to the beach Chang was running at a curious, outlandish jog-trot, head low between his broad, gaunt shoulders. Apparently he was heading directly for Coast.

With a little thrill of fear the American glanced round for some means of defending himself. He had no doubt that the Chinaman had been commissioned to dispose of him even as poor Power had been done away with. In a sudden flush of anger he laid hold of the first thing that caught his eye—which happened to be the half rotted tiller of the catboat, a heavy and formidable club if it did not break with the initial blow—and moved a pace or two forward, holding himself in a position of defence.

But within a hundred yards the Chinaman swerved widely, then held on steadily toward the northern sand spit. A moment or two later he arrived at the water's edge, and while Coast stared half stupefied, stopped and stripped to his linen drawers, then took to the water, wading out until he lost footing, then swimming with long, powerful, overhand strokes, straight off for the catboat.

Watching the round, shaven poll with its coiled pigtail cut swiftly throught the glimmering silvery sheet of water, Coast lost himself in anxious speculation until recalled by a quick movement of the dog at his side, accompanied by a deep-throated growl. He wheeled then to discover Blackstock close upon them, his burly body swaying heavily as he came on at a moderate pace.

A second growl, that more resembled an angry roar, brought the man to a standstill, with a hand moving nervously toward the side pocket of his coat, in which a firearm sagged visibly.

"If you're on speaking terms with that brute," said the man brusquely, "call him off before I take a pot-shot at him."

"Keep your hand clear of that pocket," said Coast sharply, advancing, "or I'll take a chance at you myself."

"You?" Blackstock's thick lips curved, contemptuous. "Take your chance, by all means, with that silly, worm-eaten tiller, if you've got the nerve; but call off that dog, or I'll shoot him dead. I want a little talk with you."

Coast, without ceasing to watch the man, for fear of treachery, had stepped to the dog's side and caught his fingers in an aged and weather-worn strap round its throat, before he appreciated the full significance of Blackstock's words. Then his jaw dropped and his eyes widened.

"What!" he cried, astounded. His gaze was keen upon the plump, dark, brutish face that leered at him; he saw its small eyes no longer dull and fixed, but twinkling with an evil, impish glitter. The dim suspicion that more than once he had rejected from his thoughts as extravagant and idle, was suddenly resolved into conviction. "So," he said slowly, "you do see, after all!"

"The discovery," said Blackstock with a ponderous affectation of mordant wit, "does credit to your perspicuity. I congratulate you on making it—when I chose to let you."

For a moment occupied with restraining the dog, which seemed half-mad with desire to fly at Blackstock's throat, Coast made no reply. In the light of this revelation the situation was taking on a new and fairly terrifying complexion.

"Of the two of us, I must say you've been the blindest," Blackstock continued in a manner of bitting irony that seemed to amuse him. "I wondered from the first how long you'd take to find me out. Kate, of course, I'm accustomed to; I've had her hypnotized so long that she never dreams of questioning the matter, no matter how barefaced I am. But you—Lord! I thought you'd show more discrimination!" He chuckled grimly, resting an elbow on the side of the careened boat. "You, the knight-errant!" he jeered. "Blind as a bat! Good Lord!"

Coast spoke to the dog and succeeded in quieting it temporarily. "You've been faking all along?" he asked without visible resentment. "Ever since you showed up in court with those smoked glasses?"

He was talking more than for any better reason, to gain time to readjust his view point.

RAYNOR ACCUSES WHITE STAR MEN

PICTURES ISMAY AS "ONE PRIMARILY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DISASTER."

HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Holds Official's Action of Getting Into a Life Boat as Cowardly—Believes Ship Was Risked to Affect Speedy Passage.

Ismay Orders Lines to Put on More Lifeboats.

New York, April 22.—Managing Director Ismay of the White Star line announced before the senate committee inquiry was resumed, that he had given instructions to all the lines of International Mercantile Marine, which include the White Star, the American, the Red Star, the Leyland, the Atlantic Transportation and the Dominion lines to equip all steamers with sufficient lifeboats and raft boats for every passenger and every member of the crew without regard to regulations prescribed by the governments of the United States, Great Britain, Belgium or any of the countries to which the steamers belong.

Washington, April 22.—An indictment rarely equalled in its vigor directed against J. Bruce Ismay, managing director, and other officials of the White Star line, holding them responsible for the Titanic disaster, was delivered in the senate by Senator Rayner of Maryland who pictured Ismay as "the officer primarily responsible for the whole disaster—who has reached his destination in safety and unharmed."

Senator Rayner pointed out that while there were no civil nor criminal remedies available in the American courts, criminal and civil suits could be brought in the British courts and that a congressional committee would have absolute authority to subpoena every one connected with the disaster and that if any one should refuse to answer questions, he could be indicted and imprisoned for contempt.

"Mr. Ismay claims, according to reports, that he took the last life boat," cried Senator Rayner. "I do not believe it and if he did it was cowardly to take any life boat for the managing director of the line, with his board, is criminally responsible for this appalling tragedy.

Officers Would Be Indicted.

"If this had happened on an American vessel there would be no question that an indictment would be found and if the facts were sustained, the officers of the company could be convicted of manslaughter if not of murder because the evidence is clear that the vessel was not properly equipped with efficient life saving apparatus.

"I have not the slightest doubt that the northern route was taken in obedience to Mr. Ismay's direct orders and that with full warning, he risked the life of his entire ship to make a speedy passage.

"I care not what are the rules of the English admiralty. Here you have the spectacle of the head of the line failing to see that his ship was equipped properly with life saving apparatus, heedless of the warning that he was sailing in a dangerous sea, forsaking his vessel and permitting 1,500 of her passengers and crew to be swallowed by the sea. The martyrdom and the agonies of separation that took place on board the sinking ship are too fearful for the mind to dwell upon and contemplate, but Mr. Ismay, the officer primarily responsible for the whole disaster, has reached his destination in safety and unharmed.

Fix Responsibility.

"No legislation can bring back to earth a single life lost upon that fatal night. What we can do is to help to fix the responsibility if possible and rely upon British justice to bring to bay the guilty directorate of this company.

"All civilized nations will applaud the criminal prosecution of the management of this line. If they can be made to suffer no sympathy will go out for them and if it does, it will be submerged in the overwhelming lamentation that today re-echoes throughout the civilized world, for the victims of their culpable carelessness—a recklessness that sent hundreds of their fellow beings into eternity, desolating homes and firesides and turned this land into a house of mourning.

"In this hour of our calamity we appeal to the majesty of the law to deal out retributory justice to this guilty company to the last degree."

Two more bills framed on the lesson drawn from the Titanic disaster were introduced in the house. One of them by Representative O'Shaughnessy of Rhode Island would compel all ocean going steamships to or from the United States to carry constant and adequate wireless equipment.

Representative Parran of Maryland offered a measure to appropriate $100,000 for naval target practice in destroying ice bergs by the guns of the warships and by dropping explosives from airships.

"Unfair," Says Ismay.

J. Bruce Ismay discussed with interviewers today the work of the senate investigating committee, which he characterized as "brutally unfair." He said:

"I cannot understand this senatorial inquiry. They are going at it in a manner that seems unjust and the injustice lies heaviest on me. Why, I cannot even protect myself by having my counsel ask questions. Don't misunderstand me by thinking I mean questions calculated to twist witnesses up. On the contrary, questions intended to simplify involved meanings."

J. BRUCE ISMAY

Bruce Ismay is the managing director of the White Star liner and was one of the few men saved when the Titanic went down.

Explains His Rescue.

Discussing his departure from the Titanic, Mr. Ismay said:

I have searched my mind with deepest care. I have thought long over each single incident that I could recall. I am sure that I did nothing that I should not have done. My conscience is clear, and I have not been a lenient judge of my acts.

I tell you that if I thought that in the slightest way I had done anything wrong I would never have another happy moment. I took the chance of escape when it came to me—I did not seek it. Every women and child had been cared for before I left the boat.

And more, all the men within reach had been taken care of before I took my turn. And why shouldn't I take my turn? There are only two classes on a ship—the crew and the passengers. I was a passenger.

It is true I am president of the company, but I did not consider myself any different from the rest of the passengers. I took no other man's place.

Churches of World to Mourn.

By common consent the churches of the world will set aside their pulpits tomorrow for a reverent consideration of the disaster and for mourning for the lost.

As to the needs of the living, ample provision is rapidly being made. The relief funds being gathered in New York and London already total well up in the hundreds of thousands.

Most of the steerage passengers who reached New York, distraught and penniless, have already come to realize the generosity and hospitality of America. Clad, fed and housed, they will be given ample time to recover from the stock of their experience and will start their life in the new world with ample funds and kindly advice of excellent counsellors.

The most complete story of the Titanic's fate yet obtained is being rapidly gathered in New York by members of the senate investigating committee.

200 DROWNED IN FLOOD.

Reports of Heavy Loss of Life on Lower Mississippi.

Jackson, Miss., April 22.—Reports reached here that 200 persons have been drowned in Bolivar county, Mississippi, by the flood that swept through that section when the river dikes broke near Beulah. Bolivar county is covered with water and efforts to verify the report are meeting with many obstacles.

The reports declare many white persons were swept away by the deluge, although it is said the majority of victims were negroes who failed to reach high ground in time to get out of the flood's path.

Governor Earl Brewer was advised today there are 6,000 refugees in camp at Cleveland, and that the food supply will last less than twenty-four hours.

Greneville, Miss.—Fifteen persons are known to have been drowned near Benert in the flood that came from the levee break between Beniot and Beulah.

KANSANS GREET TEDDY.

Large Crowds Turn Out to Hear the Colonel Speak.

Wichita, Kan., April 22.—Kansas welcomed Colonel Roosevelt. It was one of the liveliest days he has had since he embarked upon his campaign for the presidential nomination. All across the state he was met by demonstrative crowds. In the larger towns there were bands and flags and signs and a babel of noises.

Clark Delegates Elected.

Des Moines, April 22. — Vanburen county Democrats in convention elected Clark delegates to the Burlington convention and instructed them to vote for delegates to the national convention, who favor the nomination of the speaker for president.

More Lifeboats Provided.

London, April 22.—The Allan and other lines already are taking measures to increase the number of life boats on their steamers.

DISORDERED DIGESTION

If Neglected May Develop into a Severe Form of Stomach Trouble.

The Best Safeguard Is to Keep the Stomach Toned Up and the Treatment Should Be Begun When the First Symptom Is Noted.

"A few years ago," says Mrs. George Fallu, of Finlayson, Minn., "I began to suffer from stomach trouble. It came on me gradually and I do not know what caused it. I gave little heed to it at the time, thinking that it was merely a slight attack of indigestion. It finally developed into a severe form of stomach trouble and I suffered terribly for months.

"At the beginning of my sickness I had fainting spells and became unconscious. There was gas on my stomach, my appetite was very poor and what little I ate did not seem to be digested. I was sick at my stomach a great deal and had severe dizzy attacks. I had hot flashes when it would seem as though I was burning up. I could not sleep night or day during these spells unless I took something to ease the pain. I was very weak and was in this condition for six months. I could not do any work and was confined to bed for two or three days at a time.

"A doctor at Duluth said I had gastric fever. He did not give me much help so I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon my mother's advice. I gave the pills a thorough trial and unlike the doctor's medicine, they agreed with me. I took several boxes of the pills and was entirely cured. I think so much of the pills that I always keep them in the house."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened digestive system has made hundreds of cures in the most severe stomach disorders. This record of cures should merit a trial for the remedy which is guaranteed free from opiates.

A new edition of the booklet, "What to Eat and How to Eat," is free on request. Send a postal for it today and begin to cure yourself by following the directions it contains.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are on sale at all druggists, or they will be sent to any address by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts. Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

745 SURVIVORS LAND AT N. Y.

FINAL SCENE IS ENACTED IN AWFUL TRAGEDY OF THE SEA.

1,470 LIVES WERE LOST.

Rescued Passengers Tell Heart-Breaking Tales of the Crash of Steamer and Iceberg Last Sunday Night.

New York, April 20.—Lifted from the gates of death, the 745 survivors of the Titanic were landed by the Carpathia, which rescued them two hours and a half after the great White Star liner hurled itself against an iceberg last Sunday night. Disfigured by calamity and misery and oppressed by awful sorrow, the women and children and the few men who escaped from the world's greatest sea disaster are in better physical condition than the most optimistic had hoped for. Out of the great company that waited for hours in bitter cold among the grinding bergs, many of them thinly clad, many bruised and hurt by the collision which destroyed their ship, few needed the ministrations of physicians when they put their feet on land in sight of the vast crowd that had been waiting in almost unbearable anxiety.

Many, it is true, were weary and nervous and hysterical from an experience that had left the world void and empty for them, but and thousands thanked God for it as they watched—the majority of the sad and bereaved company were well in body. Only one of the Titanic's survivors died while the Carpathia was driving through fogs and storms to this port.

Four of the Titanic's people had perished trying to get aboard the Carpathia and another Titanic passenger lost his life by the forging of a boat. One woman, a second cabin passenger, who was landed last night, was suffering from a broken arm. But the general good condition of the hundreds so dramatically saved from death was a cause of inexpressible pleasure to the thousands who saw them land. There was no need, as it turned out, for the ministers of death who with coffins waited at the dock.

The Carpathia reported that there were 710 saved out of a passenger list which the White Star line figured at 2,180, making a loss of 1,470 lives. The Titanic's passengers say there were 745 rescued out of a passenger list of 2,340. The list of names furnished on the Carpathia on its arrival shows 188 first class cabin passengers saved, 115 in the second cabin, 178 third class, and 206 of the crew, a total of 687 saved. A woman passenger on the Carpathia heard from the ship's doctor that 495 of the passengers and 210 of the crew had been saved and that 39 women lost their husbands.

Six of these were brides. The world's annals has provided few more intense and dramatic moments than when all that was left of the great company that sailed so gayly by the Titanic appeared on the Cunard pier.

It was with difficulty that the tongues of many were loosened to speak of the scenes of agony and fear that fell over the Titanic's peaceful company when it became swiftly known that the ship must go down. Some told haltingly with dread still frozen in their eyes of men who strove and struggled against women for the life boats and of officers shooting them down. One woman saw an officer shoot two men, she said, and other passengers recalled how officers had stood with drawn pistols while the women and children were being guided into the boats.

No one seemed to know the fate of the Titanic's captain, E. J. Smith. There was a story that he had committed suicide, but the Titanic's passengers did not know that it was true. Many of them had heard shots fired. They believed some of the firing was done to warn back steerage passengers.

For the Titanic's officers and crew the rescued seemed to have nothing but praise. The men acted calmly and cooly in the face of certain foundering, was the report brought here by the rescued. The unhappy company so marvelously torn from the grip of the sea was received solemnly and with remarkable quiet by the enormous crowd which gathered near the Cunard piers and by the few hundreds that penetrated by right of relation or friendship or merciful business to the interior of the pier. There was no cheering, no the pier. There was no cheering, no upraising of voices in salute of the living for the thought of the dead was in the minds of all onlookers. The depression of death was on the waiting men and women.

The crowds were held back two blocks from the pier on the north, east and south. Everything was done to expedite the passage of the rescued ones and make their transfer from pier to homes or hotels as easy and as comfortable as possible. Within the pier shed were hundreds who had the keenest personal interest in the survivors. From a score of passengers came the story of their awful experience.

The great liner was plunging through a comparatively placid sea on the surface of which there was much mushy ice and here and there a number of comparatively harmless looking floes. The night was clear and stars visible.

Chief officer Murdock was in charge of the bridge. The first intimation of the presence of the iceberg that he received was from the lookout in the crew's nest. They were so close upon the berg at this moment that it was practically impossible to avoid a collision with it. The first officer did what other unstartled and alert commanders would have done under similar circumstances, that is he made an effort by going full speed ahead on his starboard propeller and reversing his port propeller simultaneously throwing his helm over to make a rapid turn and clear the berg.

These maneuvers were not successful. He succeeded in preventing his bow from crashing into the ice cliff, but nearly the entire length of the great ship on the starboard side was ripped.

The speed of the Titanic estimated to be at least twenty-one knots, was so terrific that the knifelike edge of the icebergs spur protruding under the sea cut through her like a can-opener. The shock was almost imperceptible. The first officer did not apparently realize that the great ship had received its death wound and none of the passengers it is believed had the slightest suspicion that anything more than a usual minor accident had happened. Hundreds who had gone to their berths and were asleep were not awakened by the vibration.

Mr. and Mrs. Astor were in their room and saw the ice vision flash by. They had not appreciably felt the gentle shock and supposed that nothing out of the ordinary had happened. They were both dressed and came on deck leisurely. It was not until the ship began to take a heavy list to starboard that a tremor of fear pervaded it.

The crew had been called to clear away the life boats of which there were twenty-four which were collapsible. The boats that were lowered on the port side of the ship touched the water without capsizing. Some of the others lowered to starboard, including one collapsible were capsized. All hands on the collapsible boats that practically went to pieces were rescued by the other boats. Sixteen boats in all got away safely. It was even then the general impression that the ship was all right and there is no doubt that, that was the belief of even some of the officers. At the lowering of the boats the officers superintending it were armed with revolvers but there was no necessity for using them as there was nothing in the nature of a panic and no man made an effort to get into a boat while the women and children were being put aboard.

As the ship began to settle to starboard heeling at an angle of nearly forty-five degrees those who had believed it was all right to stick by the ship began to have doubt and a few jumped into the sea. These were followed immediately by others and in a few minutes there were scores swimming around. Nearly all of them wore life preservers.

Under instructions from officers and men in charge, the life boats were rowed a considerable distance from the ship herself in order to get away from the possible suction that would follow the foundering. The marvelous thing about the disappearance was so little suction as to be hardly appreciable from the point where the boats were floating. There was ample time to launch all boats before the Titanic went down, as it was two hours and twenty minutes afloat. So confident were all hands that she had not sustained a mortal wound that it was not until 12:15 a. m. or thirty-five minutes after the berg was encountered, that the boats were lowered. Hundreds of the crew and large majority of the officers including Captain Smith, stuck to the ship to the last. It was evident after there were several explosions, which doubtless were the boilers blowing up, that she had but a few minutes more of life.

The ship broke in half amidship and almost simultaneously the after half and the forward half sank, the forward half vanishing bow first and the other half stern first.

Story of a Bible.

A case that had to do with the theft of a Bible was before the grand jury some time ago and after it had been disposed of, George W. Seibert, foreman of the jury, related a story in which a Bible figured prominently. Mr. Seibert said that his mother had given him an old-fashioned family Bible when he married. About two years after his marriage Mr. Seibert needed money, he said, and had almost decided to dispose of the Bible. When such thoughts were occupying his mind, Mr. Seibert picked up the Bible one day and began turning over the leaves of the book. He had passed over several pages when his eyes fell on two $50 bills. His mother had placed them in the Bible when she had presented the book to him. Mr. Seibert still has the Bible.—Indianapolis News.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Dickover.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. F. Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

GENUINE
DURHAM
Smoking Tobacco
W. T. BLACKWELL
SMOKING TOBACCO

The story of a muslin sack

THE real wonder-story of the tobacco that is smoked by more millions of men than all other high-grade tobaccos combined—

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

In quaint old Durham, North Carolina—that's where the story starts.

That's where those golden leaves first grew in the sunny fields of Greene's farm. That's where they first filled those simple muslin sacks with good, sweet, native tobacco—fifty-two years ago.

No thought then of fancy packages—nor of "processes" for improving on Nature.

Just surprisingly good tobacco! That was what they had discovered—that was what interested those critical Southern smokers who gave a rousing welcome to "Bull" Durham as the greatest tobacco they had ever tasted.

And then the soldiers came. They came—and smoked—and were captured!

Scattering to their homes all over the nation they carried the fame of this wonderful smoke.

Wasn't that Durham postmaster busy with letters from up and down the land asking how to get more of that "Bull" Durham!

And—for over half a century, just because it's so downright good—it's been earning and winning and holding new friends, both among pipe and cigarette smokers, faster than any other tobacco ever grown.

Faster! Twenty-two million pounds—352,000,000 packages—were sold and smoked last year! Yet this was merely the normal growth over the year before.

That sack might have been displaced by a fancy box. But the increasing millions of smokers who have an affection for this plain, convenient, muslin cover have shown that they want the value where it belongs—in the tobacco. You can't smoke the cover, and you can't get better quality for pipe or cigarette in the fanciest of packages.

"Bull" Durham has stood the long test. Its purity, its natural, undoctored goodness as a smoke, have held and splendidly multiplied its friends—have won for it the leadership over all the tobaccos of the world.

Notice of Contest.

Department of the Interior,
United States Land Office.

Crookston, Minnesota, April 15, 1912.

To Ole Hamre, of Red Wing, Minnesota, Contestee:

You are hereby notified that Sivert A. Stennes, who gives Thief River Falls, Minnesota, as his post-office address, did on March 15th, 1912, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead Entry, Serial No. 05757, made November 22nd, 1910, for SW 1-4 Section 33, Township 156 N. Range 41 W., 5th principal meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that you, the said Ole Hamre, have never resided upon, cultivated or improved said land, nor established an actual, bona fide residence thereon, but have been absent from said land continuously since the date of said entry, and have wholly abandoned said land;

You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be cancelled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein, either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the FOURTH publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifically meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail. If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person, proof of such service must be either the said contestant's written acknowledgement of his receipt of the copy, showing the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail, proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the postoffice to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.

You should state in your answer the name of the postoffice to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

If Gov. Eberhart's chances for re-election were considered very good, it is somewhat doubtful if so many intelligent men would declare their candidacy for the office.

Mr. Ismay, managing director of the White Star line, is a multi-millionaire, but he also shows up as a pretty cheap grade of coward, if the evidence given before the senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster means anything.

Comes now a Chicago newspaper with a belated little boomlet suggesting the nomination of Mr. Bryan—yes, the same old Bryan—as a compromise candidate for president. It would not surprise us in the least to see that very thing happen.

President Taft is probably honest enough, but his experience of several years governing people who were incapable of self-government seems to have warped his judgement. He seems to think he is doing that same stunt yet, but the American people will soon show him differently.

Commenting on incidents occurring during the loss of the Titanic, the Duluth Herald pays the following beautiful tribute to the members of the band on the doomed ship:

"High up on the enduring monument reared in the hearts of men to the memory of those who have died the death of heroes, should be graven the names of the eight musicians who played on when the last faint hope was dead. It is said that the last sight some of the survivors had of the sinking vessel was the spectacle of these men, the water up to their knees, making music to cheer those who, like themselves, were about to die. The heart-shaking strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" never thrilled deeper into the hearts of men than it did that night when they sounded over the dark waters where hundreds were perishing.

Carve deeply on the scroll of heroes the names of Kraus, Hume, Taylor, Woodward, Clark, Brailey, Breicoux and Hartley, the hero-musicianl who saluted the gates ot eternity with their music—faithful unto death."

SOME SPOONERISMS OF NOTE

Really Remarkable Slips of the Tongue That Have Added to the Gayety of Nations.

A "Spoonerism" is the name given in England to one of those involuntary inversions of words that occasionally enliven conversation. As for instance, when the returned traveler tells of "rambling up the scalps" while in Switzerland and one knows that he means "rambling up the Alps," but has simply perpetrated a Spoonerism," so called after a canon of New college, Oxford, who achieved a long and exhilarating list of these slips.

Some of the more famous "Spoonereriana" are recorded in the form of a narrative of a returning vicar who, on reaching the station left his "rags and a bug" with a porter while he went to the refreshment room for "a bath of milk and a glass gun."

During the course of an address on "Kindness to Animals" the lecturer remarked that "in Piedmont, where the sheep are so cherished, a flock would willingly follow a shoving leopard."

HER LESSON IN ARITHMETIC

Small Girl Had Done All She Could to Remedy Mother's Deficiencies.

Martha heard someone speak of her mother's deficiencies in arithmetic—which are perfectly visible to the naked eye—so she came and sat down beside her gravely and began:

"Mother, take four from fourteen and how much does that leave?"

"Ten," proclaimed the parent, thinking she was teaching the little one her lesson.

"Now, three from eight—that's rather hard, you know."

"Yes, it's frequently gotten on my nerves, too—but it eventually leaves five."

"And four from five."

"One," exclaimed her elder from the proud pinnacle of perfect knowledge, thinking also what a nice teacher she was.

Martha rose with a sigh of relief from the region of her pinafore, and said kindly, but with some condescension; "Well, now you have learned that much, anyway."—Lippincott's.

CANAL ZONE POLICE.

They have different looking policemen on the American side of the zone line; tall, bronzed, former troopers of the United States cavalry, in the smart khaki uniform of the zone police. These are the men who have made brigandage a lost art on the isthmus, and have taught the Panamanians to vote with ballots instead of machetes and Mauser rifles. Two hundred of this efficient little military constabulary, much resembling the Canadian northwest mounted police, keep the 400 square miles of the canal zone as peaceful as a New England village Sunday morning, and anyone who mistakes it for a lawless frontier community is likely to find himself making roads with the rest of the chain gang.—St. Nicholas.

CATS MUST WEAR COLLARS.

Not long ago Munich decided to impose a tax on cats, and now the Swiss capital of Berne is thinking of doing the same thing. "Far too many pussies!" is the cry; and it is high time that every cat, as in Munich, should wear a collar, showing to whom she belongs, or be taken up as having no visible means of subsistence, as a rogue and vagabond, and put out of existence. It is complained that in Berne and the surrounding district there is an altogether immoderate number of cats, and that they wage incessant war on the none too numerous wild singing birds, which are much prized in Switzerland.

RARE JEWEL.

"As others have said before me," said Dobbleigh, "consistency is a jewel."

"I have reason to doubt the truth of that ancient saw," observed Sinnickus.

"And what is that reason?" asked Dobbleigh.

"Women are fond of jewels," said Sinnickus.—Harper's Weekly.

A SWEEPING STATEMENT.

"How clear the horizon is?" remarked a young woman.

"Yes," agreed her humorous companion; "I've just swept it with my eye."—Answers.

PHYSICIAN'S LONG LIFE.

The distinction of being England's oldest doctor (and probably also the oldest practitioner in the world) belongs to Dr. Edgar Jones, M. R. C. S., who, a short time ago entered his one hundred and third year at his residence at Great Burstead, in Essex. Dr. Jones is an Essex magistrate, and in March last completed his sixtieth year as a member of the bench. He comes of a long-lived family; his father died at the age of ninety-two, his eldest brother and sister were both over ninety at the time of their death, whilst another brother is also nearing his one hundredth year.

TELEPHONE CAME IN HANDY.

Over in South Windham they stop runaway horses "by telephone." The other day two horses were going through the village at a terrific rate of speed and one farmer who attempted to stop the animals failed to grab them soon enough. One of the members of the family rushed to the telephone and in a few seconds was in communication with a man further up the road who was ready to meet the horses and stopped them as they came along. No damage was done to the team.—Lewiston Journal.

HADN'T COUNTED ON THAT.

His Counsel—What are you beefing about? You'd rather go to the penitentiary for life than be hanged, wouldn't you?

Condemned Prisoner—Yes, sir; I don't mind that. But the judge says I got to spend the first week of it at hard labor!

Betcher defeated Munson in a match early this winter and was given a lot of glory for it, though Ludvig was suffering from a bad cold at the time. The result of this last match goes to prove that Munson is the better man.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR

More Than 1,375,000 Are In Use

The Best Investment Any Cow Owner Can Make

That's what nearly a million and a half of cow owners the world over have found the De Laval cream separator to be.

A De Laval farm separator costs from $35 to $160—according to capacity. It saves butter fat and produces a cream of superior quality over any setting system or any other separator every time it is used—twice a day—730 times a year.

It involves far less labor than any setting system, and runs easier, has greater capacity and lasts from two to ten times longer than any other separator.

That's how a De Laval separator saves at least its cost the first year, and frequently in a few months, and then goes right along saving your money year after year.

We have an arrangement whereby you can make a partial payment at time of purchase, and pay the balance on such liberal terms that your machine will more than save its cost while you are paying for it.

Easiest to turn, easiest to wash, skims the cleanest lasts the longest

SAVED WHEN HOPE WAS LOST

Woman Little Likely Ever to Forget Her Terrible Experience in Shipwreck.

A woman recently had a remarkable, almost miraculous escape from death in a shipwreck. The wrecked ship was the Norwegian steamer Vivienne, whose passengers and crew—with the exception of one of the ship's boys, who was drowned—were landed at Cardiff, Wales, by the steamer Glenelg, which had been in collision with the Vivienne off the Lizard. As the vessel sank, Mrs. Jorgensen, a passenger, in her night attire, was on the top of the wheel house, and, believing hope was at an end, had raised her hands in prayer, when a rope flung from the Glenelg fell into them. A moment later the water rose to her waist, but clutching the rope tightly she felt herself being drawn up the sides of the Glenelg. Suddenly the rope stopped and for five terrible minutes she swung over the waters, but eventually was safely drawn on board. The Chinese composing the Glenelg's crew had been too weak to pull her aboard.

HAVE TO FOLLOW WEBSTER

Whether We Like It or Not, All Must Spell as Dictonary Autocrat Decreed.

Thomas M. Honan, attorney general, who has given more attention to studying law than to studying spelling, finds solace for misspelled words in a saying of an old-time newspaper man at Seymour, Honan's old home, whose copy the compositors had to watch carefully for bad spelling.

"One day two young women went to his office to write a letter," Honan said. "They borrowed the old man's paper, his pen and ink, and asked him to let them sit at his desk while they wrote the letter. The old man accommodated them, and while they were writing, he busied himself looking over the newspaper files, not in the best of humor because he had been disturbed.

"'Please, Mr. Blank, how do you spell autocratic?' asked one of the girls.

"'Spell it any way you darn please,' he replied. 'Do like Noah Webster. He never asked anybody how to spell a word, and we have to like the way he spelled 'em.'"—Indianapolis News.

Ignorance or Malice?

It looks very much as though one of the above was responsible for somebody's starting a contest to beat Dr. M. A. Nelson out of his homestead. The notice of contest was received by the Dr. several days ago and he has arranged for a hearing before the U. S. Land office at Crookston on June 20th.

The contestant is a resident of South Dakota, who, in all probability paid some unreliable locator a liberal fee to show him a claim It would also seem that he was badly deceived, as he alleges that the land has never been improved, but totally abandoned, ever since the date of entry. His affidavit is corroborated by an individual who, so far as we can learn, has never been seen or heard of in the neighborhood, but who swears that he is well acquainted with the land and knows that the said allegations are true. Both are apparently ignorant that Dr. Nelson had built a nice house and barn and has had his family living there for a long time.

It would seem necessary that the laws governing contests ought to be amended so as to require the corroborating affidavit to be made by some person actually residing near the land in question, whose evidence will stand the test. This would to a great extent protect the settlers and land seekers from the unnecessary expense and trouble that arise from doing business with unreliable and unscrupulous parties who, in spite of their alleged knowledge, are really ignorant of the actual conditions, and sometimes don't even know where to look for the land.

PART IN NATURE'S SCHEME

Snake Really Is a Most Useful Creature, Though Never Likely to Be Popular.

What is the use of snakes? In their "going on their belly," the circumstance that so often offended Bacon, lies one of their greatest uses, because that, together with their internal formation and external covering, enables them to penetrate where no larger carnivorous animal could venture, into dark and noisome morasses, bog jungles, swamps amid the tangled vegetation of the tropics, where swarms of the lesser reptiles, on which so many of them feed, would outbalance the harmony of nature.

Wondrously and exquisitely constructed for their habitat, they are able to exist where the higher animals could not; and while they help to clear those inaccessible places of the lesser vermin, they themselves supply food for a number of the smaller mammalia, which, with many carnivorous birds, devour vast numbers of young snakes.

The hedgehog, weasel, ichneumon, rat, peccary, badger, goat, hog, and an immense number of birds keep snakes within due limits, while the latter perform their part among the grain devouring and herbivorous lesser creatures.—Harper's Weekly.

PARIS AUTO BANDIT KILLED IN BATTLE

BONNOT AND NOTORIOUS ANARCHIST PERISH IN THRILLING ENCOUNTER.

BLOWN WITH DYNAMITE.

Organized Outlaw Gang Had Terrorized Populace for Months, Committing Many Murders.

Paris, April 30.—Bonnot, the leader of an organized gang of automobile bandits who have been terrorizing Paris and the surrounding districts for months past, and Dubois, a notorious anarchist, were shot to death in one of the most thrilling encounters in the annals of French crime.

A garage at Choisy le Roi, six miles south of Paris, in which the bandits had taken refuge, was blown up by dynamite after these two men had kept at bay for hours a large part of the police force of Paris, a contingent of gendarmes, two companies of republican guards and a company of engineers. Ten thousand spectators viewed the battle from points of vantage.

Bonnot and Dubois, after wounding two policemen, took refuge in the garage. They were trapped in the building, which was at once surrounded. Reinforcements were dispatched to aid the police, composed of gendarmes, republican guards and engineers. A battery of artillery was on the way from Versailles when a small detachment of soldiers succeeded in placing dynamite against the structure and blowing out the front wall.

Bonnot was captured alive. He was riddled with bullets and died on the way to a hospital. The great crowd that had gathered with cries of "Death to Bonnot," almost tore the bandit from the soldiers, several of whom were injured.

Parisians, particularly automobilists, have been in a state of terror because of the reckless crimes of the automobile bandits, which reached a climax in the murder of Assistant Superintendent Jouin of the detective department and wounding of Chief Inspector Colemar by Bonnot, on the morning of April 24. The government then ordered all the available police to hunt the assassins day and night.

M. Guichard, superintendent of detectives, tracked Bonnot to the isolated garage at Choisy le Roi. As Guichard and his men approached, a bandit, who proved to be Dubois, was preparing to mount a motorcycle. He answered the summons to surrender by opening fire, while he returned to the garage. At the same moment there was a hail of bullets from a window and two detectives fell, one with two bullets in his abdomen. It was Bonnot shooting from the first floor.

The detectives retired and a general alarm was sent out. Police, gendarmes, and all classes of people, came quickly. They were armed with muskets and revolvers, and directed hundreds of bullets at the garage, from which came a steady rain of lead in reply. Finally a cart was rigged up with thick mattresses as a barricade and the attacking party backed slowly toward the garage, the dynamite placed, and the front of the building blown out.

All the while the bandits were volleying steadily, but no one was hit. As the front wall collapsed with a crash, the police and republican guards rushed up. On the ground floor they found Dubois dead. They mounted a narrow stairway and observed Bonnot streaming with blood, his left arm in a sling, crouching behind a mattress.

Bonnot was unconscious and expired on his way to the hospital. The doctors found 12 wounds. There were two bullets in his head and two in his abdomen, and they marvelled that he lived as long as he did. Dubois had three wounds.

It is estimated that 200,000 persons visited the scene of the battle during the day. They saw only the ruins of the garage, for, soon after the explosion, flames broke out and destroyed the structure.

About 30 members of the band have now been arrested or are out of the way. Evidence in the possession of the police show that they pursued their career by a marvelous system, having agents in all parts of Europe. One of the four members of the organization arrested Saturday had check books and accounts, proving that he was the treasurer. He regularly invested the stolen funds. When bonds or other negotiable papers were stolen he arranged for their sale to brokers in different parts of Europe.

The specialty of the gang was holding up bank messengers. In several cases they obtained from $30,000 to $50,000 in one haul. Ten murders are charged to them in the last four months.

Minneapolis Unitarian Church Burns.

Minneapolis, April 30.—Seven firemen were injured, two of them seriously, and the lives of a score of others endangered in a fire that badly wrecked the First Unitarian church, causing an estimated loss of about $20,000. The accident to the firemen happened after the fire was practically extinguished, when part of the roof collapsed, tearing through the balcony floor and carrying the fire fighters to the balcony below, where they were covered with timbers, slate and debris.

41 DEAD, 100 INJURED IN TWO TORNADOES

HALF DOZEN OKLAHOMA TOWNS BLOWN OFF THE MAP BY STORM.

HUNDREDS HOMES GONE.

Property Loss Will Be Enormous—Seven Killed and Many Hurt by Tornado in Childress County, Texas.

Oklahoma City, April 30.—Thirty-four persons are reported to have been killed and more than 100 injured by a tornado that blew half a dozen Oklahoma towns off the map. The property loss is paced at many thousands of dollars.

At Lugert, Okla., twenty persons were reported killed and forty injured when a combination freight and passenger train was blown from the track. One woman and three children are reported dead at Eldorado. Many were injured there.

The storm formed near Eldorado, about fifteen miles north of the Texas line, swept through Jackson county and struck Martha, a small town which is reported to have been demolished. No details can be learned from Martha.

Warren, with a population of 400, northeastward from Martha, is believed to have been the next town struck. Great damage was done there, but the extent of it cannot be learned. At Blair, several persons were injured and a number of towns blown down. Three houses were blown down and upward of a dozen persons injured.

A relief train carrying doctors and nurses to Lugert, a town of 200, was made up at Altus and rushed to Lugert to care for the injured. It is reported to have picked up the bodies of ten persons along the track.

In Washita county, Lone Wolf and Rock suffered severe damage. About a dozen persons were hurt at Rock and half the town was blown away. Later telegrams and telephone messages state that the town of Colema, about three miles west of El Reno, was blown to pieces and many hurt. Four houses were blown down at Yukon, fourteen miles west of Oklahoma City. Local damage is reported in the country between El Reno and Yukon.

Foss, Okla., ten killed, 25 or 30 injured, town badly torn up.

Butler, Okla., nine killed, many injured.

Sentinel, Okla., two killed; fifty houses blown down.

Hinton, Okla., one killed, many injured; score of buildings blown down.

Hobart, Okla., one killed, many injured; score of buildings blown down.

Hobart, Okla., two known dead, four others reported dead, several injured; great damage to property.

Rock, Okla., one killed; half of town blown away.

Calumet, Okla., three killed, six or eight injured.

Eldora, Okla., no news many reported killed or injured.

Reports of numerous smaller tornadoes have been received from Mineo, Yukon, Mulhall and points in Garfield county.

In Texas the storm played great havoc near Childress, where seven persons were killed. Thirty farm buildings were wrecked and a Rock Island work train of nine cars was blown from the track. The wind was accompanied by a veritable cloudburst. Kirkland, Texas, reported a fall of four inches within thirty-five minutes.

Telephone and telegraph communication with the stricken district is paralyzed. From the information obtainable, however, at a late hour tonight it was learned that the death list may reach far beyond the present estimate. It is declared that the towns of Lugert, Altus, Martha, Eldorado, Calumet, Blair and Rock were practically destroyed. In several instances it is declared that all of the buildings have been razed. Structures were torn apart and pitched about in the wind. Every effort is being made to rush aid to the stricken places.

Three persons were killed and property valued at $100,000 was wrecked at the town of Calumet, Okla.

To Learn Secret of Andree's Death.

New York, April 30.—Convinced that he is in possession of information that will lead to the discovery of the fate of S. A. Andree, the polar explorer, who, with two companions, left Dane's Island, Spitzbergen, on July 16, 1897, in a gigantic balloon, only to be lost in the frozen north, Christian Leden, a polar explorer, of the University of Christiania, left New York on board the steamship Cincinnati, this week, for Copenhagen to complete arrangements for an expedition to search for the ill-fated Andree.

Mayor Robert Dollar Passes.

Santa Monica, Cal., April 30.—Major Robert Dollar, 70 years old, prominent in Grand Army circles, died here. He at one time was attorney general of Dakota territory.

Lusitania Berths All Taken.

London, April 30.—There was not a single berth left on the Lusitania, when she sailed for New York. Among the passengers on board were Jesse Straus, son of Isidor Straus, who was lost on the Titanic.

TO BUST HARVESTER TRUST

U. S. WILL PROCEED AGAINST HARVESTER COMBINE.

$120,000,000 Combination Formed Ten Years Ago With Aid of J. P. Morgan.

Washington, April 30.—Dissolution of the International Harvester company into its component parts will be demanded in civil proceedings which Attorney General Wickersham will institute for the United States government at Minneapolis under the Sherman anti-trust law today.

Determination to bring the suit followed the inability of the government and the company's legal representatives to agree on terms of voluntary dissolution, discussion of which has lasted several months.

It was upon the question of the particular form of dissolution that the attorney general and counsel for the harvester corporation found they could not agree. Mr. Wickersham demanded the company be dissolved into the concerns under the six harvester patents. General Counsel Edgar Bancroft and Attorney John P. Wilson, representing the views of the directors, held out for a division of the combine which would keep the old McCormick and Deering companies together. In addition, the Harvester company officials wanted to be permitted to have a foreign as well as a domestic selling company. To this Mr. Wickersham would not agree.

At this stage the negotiations were broken off. The company informed the attorney general it would not accede to his demands and Mr. Wickersham announced he would file suit asking the courts to decree the form of dissolution he advocates.

The International Harvester company is capitalized at $120,000,000, which at the time of the formation of the combine was distributed as follows:

Stockholders of the McCormick Harvesting Machine company, $51,000,000.

Partners of the Deering Harvester company, $40,000,000.

Stockholders of the Plano Manufacturing company, $4,000,000.

Stockholders of the Wardner, Bushnell & Glessner company, $8,000,000.

Cyrus McCormick, for stock of the Milwaukee Harvester company, $2,700,000.

J. P. Morgan, for organization services, $5,000,000.

Sold for cash to John D. Rockefeller and other, $9,300,000.

In its bill the government will recite the history of the formation of the merger, beginning with the acquirement of an option on the Milwaukee Harvester company in 1902 by Cyrus McCormick. Shortly after this there were commenced preliminary negotiations for the organization of the combine which were engineered by J. P. Morgan and George W. Berkins.

The government bill will set forth that the Milwaukee Harvester company was reorganized as the International Harvester Company of America, which became the domestic selling concern of the combine, and will ask that it be dissolved.

The government maintained that the trust, as a whole, controlled from 85 to 90 per cent of the harvester business of the country and its two principal subsidiaries—the McCormick and Deering—represented from 50 to 60 per cent of the business.

Under these conditions the attorney general refused to consent to any plan of disintegration which held the McCormick and Deering companies as one.

The harvester company is spreading into many side lines of farming equipment in addition to harvesters, such as farm wagons, motor trucks and cream separators, and department of justice officials maintain that unless the disintegrated concerns possess far less thran '0 per cent of the business, possibilities will be opened for monopoly in many farm implements and materials, in addition to harvesters.

TAFT NOW CLAIMS 421 DELEGATES

ROOSEVELT BACKERS LIKEWISE CLAIM TO HAVE 261 SAFELY CINCHED.

MASSACHUSETTS IS NEXT

Much Depends on the Primaries There on Tuesday.—Clark Still Leads Democrats With 197 to Wilson's 122.

Washington, April 30.—With the multiplying of contests on the Republican side, and the conflicting claims as to uninstructed delegates on the democratic side, it becomes more difficult each week to ascertain what are the real facts with regard to delegates already elected to the Chicago and the Baltimore conventions. Many lists are being kept by experts in this city, and no two of them agree.

The Taft managers claim for their candidate not only all delegates instructed for him, but also all delegates in districts which the Roosevelt people have contested. The claim of the Taft people is that they carried the regular conventions in each case, and that the contests were arranged by bolting conventions. The Roosevelt people, on the other hand, apparently are not willing to concede to Taft all the delegates who appear to have been instructed for him, and say Taft has only about 100 delegates pledged.

The claim of the Taft people follows:

Total Taft delegates, 421. Taft still needs 119.

Total Roosevelt delegates, 203. Roosevelt still needs 337.

La Follette's delegates, 36.

Cummins' delegates, 10.

Delegates yet to be chosen, 408.

This estimate agrees substantially with the estimates which are published by the New York Herald and the New York World.

261 Delegates Claimed by Roosevelt.

The weekly table of delegates elected, issued by the Roosevelt managers, shows the following:

For Roosevelt, 261 delegates. For Taft, 103 delegates. Uninstructed, 112 delegates. Contested, 154 delegates. In the list of uninstructed are counted all the Taft delegates in New York state.

Inviding the delegates from Illinois, Nebraska and Oregon in accordance with the claims which have been made by the contesting candidates, the democratic situation is about as follows: Wilson, 122; Clark, 197; Marshall, 30; Underwood, 24; uninstructed, 102 (New York and Maine).

Massachusetts Is Next.

The importance of Massachusetts in the republican presidential calculations has been well illustrated this week, when President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt united in a speaking tour there, each one criticizing the other. Both wind up the campaign in that state Monday night, Taft speaking at the City theater in Brockton, and Roosevelt in Boston. Both sides appear to realize that states which have not yet selected their delegates to Chicago will be affected by the outcome of the direct primaries in Massachusetts on Tuesday.

The Maryland primaries are to come on May 6, just six days after the pricaries in Massachusetts, and both Taft and Roosevelt are to make whirlwind tours in that state, Taft following Roosevelt.

After Maryland, interest will center in California, where the direct primaries are to be held May 14. So far as known here, neither the president nor Colonel Roosevelt will undertake to cross the continent to talk to the voters of the Pacific coast state.

The Ohio primaries will be held May 21, while no plans for campaigning in the state have been completed by either the Taft or the Roosevelt managers, it is pretty well understood that both the president and the former president will go into the state.

After Ohio will come to New Jersey primaries, May 29. Colonel Roosevelt plans to speak several days in the state the week before the primaries are held, and President Taft also will speak there.

These five primary states have a total of 154 delegates—Massachusetts, 36; California, 26; Maryland, 16; Ohio, 48, and New Jersey, 28. The supporters of President Taft feel that if he can break even with Colonel Roosevelt in these states his nomination will be assured.

Sandwiched between the direct primary states above mentioned are fifteen or eighteen states that will choose delegates under the old convention system. In this division are Arizona, Arkansas, Idaho, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming and Texas.

Teachers of Child Meet.

Des Moines, Ia., April 30.—Kindergartners from all parts of the country have flocked to Des Moines for the 19th annual meeting of the International Kindergarten Union which began today and will last until Friday afternoon. Miss Mabel A. MacKinney of Brooklyn is president of the organization and is to conduct the general sessions of the meeting, the first of which will be held tonight. At that time Dr. M. V. O'Shea of Madison, Wis., will deliver an address.

INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

NEW OIL GUN QUITE UNIQUE

Disk That Screws Through Center Forces Out the Liquid—Flow Is Easy and Uniform.

A new kind of oil gun that is operated by a screw instead of by squeezing the reservoir has been designed by a Wisconsin man. Running through the center of the reservoir, which is in the handle of the gun, is a thread on which a screw disk is mounted. A little wheel at the back end of the handle operates this disk so that when the wheel is turned the disk is forced along the thread to the front of the implement, thus forcing out any oil or grease ahead of it through the nozzle. The advantage claimed for this kind of an oil gun is that it not only utilizes every drop of oil by getting it all out of the cylinder but the flow is so easy and uniform that all the lubricant gets in the places where it is needed. In using the old style oil can there was often a great deal wasted, as it spurted all over when the can was pressed and only part of it reached the points it was meant for.

NEW WAY TO CLEAN COFFEE

Colorado Man Invents Rather Complicated Apparatus for Separating Beans Into Sizes.

A rather complicated but ingenious apparatus for cleaning coffee, which results in its separation into three sizes of beans, has been patented by a Colorado man. A receiving drum passes down through a suction pipe and discharges over a cone-shaped separator. As the coffee falls, an upward draft is created by suction, which carries the fine particles through the pipe and down into a chamber on the other side, where all that is hopeless waste is expelled through a series of slots and such fine particles as can be used for ground coffee fall into a waiting receptacle. The larger beans drop straight from the conical separator upon an inclined screen, with apertures large enough to admit undersized beans, which fall into a pan below. The largest beans, which might be classified as prime, roll down the screen into a cup at the bottom.

Use for Old Paving Blocks.

A great deal of wood block is made use of in the paving of the streets of London, and the machine has been recently built by which these blocks are renovated after having been taken up from the street after a period of usefulness. Heretofore these blocks have been discarded after removal, but now they are separated and placed in the machine, where an adjustment saw removes just as much of the block as is necessary to give it a smooth and even surface for relaying. Of course, the blocks are somewhat thinner and lighter, but they are available for many years of wear if placed where the traffic is not so heavy.

REVIVAL OF OLD INDUSTRIES

Canada Furnishes Beautiful Homespuns in Wool and Linen for Children's Frocks and Gowns.

From the home industries of Canada come beautiful homespuns in wool and linens, woven and dyed by hand, which are charming in color and texture, says the Handicraft. These are being used by two of our United States industries in making children's frocks and dressing gowns.

The Old Glory Union at Bourne, Mass., and the Aquidneck Cottage industries of Newport, R. I., find difficulty in filling the demand for these handmade garments, which are distinctive in design and showing an application of needlecraft out of the position is usually occupies.

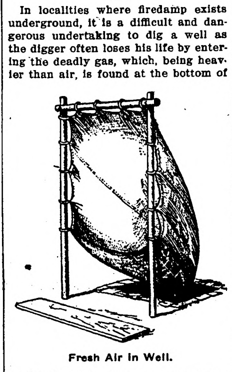
The Basket Shop in Belfonette, Pa., produces baskets made by the townspeople under the direction and from the designs of able craftsworkers who have been in their town, aided by an expert in getting the best results in dyeing. The settlements in many of the large cities are getting good results in needlecraft and in making pottery. The Bohemian Needlework Guild in New York and the Paul Revere Pottery in Boston are notable examples.

The Keene Valley tapestries made in the Adirondacks by the guides' wives in their homes from special designs by Pamela Coleman Smith and under the able direction of Mrs. George Notman are remarkable examples of weaving and are good from every standpoint. Made to order from special designs and with the colors dyed to harmonize with any surroundings they fill a need long felt by interior decorators.

FRESH AIR TO WELL DIGGERS

Danger of Firedamp Eliminated by Use of Collecting Sheet, as Shown in Illustration.

In localities where firedamp exists underground, it is a difficult and dangerous undertaking to dig a well as the digger often loses his life by entering the deadly gas, which, being heavier than air, is found at the bottom of the well. If firedamp is suspected, a lighted candle may be lowered to the bottom of the well and if the gas is present the candle will be extinguished.



Fresh Air in Well.

A method of furnishing fresh air to the person who is working down in the well is shown in the accompanying sketch. An air collecting sheet, a piece of ordinary sheeting about 2 yards wide and 3 yards long, is fastened to the posts, says a writer in the Popular Mechanics. A pipe, 6 or 7 inches in diameter, is made of the same cloth with an enlarged funnel-shaped end which is sewed to the bottom end of the air-collecting sheet. Hoops are placed in the cloth pipe at suitable distances to keep the pipe open for the free passage of air. The edges of the air sheet should be reinforced so it will stand the pressure of the wind. The end of the cloth pipe should hang near the digger's head.

SWIMMING DEVICE IS NOVEL

Fins Attached to the Heels of Wearer Are Manipulated by Cords—Assists the Novice.

A novel swimming apparatus has been invented by two California men. It may be used to assist a novice or an expert may rig himself up in it to achieve great speed or cover greater distances than he can do unaided. A jacket made of some buoyant element, probably with strips of cork in it, has two wings, or fins, attached to the back, over the shoulder blades, where wings usually sprout. These fins have a swivel motion and are operated by cords attached near their tips and running down through eyelets in the suit to anklets, or heel fastenings. There are springs at the swiveling connections of the fins which keep those objects normally raised above the body, but when the swimmer kicks his feet backward he draws them down and they act as propeller blades, sending him through the water with much greater velocity than he could obtain with his arms and legs alone.

CAGES FOR SINGING INSECTS

Tiny Houses, Constructed in Japan, for Little Bugs That Have Tendency Toward Music.

In Japan people keep singing insects in cages, as we do canary birds, and have them hanging about the house. They are supposed to bring good luck. In Tokyo and other cities some of the shops are devoted entirely to the sale of these bugs and their cages. The practice is beginning to show signs of becoming a fad in this country. It is doubtful, however, if the American will take the same interest in such diminutive pets as does the Japanese. Then, too, the variety of singing insects in this country is not so pleasing as it is large. The most widely known member of this family is the mosquito, who is never likely to become popular as a household pet, and even a cage as small as that shown in the illustration would be too roomy for him. A kind of cricket is the insect most often domesticated in Japan.

STREET GAMES FOR CHILDREN

Something New Is Being Played by Little Girls of Great City of London—Ball Is Used.

The children of the street are ultra conservative in their games. After countless years London Bridge continues to fall upon my fair lady; the crop of oats, peas, beans and barley grows as bountifully as ever.

This season has brought a new game which is played by little girls in every part of town, announces the New York Sun. A rubber ball is bounced on the pavement and caught to the accompaniment of intricate hops and skips. In its simplest form the game is to bounce the ball on each flagstone and jump to the next without touching the crack.

Among the older children a form is used of turning completely around after the ball is dropped, clapping hands and balancing on one foot. In counting a progressive system is employed similar to that in jacks; on the first stone each motion is gone through once, on the second stone twice, etc and the player is out as soon as she misses a count in any of the movements

EASY TO KEEP A LOG BOOK

Apparently as Complicated as Double-Entry Bookkeeping, But Little Study Solves Problem.

How many landsmen know how a log book is written up? It seems just as complicated as double-entry bookkeeping when one does not know, but after a little careful attention and study it's as easy to keep a log book as to eat hot gingerbread. There is a list of letters arranged and they look like so much Greek to the uneducated.

The letter b, for instance, stands for blue sky, whether there be clear or hazy atmosphere; c indicates cloudy or detached opening clouds, d denotes drizzling rain, a small f fog, a capital F thick fog, g gloomy, dark weather; h hail, l lightning and m misty or hazy so as to interfere with the view.

The letter o represents overcast, or when the whole sky is covered with one impenetrable cloud. Passing showers are noted by the letter p, and q indicates the weather to be squally. Continuous rain is indicated by an r, snow by an s, and thunder by a t.

An ugly, threatening appearance in the weather calls for the letter u, and visibility of distant objects, whether the sky be cloudy or not, is represented by the letter v. A small w is wet dew. A full point or dot under any letter denotes an extraordinary degree.

As an example of how the letters are used take q p d l t. This reads very hard squalls and showers of drizzle accompanied by lightning with very heavy thunder. Numerals denote the force of the wind.

A cipher indicates calm, 1 light air, 2 light breeze, 3 gentle breeze, 4 moderate breeze, 5 fresh breeze, 6 strong breeze, 7 small gale, 8 fresh gale, 9 strong gale, 10 whole gale, 11 storm and 12 hurricane. This system of abbreviation is generally adhered to on all merchant vessels.

DO TRICKS WITH AEROPLANE

Two Swedish Acrobats Include Somersaulting Machine in Their Stage Equipment—How Worked.

In order to give a modern touch to acrobatic tricks of a kind that have been familiar to theater-goers for years, two Swedish acrobats include a somersaulting aeroplane in their stage equipment, says the Popular Mechanics. At one end of a girder pivoted to a standard about 12 feet high, is a miniature aeroplane so constructed as to be able to turn somersaults. The 3-foot propeller of the machine, driven by a five horsepower two-cylinder engine, sends the aeroplane around the end of the girder, the other end of which is provided with a counterpoise. The acrobat works the elevating plane with his feet and operates the rudder with his right hand, making the machine turn somersaults.

LESSON IN NATURAL HISTORY

Peculiar Traits of Fly, Hen, Cats, Dogs, Mouse, Snake and Goldfish —How They Act.

A fly on a window pane will crawl to the top, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again. This order is seldom reversed.

Hens scratch for food with the sun behind them, the reason being that the rays reflect on the minute particles. A blind hen will pick grain and not miss a kernel.

Cats seldom lie with their feet to the fire. Usually they lie on the left side. Dogs lie with their fore paws to the fire.

A mouse will ignore a food supply sufficient for a meal and run great risks to nibble at a wholesale supply. It will hide at the source of food supply and not depart therefrom until actually disturbed. It isn't true that a mouse runs to a hole at the first alarm.

Find a harmless little snake the length of a lead pencil and provide a box for it in the house, visit it daily, and at the end of three months it will crawl to you for food.

Goldfish usually swim around a globe to the right. They can be taught to take a fly out of the hand in six weeks' time. The presence of other fish in the globe is generally ignored by goldfish. Drop a piece of chip on the surface of the water and it will frighten a fish.

He Was "Most Uncomf'ble."

The following incident, told by a teacher, is quite true: "My attention was called to a wee small boy, whose shrill voice piped out above the rest. At first I was inclined to reprove him for disturbing me, but on looking at the tiny face I saw the child was really in trouble I called him to me, and asked him what was the matter. At first he would not tell me, but finally he said: "Please, ma'am, I can't sit down. This morning I got my trousers on wrong side afore, and I'm most uncomf'ble. I want to go home."

HAS MADE HIS LAST FLIGHT

AVIATOR JULES VEDRINES PROBABLY FATALLY HURT.

Most Famous Airman in France Has Skull Fractured in Accident.

147 "Air Conquerors" Dead.

Fatalities in aviation here and abroad have numbered as follows:

1896	1
1899	1
1905	1
1908	1
1909	4
1910	32
1911	99
1912 (four months)	8
Total	147

In addition to those killed, 200 persons were injured in aviation accidents in 1911.

Paris, April 30.—Jules Vedrines, the most famous and most popular aviator of France, is probably fatally injured as a result of a fall with his monoplane at St. Denis, a suburb of Paris, while flying from Douai, in the department of Nord, to Madrid.

Vedrines was ambitious of creating a new record for an air man by flying from Brussels, Belgium, to Madrid, Spain, in 24 hours. He started from Paris last Thursday in his Deperdussin monoplane on the way to Brussels, but, owing to motor troubles, decided not to proceed farther than Douai, a distance of about 117 miles, which he completed in 1 hour and 40 minutes. This morning he had succeeded in getting his motor into proper working order again. He was seen flying over St. Denis, a northeasterly suburb of Paris, where he made rapid descent from a height of 600 feet.

PIERRE VEDRINE.

Accounts differ as to the cause of the accident. Some of the spectators say that the monoplane struck the telegraph wires along the railroad track and that Vedrines was thrown out onto the rails.

According to another account, a train hit the monoplane as Vedrines was about to land in order to rectify a defect in his motor. The aviator was found to have a fractured skull. He was placed on a train and conveyed to Paris, where he was taken to a hospital and the operation of trepanning was at once performed, but his condition is believed to be hopeless.

THE MARKETS.

Twin City Markets.

Minneapolis, April 30. Wheat May, $1.12; July, $1.13½; No. 1 northern, $1.14½; No. 2 northern, $1.12½; No. 1 durum, $1.09; No. 3 corn, 79c; No. 3 white oats, 53½c; barley, malting, $1.30; No. 2 rye, 90c; No. 1 flax, $2.16.

Duluth, April 30.—Wheat, May, $1.14½; July, $1.14¾; No. 1 northern, $1.15; No. 1 durum, $1.10.

South St. Paul, April 30.—Cattle—Steers, $5.50@7.00; cows, $3.00@6.00; calves, $4.00@6.75; hogs, $7.40@7.70; sheep and lambs, $5@6.50.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, April 30.—Cattle—Receipts, 25,000; market steady to 10c lower; beeves, $5.60@8.90; Texas steers, $5.25@7.25; western steers, $5.60@7.60; stockers and feeders, $4.30@6.75; cows and heifers, $2.70@7.50; calves, $5@8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 55,000, market slow, 5c under Saturday's average; light, $7.45@7.90; mixed, $7.50@8; heavy, $7.50@8; rough, $7.50@7.70; pigs, $4.85@7.10; bulk of sales, $7.75@7.95.

Sheep—Receipts, 18,000; market 10c to 25c higher; native, $4.85@7.35; western, $5.25@7.65; yearlings, $6.40@8.10; lambs, native, $6.20@9.20, western, $6.50@9.80.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 30 Heavy rains southwest caused a sudden reversal of sentiment in the wheat market today to the bear side. Foreign news and other influences of a contrary sort seemed to attract no attention, traders turning for guidance almost exclusively to the weather map and to dispatches from Kansas and neighboring states. Opinion was general that the rain practically assured a crop of 90,000,000 bu. in Kansas. Business in the wheat pit here was usually active. Opening prices ranged from ½c to 2⅛@2¼c lower. July started at $1 11 to $1.11¾, a drop of 1⅝@1½ to 2⅛@2¼c, but rallied to $1.12½.

There was no pressure to sell corn. That cereal accordingly developed a firm tone. Commission houses were fair buyers. July opened a shade off to ⅛c higher at 77⅝c to 77¾@77⅞c, touched 77½@77⅝c and rose to 78⅜c.

Dealings in oats lacked volume. The wet weather, however, tended to lift the market. July started unchanged to a shade up at 54¼c to 54¼@54⅜c, and climbed to 54⅝c.

Provisions sagged on account of the big run of hogs. Offerings were plentiful. Initial sales varied from 2½c to 12½c lower with September deliveries $19.75@19.80 for pork, $11 35 to $11.37½ for lard and $10.67½ to $10.70 for ribs

IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

Spokane, Wash., Woman Endures Terrible Suffering.

Mrs. J. A. Schoonmaker, 127 S. Pine St., Spokane, Wash., says: "I grew so weak I could scarcely do my housework and was often confined to bed. There was a bearing-down pain through my hips and my head ached as if it would split. I knew by the kidney secretions that my kidneys were in a terrible condition but though I doctored, I gradually grew worse, until in critical condition. It was then I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely cured. I have not had a sign of kidney trouble since."

Evidence Put In Too Late.

A prisoner was being tried in an English court for murder; evidence against him purely circumstantial; part of it a hat found near the scene of the crime—an ordinary, round, black hat, but sworn to as the prisoner's. Counsel for the defense, of course, made much of the commonness of the hat. "You, gentlemen, no doubt each of you possess such a hat, of the most ordinary make and shape. Beware how you condemn a fellow-creature to a shameful death on such a piece of evidence," and so on. So the man was acquitted. Just as he was leaving the dock, with the most touching humility and simplicity, he said: "If you please, my lord, may I 'ave my hat?"

"My wife is awfully jealous."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; she wouldn't speak to me for three days after I hugged that hunter."

THE OLD PLEA

He "Didn't Know It Was Loaded."

The coffee drinker seldom realizes that coffee contains the drug, caffeine, a severe poison to the heart and nerves, causing many forms of disease, noticeably dyspepsia.

"I was a lover of coffee and used it for many years, and did not realize the bad effects I was suffering from its use. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it, too, contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"At first I was troubled with indigestion. I did not attribute the trouble to the use of coffee, but thought it arose from other causes. With these attacks I had sick headache, nausea and vomiting. Finally my stomach was in such a condition I could scarcely retain any food.

"I consulted a physician; was told all my troubles came from indigestion, but was not informed what caused the indgestion. I kept on with the coffee, and kept on with the troubles, too, and my case continued to grow worse from year to year until it developed into chronic diarrhea, nausea and severe attacks of vomiting. I could keep nothing on my stomach and became a mere shadow, reduced from 159 to 128 pounds.

"A specialist informed me I had a very severe case of catarrh of the stomach, which had got so bad he could do nothing for me, and I became convinced my days were numbered.

"Then I chanced to see an article setting forth the good qualities of Postum and explaining how coffee injured people so I concluded to give Postum a trial. I soon saw the good effects—my headaches were less frequent, nausea and vomiting only came on at long intervals and I was soon a changed man, feeling much better.

"Then I thought I could stand coffee again, but as soon as I tried it my old troubles returned and I again turned to Postum. Would you believe it, I did this three times before I had sense enough to quit coffee for good and keep on with the Postum. I am now a well man with no more headaches, sick stomach or vomiting, and have already gained back to 147 pounds." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Battle Creek, Mich.

TRACKS of the RED FOX

WINTER TRAILS

WHERE THE BUCK CAREFULLY WALKED A LOG TO CROSS THE CREEK

FOOT MARKS IN SETS of TWO and TWO

SHARP TRACKS of REYNARD

IF one would learn the innermost secrets of the wild neighbors about him, let him go forth into woods and fields after the first snowstorm has covered the earth with an immaculate mantle of glistening whiteness. There he will find recorded a true and exhaustive account of outdoor happenings of the past twenty-four hours.

Across the snow-covered field at the edge of the woods you trail the familiar tracks of the little cottontail rabbit. By their side, and occasionally joining and obliterating them, are the accusing foot-prints of that mischievous pointer pup, who should have been tied up in the barn. About a small clump of swaying weed-stalks are the four-barred prints of such hardy birds as juncos, red-polls, and the larger blue-jays and crows. A powdery mass of loosened snow comes sifting down from the topmost bough of an evergreen at the forest edge, as a large snowy owl flies noiselessly back into the silent woods. Driven from his summer hunting grounds at the far north, by the icy hand of winter, he will levy toll from squirrels, grouse and rabbits, before taking his departure for more congenial climes at the coming of spring. His hunting is methodical and constant. With set, silent, wings, he swoops suddenly down upon his victim, like some great white specter of the forest. Little round pellets of hair, feathers and bones found on the snow beneath his favorite perch, indicate the fate of his unfortunate prey. Fierce, rapacious and insatiable, he flies over the fields, and through the forest, ever ready to fall like a meteor on some unsuspecting bird or mammal. Unlike most of his kind, this bold assassin from the arctic does not confine his hunting excursions to the night time alone, but flies abroad during certain hours of the day as well; thereby proving even more destructive and dangerous than his ally in crime, the northern goshawk.

Over the whitened aisles of the forest wind the beautiful, delicately traced trails of the little wood-mice. Nibbling daintily at dried grass and larger weed-stalks, they wander about during the coldest weather. When the thermometer stands far below zero and starvation often threatens them, these little mice, when in the vicinity of farms, make their way to the granaries and barns, in search of food. When wandering about the woods, they often come upon the shed antler of a deer or moose; they at once start to nibble and gnaw at the hard substance, until they finally entirely destroy it. In many instances their winding trails disappear beneath the snow, to reappear some little distance further on, emerging from a tiny tunnel which they have dug in search of hidden seeds.

At the base of some forest tree is recorded the jump of the gray squirrel. In long, undulating bounds, he makes his way over the snow. Oftentimes he pokes his nose beneath the surface and pushes and roots in search of acorns or nuts, which he knows are somewhere beneath that cold white covering. Some blue-jays scream, and, unwilling to betray his storehouse, he runs quickly to a nearby trunk and ascends to the first limbs, where he sits vociferously scolding the noisy intruders.

Beneath the snow-laden branches of the balsams, the round cat-like imprints of the lynx show forth. Bold and prominent, they form an easily-followed trail through the woods. The half-buried top of a fallen tree, a cavity left by the roots of an upturned stump, a thick-grown mass of rhododenrons, have all been carefully examined by this soft-footed prowler in his relentless search for food. Slightly further on, his trail joins that of the varying hare, or "white rabbit," and his tread becomes measured and careful, as he creeps forward on the hot scent of his intended victim. About the edge of a dismal swamp the disturbed snow shows where, coming on the unwary hare, he has made his leap and secured his prize. The line by the side of his trail marks the drag of his prey on the snow as he has carried it to the top of an open knoll Here are displayed all the evidences of his savage feast. Having satisfied his hunger he has circled about and several times walked to the point of his commanding elevation. One can almost hear his weird, piercing scream, uttered in bold defiance from his prominence. Evidently satisfied that nothing is to be gained by tarrying longer in the vicinity, his restless feet have been again turned toward the denser forest in which direction his trail disappears.

By the side of a gently-murmuring, ice-incrusted brook, appears the sinuous hunting trail of the blood-thirsty mink. The little footprints in sets of two and two, register in the snow along both shores of the stream, for the mink in his hunting, crosses and recrosses on the ice many times in the course of a mile. Keenly alert, he travels swiftly along, watchful for anything with which he may satiate the pangs of hunger. A disabled or careless grouse, a trout, trapped in some shallow, isolated pool, an unwary muskrat, a venturesome wood mouse, abroad from its shelter, or even the remains left from the repast of some more fortunate or powerful marauder, will suffice in his time of need. Up into the wind goes the slim, pointed head, with the little bead-like eyes; the tiny nose twitches, apprehensively at some scent borne on the uncertain breeze. Every nook and crevice beneath the shelving banks is thoroughly explored; into each air-hole of the ice-coated stream, is thrust the rat-like head, to peer intently into the depths of the black pool beneath. Through one of these openings the long, slender, brown body slips, to turn and twist with lightning-like rapidity in the icy current. Emerging from the chilling water, its wet coat glistening, its eyes flashing triumphantly, the agile little animal has its jaws fastened across the body of a luckless trout. Beneath the shelter of a fallen pine, the prize is placed and closely guarded by the suspicious mink. After many little patrols about the near vicinity, made for the purpose of discovering any hidden foe, if such there be, the crafty hunter has partaken of his well-earned meal. Some telltale evidences left behind on the trampled snow proclaim all this, and then the tracks lead on down the stream.

At some distance from the brookbed, farther back in the forest, winds the clear-cut, well-defined tracks of the red fox. The footprints are distinguishable from those of the lynx even at first glance. The imprints themselves are narrower, and placed more nearly in a straight line; while the stride, from the track to track, is half again as long as in the wider lynx trail. The drag of the bushy tail is duly recorded, as the sharply outlined footprints lead up to and over the brow of a hill. From the clean, sharp tracks left on the snow, one can readily imagine the sly, red fellow daintily placing those tireless black feet. The trail leads into an old wood road along which the fox has trotted. At one place, evidently frightened by something he has jumped far to one side, then gone on at a mad gallop. Down to the edge of an ice-covered, snow-coated pond, the tracks lead. Evidently recovered from his unexplainable panic, he steals stealthily to the cover of the bushes that fringe the frozen lake. His trail proceeds to the outskirts of a frozen marsh, along which it follows. About several muskrat houses his wayward footprints circle; at one particular dome-shaped habitation the impatient fox has scraped away the snow and seemingly endeavored to scratch through the impentrable, frozen mass composing the roof. Having probably caused the terrified inmates to abandon the grass-lined living chamber, and to plunge into the black, chilling water beneath the ice, he has turned and made his way leisurely across the swamp to a hemlock grove. Cautiously he has worked his way under the drooping branches, his keen nose searching for some promising scent. He has alarmed a torpid grouse, as recorded by the disturbed area of snow, showing the bomb-like flight of the startled bird at the near approach of the silent stalker.

At one place he has jumped for a mouse, and, judged by the imprints, has miscalculated the distance and missed his quarry. Two or three playful bounds mark the ascent of his trail to higher ground, where, reaching more open country it leads off to the right, the tracks showing he has broken into a hurried trot for parts unknown.

On the crest of a neighboring hardwood ridge is the trail of a noble white-tail buck. Differing from the trail of the doe, by the larger tracks, more rounded toes, greater length of stride between prints and drag on the snow before and after each particular footprint, the tracks are sufficiently interesting to follow. From the trail it may be gathered that the animal has walked leisurely along up-wind, browsing on laurel, birch twigs, and smaller bushes. He has carefully walked a log to cross a brook, and stood drinking of the clear, cold water. Occasionally he has stopped to listen and look back on his trail for the detection of any harmful follower. He has nothing to fear from the front, for his sensitive muzzle would detect the warning taint on the breeze, long before the enemy itself hove in sight. In several places he has pawed the snow clear for considerable spaces, evidently in search of some winter delicacy beneath the glimmering crystals.

Another buck track still larger than the first, which it joins, promises interesting developments further along. For some distance it follows its rival at a walk, then impatience is shown in the recorded tracks left by the trotting animal. This second buck one would judge to be the bigger animal, from its larger tracks, although this need not essentially follow. At any rate he is evidently in a great hurry to overtake and challenge his predecessor, judging from his tracks, which show he has broken into a graceful canter.

Farther on the snow records the preliminaries of battle gone through by both bucks at sight of each other. Each has pawed and stamped the snow in a circle of considerable area. Both have broken small bushes and rubbed the bark from saplings with their antlers. One has trotted forward challengingly for a short distance, given a few buck jumps and retreated to again vent his wrath on bush and tree.

At last they closed with a rush; both, from the evidence recorded apparently having been carried to their knees by the force of the impact. Rising, they pushed, retreated and charged, until the snow was entirely cleared from the arena. Several times one or the other has been thrown heavily to earth; the imprints left by their bodies being plainly visible. Bits of hide, long coarse hairs and alarming blotches of red, prove the fierceness of the battle for supremacy.

As is inevitably the case, the weak at last gave way; his blood-stained trail leading off in a series of great bounds down the hillside. For some distance the second trail accompanied it, but finally branched off into a dense bit of forest, the victor evidently seeking the shelter and solitude for recuperation from his own wounds and bruises.

As twilight comes stealing over the whitened landscape, obliterating distance and closing in, in a gradually contracting circle, many other interesting tracks and trails are found, but the winter days are short and the fading light beneath the trees drives one out in the open fields, across them into the road—and home.

Happiness is the natural flower of duty. The good man ought to be a thoroughly bright and happy man.—Phillips Brooks.

COYOTES IN CHASE

Farmer and Daughter Have Thrilling Ride in Kansas.

Pack of Usually Cowardly Animals Get Scent of Meat in Wagon and Make Attack, but Are Eluded in Flight.

Meade, Kan.—F. A. Norris, his daughter, Mrs. Beulah Robins, and Mrs. W. O. Johnson, living in Gray county, were chased by hungry coyotes while driving to their home. It was shortly after dark when they started home by starlight. Shortly after they crossed Crooked creek they noticed several animals following them. At first they believed the pursuers were dogs. Then others joined the pack and the party found themselves being chased by a pack of hungry prairie coyotes.

Ordinarily the Kansas coyotes are cowardly and seldom venture to follow human beings, but Mr. Norris had a lot of fresh meat in the carriage, and it is probable the hungry wolves got the scent of this.

At first little attention was paid to the wolves, but as the pack grew in size and some of the bolder wolves made dashes at the horses, the situation became more alarming.

Mr. Norris was unarmed, but, supposing the coyotes could be easily driven off, he stopped the team and started back with a whip to lash the animals. To his surprise, they showed fight and jumped and snapped at him in such a vicious manner that he hurried back to the carriage, whipped up the team and made a wild dash for the nearest settlement.

It was in a sparsely settled section of southern Gray county. Mr. Norris succeeded in checking the pack for a time, by throwing out to them the meat which he was carrying. The party finally reached home without mishap further than a good scare.

"It is possible that they were loboes, or Texas timber wolves, which are larger and fiercer than the coyotes," said Mr. Norris. "Probably the scent of the fresh meat rendered the hungry wolves more ferocious than they otherwise would have been."

CATS PERPLEX NEW YORK

Advocates of Extermination Say Heroic Measures Are Necessary to Avert Real Plague.

New York.—Whether New York may intrust the disposal of its garbage to four-footed scavengers in the shape of cats, corresponding n a way to the dogs of Constantinople, is the most striking possibility in the controversy now raging as to whether cats are a public necessity or a public nuisance in this city demanding immediate recall.

According to the latest feline census it is estimated that there are 500,000 cats in this city, as compared to 50,000 dogs, and in view of the rapidity with which the former are increasing in numbers it is now proposed either to license or exterminate them.

The proposal to license cats is attended with many difficulties and objections. Aside from the difficulty of catching a quarter of a million strays and establishing their ownership, one expert holds that such a step would be on a par with licensing birds, white mice or rabbits.

On the other hand, an expert of contrary views paints a shocking picture of a cat-ridden city in the near future if steps are not taken to eliminate these animals.

According to him, in the thickly populated districts the cats are really wild animals, attacking chiefly the odoriferous garbage can. A recent investigation shows that these animals come out only at night, so that to catch them it became necessary to travel about the city in automobiles in company with the forces of the street-cleaning department, engaged in collecting garbage.

Altogether, the question as to whether New York shall have the recall of cats appears to promise hot discussion.

MISS READ AT WORK

MISS ALBERTA READ of the bureau of chemistry at Washington has just discovered a new way to test tea to find out whether or not it is pure. There are two known ways of adulterating tea. One is to mix with it talc to give it a shiny, hard appearance and the other is to sprinkle it with a solution that adds weight. Miss Read detects the presence of talc by placing the sample on black paper and examining it through a microscope. To detect the other adulteration she places the tea on white paper. This simple method replaces what was a long and tedious operation.

ELK TAKE A LONG JOURNEY

Wyoming Herd Transported by Train and Sled to Oregon Forest.

Portland, Ore.—More than a score of the elk which were starving in Wyoming this winter, and consequently taken in charge by the government and distributed to places where they would have a chance to live, have arrived at the Chesnimnus forest preserve in this state. Most of their long journey was made in cattle cars, but the last 30 miles was by sled on roads through snow that was about four feet deep.

The elk were brought to this state as a result of the establishment of a popular fund to pay the expenses of transportation. More than 10,000 persons saw the animals at the various stations on the way, and the game officials of the state declare that the event has stirred up much sentiment for the perservation of game.

The herd was located at St. Anthony, Idaho, after having been driven from the former grazing grounds in Wyoming. In it, was a snow-white heifer called Lady Whitebird, the most graceful animal among the elk. The leaders of the herd were two big bulls called Taft and Roosevelt. Unlike those for whom they were named they were able to get along in peace, and stood together to repel outsiders. They held constant station at the door of the car, and showed a desire to fight when there was any sign of danger. It was with difficulty that they were put into the cars on which they were shipped on sledges to the forest reserve.

Girl Killed Sitting With Lover.

Moosic, Pa.—Keeping a tryst with her lover cost the life of Louise Burns, 17 years old, one of the belles of this city. While she was under a coal car on a siding near the Langcliffe colliery chatting with Raymond Curl, 19, a Delaware and Hudson locomotive bumped into the standing train, and before the girl could crawl out the wheels of several cars passed over her.

Girl Wins Spelling Contest

Will Be Entered in State Spelling Bee—Preliminaries in Missouri Being Held for State Wide Match in May.

Macon, Mo.—Miss Alpha Rice, seventeen years old, of the Ethel village school, who won the district spelling match in Macon, spelled every one of 2,500 words correctly. Five hundred of these words were written and 2,000 were given orally. She will represent Macon county in the state spelling match in May. By her victory at the match Saturday Miss Rice captured for her school an extensive library and for herself $10 in gold and a gold medal that cost $10.

Lloyd Roberts, a pupil of the Gibson district school, won second prize—$10 in gold. Elgin Turner of the La Plata school and Rubey Dennis of the Anabel district school tied for third place. Each was given $5 in gold. James Hibbler, aged eleven, a student of the La Porte district school, was given fourth prize, $5.

The state spelling match will be held at Jefferson City at the convention of county school superintendents in May. The county superintendents have adopted various methods for picking the best spellers in their respective counties. In some the representative has been named by simply holding a general match at the county seat. In others each school has sent out a champion to the county match. The method here was to divide Macon county into seven districts and have the matches all over the county. Thus the very best speller in each district was obtained, and the class Saturday was the acknowledged pick of the county.

The match lasted from ten in the forenoon till 6:10 in the evening. Each district champion has hosts of friends and relatives who came to see the event, and the big courtroom was crowded all day long.

Should Miss Rice win the state spelling honors from Jefferson city, and a day come when women shall enjoy equal opportunities with men, she can count on Macon county's solid support for congress or to any other office that may suit her fancy.

PAIR ARE BOTH MAIDENS

"He" Worked for Six Months as a Plumber's Helper Without Arousing Suspicion.

London.—The extraordinary case of a girl of twenty-three named Adelaide Dallamore, who passed for six months as the husband of another girl, is causing much interest here.

The two women were domestic servants and were so much attached to one another that they determined not to be parted. So Dallamore dressed as a man and got a job as a plumber's assistant, which position she held for six months without any one of 40 men suspecting she was not what she pretended to be, but supposed her to be a particularly well behaved young married man.

She is a stoutly built fresh complexioned, bright girl with an unusually low voice and she carried out the deception so well that she might never have been found out had not relatives informed the police. In the evening she would put on a god suit of clothes and take her "wife" out.

When questioned by the police she told them that she and her friend were very happy.

"I was much healthier," she said, "working ten hours a day as a plumber's assistant than ever I was in service."

Her "wife" corroborated this and said she preferred Adelaide in men's clothes to skirts and they both swore they would never be parted anyway.

GOTHAM LIBRARY IS COSTLY

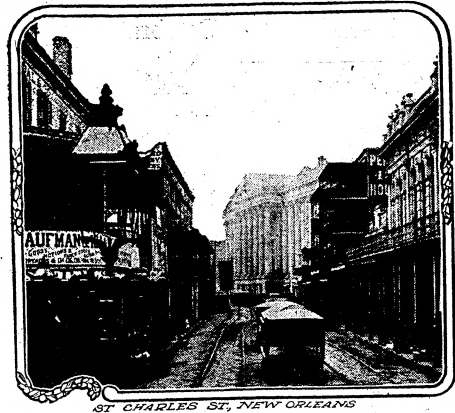
Every Time Book Is Taken From a Branch It Means an Expense of Ten Cents.

New York.—The annual report of the New York public libraries shows that it costs the city 10 cents for every book or magazines passed over the counters of the various branch libraries. Of the works circulated during the year the percentage of fiction to other classes of literature was 53. The city in the last year contributed for the circulation of boks in the various branches nearly $700,000, distributed as follows: Books, binding, etc., $185,000; salaries, $365,000; other purposes, $145,000.

U. S. in Experiment.

Washington.—Wireless tests are being conducted by the navy department to determine what effect vegetation has upon radio waves.

ALONG THE GULF SHORE



ST CHARLES ST, NEW ORLEANS

FROM New Orleans we came leisurely to Mobile, 140 miles east and north, stopping by the way at Pass Christian and Biloxi, resorts on the gulf littoral, popular with the New Orleans people and not unknown to northern tourists, as well, who find the temperate climate more bracing and enjoyable than that of the resorts farther south.

Pass Christian is nearest New Orleans, and 57 miles distant, says a correspondent of the New York Evening Post. It is a very old town, of which both France and Spain had the founding, and has a resident population today of French, Spanish and English origin. It was named—the legend runs—from the old Spanish explorer who first discovered the deep "pass" or channel in front of the main shore. Its admirers call it the Newport of the south, with this advantage over its northern namesake, that it is equally beautiful and desirable in both winter and summer. The drive of 14 miles over its firm, smooth shell roads, with the blue waters of the gulf on one side, and stately and beautiful residences on the other, is one long to be remembered.

From Pass Christian the railroad skirts the gulf shore, at times crossing wide bays or bayous on trestle work, then dashing into pine forests, through whose leafy vistas one catches the distant gleam of the gulf. Biloxi, 22 miles farther east, set up the claim that it is the oldest city on the coast, and, indeed, in Louisiana territory. Probably Iberville and Bienville did erect there the first fort, but Mobile contends that two full days before they had landed at Dog river, in Mobile bay, and had planted their lily flag on the site of the first permanent fort, which they called Louis de la Mobile.

However this may be, Biloxi is a picturesque old town, reminding one of the French quarter of New Orleans, and with its handsome residences and shell road along the ten mile beach well repays a visit. Between the two lies Beauvoir, and a short distance from its station is the fine old country seat in ample grounds, to which Jefferson Davis retired after his abortive confederacy went to ruin, and in which he lived and died. After his death the Daughters of the Confederacy asked Mrs. Davis to sell it to them for an old veterans' home, to which she consented, taking up her abode in New York, and the old home now shelters a number of those who fought for the "lost cause" of 1861-5.

Four hours from New Orleans we reach Mobile, at the head of the bay of the same name, and thirty miles from the gulf. A bright, alert, progressive and pleasing city it is, of 52,000 inhabitants, a city which, like most of the gulf ports, sees in the opening of the Panama canal an opportunity for almost boundless commercial expansion, and is pulling herself together to take advantage of it.

Famous Shell Road.

The city recently has been newly paved and sewered. She has an ample water supply of the best quality, Bienville water being so pure that it is used in chemical emulsions and in photography direct from the hydrant. The city is lighted by electricity, has an excellent electric street railway system, good schools, good hotels and Government street, flanked on either side with fine residences in ample grounds, will compare favorably with the residence section of any city in the Union.

Mobile lies low on the bay, so low, in fact, that a strong southwest gale sometimes backs up the gulf into the bay and overflows the contiguous streets, but the land rises rapidly in the rear until in the suburbs one finds high pine lands, with fine country seats of merchants, green vegetable gardens and fruitful farms. Spring Hill, several miles westward and reached by trolley, has several fine old country mansions and estates of the old regime—two, at least, owned by titled foreigners—where the hospitality of the antebellum days is dispensed. Here in wide, well kept grounds, is the Jesuit college, founded 76 years ago.

The traveler will find many excursions by water of interest. Boats ply to Fort Morgan and little towns along the "eastern shore" of the bay, and to the "Snapper banks" out in its blue waters. Mobile's famous shell road, along the curves of the bay, was partially wrecked in the great hurricane of September 1905, but has been repaired and is now again in commission. There is a good hard country road that leads to the bluffs, where the shell road in its original beauty may be entered. Four miles below, at South End, it becomes a wild, romantic forest road, leading down to Dog river, where the French took possession of the country, and where Mobile's famous Fish and Hunt club has an elegant clubhouse, where the visitor with the proper credentials will find as good sport and as free-handed hospitality as can be desired.

It is, however, of Mobile's coming commercial greatness that we wish chiefly to speak in this article.

"Just look at her position for a moment," said one of her business men to the writer. "We are here on Mobile river, which is formed 61 miles above us by the junction of the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers, both noble streams, navigable for steamboats for 40 miles, and piercing a country rich in all agricultural products, especially cotton, in lumber, naval stores, coal, iron, cement and other mineral wealth. We have four trunk lines centering in the city, traversing the richest and most productive states of the Union and putting us in touch with every section. We have four miles of water front, and can enlarge it above or below indefinitely whenever the need arrives. We have a 20-foot channel to the gulf, which we are about to make 27 feet, and we are 100 miles nearer Panama, the West Indian, South American and European ports than New Orleans or any other large gulf port.

"In 1860 Mobile was the second cotton port of the south. We expect to get back there in a few years more. Further, a movement has been quietly going on for the last two years that will make Mobile the greatest coal shipping port of the south inside of two years. I mean the improvement of the Tombigbee and Black Warrior rivers by a series of locks and dams which will enable steamboats and barges drawing six feet of water to run to Mobile from the Mulberry and Locust forks of the Warrior in the richest coal and iron measures in the world—a distance of 400 miles. If you wish to learn more of this, call on Mr. William W. Thompson, who can tell you all about this and of another article destined to add not a little to Mobile's exports—cement."

We had a very interesting interview with Mr. Thompson, a man of constructive ability, with all the energy and enthusiasm necessary to carry out his plans.

Age of Cement.

"We have had the stone age," he began, "the age of gold, of silver, of iron and steel, and now we are coming to the age of cement. Wonderful what is being done just now with this new building material.

"Now, 70 miles up the Tombigbee river from Mobile, is St. Stephen's, site of the first capital of Alabama territory, now wholly deserted, and where is perhaps the greatest deposit of cement rock in this country. For three-quarters of a mile along the river bank it rises, a solid cliff from 75 to 100 feet high, and extending back from the river no one knows how far. A company has been formed to work this bed. It will build at St. Stephen's a colossal plant, ship its product by barges to Mobile, thence to the Panama canal and other markets.

"Beginning at Demopolis on the Tombigbee (from which town there is now good water to Mobile), a chain of seven locks has been constructed on the Black Warrior, opening navigation to Tuscaloosa. Others have been let and it is expected that within two years there will be all the year round navigation to the Mulberry and Locust forks of the Warrior, 400 miles above Mobile.

"When the improvements on the lower river are completed they will probably be continued up to Birmingham, and it is certain that coal, iron, cement and perhaps oil and salt can then be laid down on the docks of Mobile cheaper than in any other city of the south, if not of the Union."

No Need.

"It is a wonder that women who want to do everything men do nowadays don't insist on playing football."

"They don't have to. They've got bargain-counter rushes."

GOOD MANAGEMENT OF LIMA BEAN CROP FOR FAIR RETURNS

Plant Is Easy to Grow and Not Hard to Cultivate—Farmer Should Grow Them as a Specialty and Sell on Large Market or Direct to Consumer—Experience of Growers.

(By C. M. CLINTON.)

To make money with Lima beans one should grow them as a specialty and sell on the large market or direct to consumers, if possible. If this is not desirable, it is best to make an arrangement with one commission house which makes a specialty of this class of vegetables and ship to him daily as long as the season lasts.

The dwarf Lima beans are sports of the climbing variety. There are three types of each, the most popular of the climbing beans being the true Limas, large, flat and slender, with broad pods. The dwarf Limas are comparatively new and possess all the desirable table qualities of the pole Limas, while their low stature makes cultivation easier.

The ground for Lima beans should be plowed early, but not until the soil is in good condition. Beans should be dropped in rows four feet apart every eighteen inches and covered lightly. Deep planting is fatal. If the weather is wet the least possible soil, say a quarter of an inch, is enough to draw over the bean. It requires about one-half bushel of seed per acre.

The Lima bean does not need fertilizers containing nitrogen, because it gets all it needs from the air, but should have plenty of phosphorus. Fertilizers should be put on after the plants are up and growing nicely.

The plants should be well hoed before the vines commence to run, and as soon as the ground dries off after rain, they should be lightly hoed and the surface kept loose.

It is important to study the demand of the market, because some consumers require the plump potato-bean while others will have nothing but the large, flat variety.

When grown on a large scale, the beans are sold in bags, and bring from $1.50 to $3.00 per bag, the low price being at the close of the season. When shelled and packed into neat boxes, they bring much better prices, of course, and if cheap labor can be had, this is the proper way to dispose of them.

Large White Lima Beans.

The Lima bean is a favorite vegetable everywhere and is grown in all sections of the country. The experience or rather, opinions, of growers in various parts of the United States as to the merits of pole or bush beans will be of interest.

"In this latitude Lima beans should not be planted before May 20th. They do better on land that has been worked a year or two than on fresh sward land. Manure well and mark out rows four feet apart and put hen manure in the furrow, covering it three or four inches—C. H. V., Conn.

"I prefer pole beans for home use, as they are more prolific and profitable, but grown on a large scale the poles are too hard to get and are too expensive."—G. W. K., Ky.

"Where poles are easily gotten, pole Limas are the most profitable. They have much larger vines and bear better than the dwarf."—M. A. S. C.

"A pole Lima will outbear a bush bean and will not rot so badly in wet weather. The bush Lima is early, and that means a great deal in the market, and the saving of poles makes them cheaper to grow."—L. B., Texas.

Dwarf Lima Beans, Rather Late.

"But few Limas are grown here on account of the short season. Bush varieties are therefore best, as they mature earlier."—A. A. R., Minn.

"We have planted bush Lima beans for the past three seasons. This year shall plant no other kind. Planted alongside pole Limas they have borne right along during the dry season, while the pole Limas did very little good. The beans are smaller, but the quality fine."—I. E. M., Ind.

"The dwarf varieties have not proved as reliable as the pole kinds. In wet seasons the pods are too near the ground and they mildew. In very dry seasons they do not do as well as the pole varieties."—G. G., Pa.

"I have ceased to grow pole Limas, as the bush beans have proved more profitable with me."—J. J. K., Ohio.

"Limas grow to perfection here. Push them in the soil, eye down, in early May. Can plant about four times as many bush beans on same area as of the pole sorts; but with same treatment a pole will make eight times as many, and thus give twice the crop that the bush beans does. The bush gets in market first and commands a better price, but the pods are scarce."—J. J., Ky.

"With me the pole beans have done best, but my neighbor has best success with bush Limas."—M. A. P., Mich.

"Bush beans have been a failure with me, while pole Limas have been just the reverse. I have grown them at the rate of over sixty bushels to the acre. I plant from May 20th to June 10th, in drills three feet apart and six inches in the drill."—A. R. I., Neb.

FIGHT AGAINST INSECT NUISANCE

Never Failing Remedy Against Aphis, Onion Thrips and Other Sucking Garden Pests.

(By E. W. GRUSS.)

Kerosene emulsion is one of the standard remedies in the combat against insect pests. It is made by boiling one pound of whale oil, or caustic potash soap, or one quart of soft soap in two gallons of soft water When the soap is dissolved pour the solution into the sprayer, adding two gallons of kerosene. Then pump into itself until the compound has the consistency of buttermilk and its bulk has increased to nearly five gallons. This is the stock solution. For spraying dilute two parts of the stock with 9 or 10 parts of soft water. I cannot recommend a stronger solution. This is a never failing remedy against the aphis, onion thrips, and other sucking insects. Biting insects, too, will succumb if the spray touches them. For best results the spraying must be repeated four or five times in intervals of five to seven days. It must not be used on vegetables of which the leaves are eaten.

Teach Dairy Secrets.

The University of Missouri is preparing to establish dairy demonstration farms in different parts of the state. A traveling instructor will teach farmers the use of the Babcock test, selection of animals and other dairy secrets.

Ostrich Raising.

Some farmers in southeastern Missouri are experimenting with ostrich raising.

EGG TESTER IS QUITE USEFUL

With Very Little Time and Labor and Practically No Expense Handy Device Can Be Made.

When the farmer begins to save eggs for hatching purposes, he naturally wonders how many of them are fertile and how many are worthless for hatching. A great many make the hen the tester That is, they set the eggs, and if they hatch they attribute it to good luck, and if they are all sterile they charge the result to bad luck and wonder why they cannot have as pronounced success as their neighbors.

With a very little time and labor and practically no expense whatever the farmer can make an egg tester with which he can tell the fertile from the infertile eggs. By testing the eggs before placing them under the hen in the incubator, the farmer can increase the percentage of eggs hatched—in many cases this percentage can almost be doubled.

To make the tester take a cracker box and place in it an ordinary hand lamp. In one side cut a small hole just the size of the egg when it is held with the large end up. Make this opening about on a level with the lamp. It is best to test them at night in a dark room.

Perhaps the most pronounced indications of fertility of an egg is the clearly defined air space at the large end of the egg and a cloudy appearance, densest at the upper part of the egg. An absolutely infertile egg or one whose germs will not develop sufficiently is one which is clear or near so throughout Heavy red dots in the egg indicate dead germs.

Pannier Gown, Showing Effect Parisian Modistes Intended to Give

The rose maid panier gown made its first appearance on Fifth avenue, New York, during the Easter parade on Sunday, April 7. The dress does not show the extreme panier effect as the Parisian model. It has been christened the Rose Maid in honor of the new comic opera of that name. The gown is made of flowered mull and shadow lace. A chiffon sash is tied around the skirt a la Panier.

NECKWEAR IN LAVISH DISPLAY

Severe Tailormade Effects Are Being Discarded in Favor of General Fluffiness.

What has become of the tailored girl who looked so smart in her mannish collar and firm, steady four-in-hand? She and all her ilk seem to have passed out with the advent of the frenzy of fluffiness that has seized the feminine world. The few who have survived the billows of laces and miles of ruffles are marked rarities, and possibly do their own laundering.

However, the generousness of neckwear is gradually decreasing and fan frills and Parisian jabots are taking on proportions not only more refined, but undoubtedly more becoming.

The small girl with a great white wing securely pinned to her shoulder would be laughable were she not so modest and unassuming in manner.

But the new neckwear will soon rightfully represent her, as well as the too generously built woman who shies at so much ostentation.

Stocks with jabots to match are the fashionable thing in neckwear, and instead of the lavishly fluted varieties, the simple, graduated plait is shown. Hand embroidery and simple thread laces are the favored trimmings, and a bit of color is occasionally introduced by means of ribbon and loops.

WIDE BELT NO LONGER WORN

Fashionable Garniture of the Moment Is Exceedingly Narrow and Smart in Design.

The fashionable belt of the moment is about an inch and a half in width and is made of black patent leather decorated with a buckle to match, or with an antique silver one. A perfectly plain belt has its votaries, but in some cases an introduction is made of tiny white button trimmings, which look very smart indeed when the buttons are clustered at the back in a pyramidal form designed to give grace to the figure.

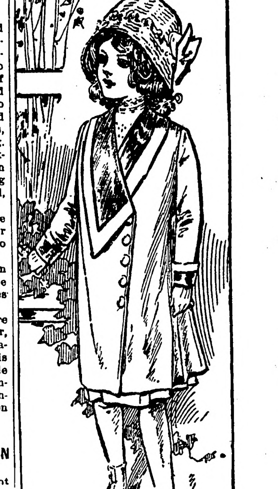
Narrow satin belts are being issued also, and some of the dressmakers introduce by their means a contrast in colors to the rest of the costume, using shades of pink, blue and mauve most dextrously folded into the narrow compass at their command.

Petticoats Again.

The slight increase in the skirt's width admits of the wearing of a petticoat—a change which will be pleasing to the older women. The best petticoats are now made of crepe de Chine rather than silk jersey.

A very good model has the upper part of crepe de Chine, with a shaped flounce of chiffon joined on at the knees and forming a foundation for graduated bias bands of satin. The three materials are in the same shade of violet.—Harper's Bazar.

ONE SIDED REVER



The feature of this simply cut coat for a little girl is, of course, the one sided rever of contrasting material. The revers are really cut to match each other, but the double breasted cut of the coat makes one rever lap far over the other in the one sided effect shown. The coat is built of light fawn colored cosmos mixture and the revers and collar are of moire silk in the same shade, with an outer edge of white satin. The buttons are white pearl. With this coat is worn a straw bonnet trimmed with pink roses and a white bow, and white stockings and buttoned boots.

Sash Curtain.

A most attractive sash curtain may be made of linen, but it must be of rather a sheer quality. Japanese grass cloth or Bohemian line is best to use. If the eyelet embroidery is combined with either filet or Cluny insertion, the effect will be very handsome.

The sides and bottom may have a very narrow edging of the lace, or they may be French hemmed, and the bottom trimmed with a tassel edging.

LIKE THE WOLF AND LAMB

Inoffensive Creatures Most Unjustly Charged With Sudden Attack of Bloodthirstiness.

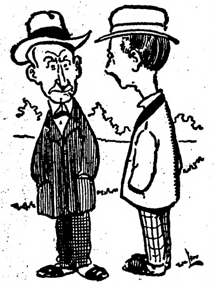
A man who was caught in the act of skinning a neighbor's sheep, covered his embarrassment by declaring that no sheep could bite him and live. The logic of this is equaled by that of the Yankee soldier who once had a narrow escape from an enraged gander. The men of a certain Maine regiment, which was in the enemy's country in 1862, considered the order "no foraging" an additional and uncalled-for hardship. One afternoon about dusk, a soldier was seen beating a rapid retreat from the rear of a farmhouse near by, closely pursued by a gander with wings outspread, whose feet seemed scarcely to touch the ground, and from whose beak issued a succession of angry screams. The fugitive was not reassured by the cries of the gander's owner: "Hold on, man, hold on! He won't hurt you!" "Call off your gander! Call him off!" shouted the fleeing soldier. Neither man nor gander stopped until inside the camplines, when the soldier's friends relieved him of his fierce pursuer with the aid of the butt of a musket. "Did that gander think he could chase me like that and live!" the soldier exclaimed, as he surveyed the outstretched bird; but he said nothing of the baited hook, with codline attached, which might have thrown light on the unfortunate gander's strange actions.

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

IF WE ONLY COULD.



"We all have our enemies, you know."

"But we can't all buy automobiles to run 'em down."

Missing the Point.

Representative Rucker of Colorado, apropos of a tariff argument about sugar, said to a Washington correspondent: "Oh, well, those men don't see my point. They miss it as badly as the old lady missed her son's.

"'Mother,' a young man said, looking up from the Bulletin, 'would you believe that it takes 5,000 elephants a year to make our piano keys and billiard balls?'

"'Make our piano keys and billiard balls!' cried the old lady. 'Well, I always understood elephants where intelligent creatures, but I never knew before that they'd been trained to make piano keys and billiard balls.'"

Easily Overcome by Counsel.

"The trouble is," said Wilkins as he talked the matter over with his counsel, "that in the excitement of the moment I admitted that I had been going too fast, and wasn't paying any attention to the road just before the collision. I'm afraid that admission is going to prove costly."

"Don't worry about that," said his lawyer. "I'll bring seven witnesses to testify that they wouldn't believe you under oath."—Harper's Weekly.

Misunderstood.

"Your wife will be married twice. Her second husband will be handsome, wise and honorable, a man of simple tastes and refined habits with the manners of a courtier."

"Hang the old cat! She never told me she had been married before."

Coated tongue, vertigo, constipation are all relieved by Garfield Tea.

No Man's Land

A ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast assures Katherine of his protection, and she informs him that they are to abandon the island immediately. The blind man and his coolie servant overpower Coast, who afterward escapes and is met by Katherine, wishing to flee. They discover a yawl but before they can reach it the coolie disables the craft.

CHAPTER XVIII—(Continued.)

"Not entirely," he was saying, still with his evil secret smile. "I don't mind telling you, since you're curious, Mr. Coast. I did have the devil's own time with my eyes for a while, and believed I'd lose my sight entirely; I honestly went abroad on their account alone. One of the few honest actions I boast, by the bye—if you don't find the interpolation obnoxious. . . .

His laugh rang bitterly in Coast's hearing.

"My friends the German specialists, however," he resumed, "worked wonders; I found my strength of vision returning, but was temporarily amused to continue the make-believe; it was immensely diverting for a time. I received consideration that I wouldn't have, otherwise, and I saw a lot I wasn't expected to see. And then, slowly, as I began to see more and more clearly, I realized the immense advantage it would give me to keep on pretending. . . . You can figure it out yourself, from your own ridiculous experience."

A slow, dark flush colored Coast's face. "Then," he asked a trace thickly, "why are you giving yourself away now?"

"Because it diverts me extraordinarily, by your leave," Blackstone told him with unconcealed amusement. "Your mortified look, your annoyance—it's rich, my word it is! Besides, the necessity of keeping you in the dark's eliminated. In an hour, my giddy squire of dames, I'll be bidding you a fond farewell. It's been a very pretty farce, while it lasted, and I'm immensely obligated to you for making such an uncommon ass of yourself for my benefit, but the curtain's about to ring down. Hence these epilogue."

"What," said Coast slowly, "do you think you mean?"

"Literally what I'm announcing to y ." Blackstock yawned affectedly. "The plain truth is," he continued with a mocking pretence of candor, "I'm a bit bored by this place. It's served its purpose well enough—I owe it no particular ill-will; and I've had my fling down here and made my bit of ready money; but now—no thanks to you, by the bye—this neck of the woods is growing a trace too hot for me. So I'm going to beat it and leave you cock of the roost."

"You mean you're going to try to escape in that catboat?" Coast nodded toward the craft in question without removing his regard from Blackstock.

"That tub? Never-r-r! No—inquisitive! but I don't mind—I'm going to go away from here in a nice little, tight little motor-boat that's now on the way down from New Bedford, kindness of the same friends who sent me the Corsair—which you interfered with. As for that shell out there, I guess not!"

"Then why . . ."

"See for yourself," Blackstock nodded.

Coast turned to look—retaining with some difficulty his grasp upon the dog-collar. Intermittently while Blackstock talked the blind collie had been making vicious attempts to break away, apparently infuriated by the man's harsh and sardonic accents. And mechanically Coast had been restraining him.

Indistinctly in the failing light he made out the tall, gaunt figure of the Chinaman poised with lifted arms on the gunwale of the boat, preparing to dive, and he received a vague impression that the boat itself was riding lower in the water. At first he failed to make the connection between the two. Then, as he watched, Chang leapt lightly up and out, turned in midair and entered the water as neatly as an arrow, with barely a perceptible splash.

"You see," commented Blackstock with a note of impatience, "I though I'd remove at least one burden from your already overstrained intelligence."

His insolence fanned to a flame the smoldering resentment in Coast's bosom. "What the devil are you getting at?" he demanded hotly.

"You," returned Blackstock, unmoved. "I had an idea you were making sheeps' eyes at my little boat, so I decided to deliver you from temptation, and sent Chang out to scuttle her. A simple matter—watch her settling now!—just a strong twist of the wrist and out comes our bilge plug and in comes the water and—down she goes!"

Coast, choking with despair and rage, in silence saw the prediction verified to its bitterest letter. Then he swung back to his tormentor, quivering with indignation even as the dog he held quivered and strained against restraint.

"Damn you!" he cried despite himself.

Blackstock laughed again, by all tokens enjoying himself immensely. "But why?" he asked lightly. "Why damn me for taking a simple measure toward self-preservation—obeying Nature's first law, and all that sort of thing? I want you to stick here until tomorrow morning, at the earliest; that gives me a chance to make a clean get-away. Why should I leave you the means to gum up my plans? Thanks, I'm many kinds of a fool, I know, but not that bad!"

"You'll never leave this island free," Coast muttered.

"Eh, what's that? Oh, you think not—so? Believe me, my gay gallant, I'm wise to all you're banking on. It's true you had me guessing for a time—I wasn't sure about you at first; that immature beard you've been growing recently is quite some disguise, and besides you'd changed your way of talking; his lordship's languid drawl was missing; and you look like any other ordinary mutt, out of your pretty clothes—but I got your number in due course of time. That break you made about the gun when I was pulling my bluff about knowing people by the feel of their faces—you forgot yourself then, and I hadn't any more doubts. I did some tall figuring before I got completely hep, but a little work with wireless rounded the story out. You see, you had the yarn of the Corsair's trouble down too pat and glib for it to be without a grain of truth; you gave me that much to go on. . . . And then—well, we knew one man certainly, and probably two, had been on the island in the fog yesterday morning and butted in on the funeral obsequies of my ill-advised young assistant, Power, and it didn't seem in reason they'd be content to let the matter rest at that—'specially after going to the trouble of breaking Chang's head in return for being shot at. . . . So I got busy, as I say, and the fog helping I fixed things up very prettily.

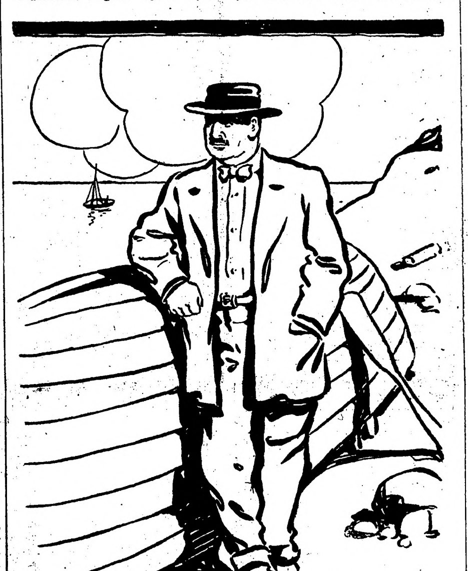
"I warned Voorhis—he's sloping for safety now; sent the tug after the Corsair, unhappily too late—it's evident your friend, the Secret Service sleuth——"

"How did you guess that?" Coast demanded huskily.

"Considering what I've been up to, what was the likeliest guess? I wasn't sure until you gave it away just now—merely satisfied such was the case. . . . Well, as I was saying, I worked the wireless pretty steadily—was happy enough to pick up a message to the Scylla—a revenue cutter, I take it—ordering her here to bust up a nest of smugglers; and spiked that gun with another message, a couple of hours later, revoking the order as being based on false information. And, finally, I got my friends on the mainland to make up a little party to fetch me off. So, all things being pleasant as afternoon tea, I came down to gloat over you a little. Hope you don't mind."

"Why," said Coast—"since you'd made up your mind about me—why did you hold off this long? To laugh at me?"

"Partly, Mr. Coast, partly. There were other reasons. One was I don't bear you any ill-will; which you'll allow is pretty decent of me, considering the rotten way I've treated you. I don't kill in cold blood without a pretty good reason. Van Tuyl's mouth had to be shut, you know—or rather, you don't know why, and likely never will; and Power was threatening to split on the game here, so he had to be taken care of. But you . . . I'll be candid: to begin with your life wasn't worth a tallow-dip; I made up my mind to eliminate you with neatness and dispatch—when your back was turned, for choice. But then I began to think the game was about up, so far as No Man's Land was concerned. So, what was the use of making a bad matter messy? You were harmless, and I didn't hate you hard enough to want you murdered—unless you made it necessary. So I voted for the laugh instead of the funeral."



"You Can Figure It Out Yourself."

"Do you think for an instant I intend to let you go?"

"You? What've you got to say about it? Don't be silly; I'm going—and not to the electric chair, either. I shall just quietly drop out of your ken for good and all—and some day you'll be grateful. Look what a cute little island I'm making you a present of—God knows I've no further use for it; you're welcome. Same way with my wife: I was rather fond of her, once, but now you can have her. Of course there'll be some delay about the blessed respectability end of it—the divorce—grounds—desertion—and all that—but, still, if you're half as keen a lover as you are a fool——"

"You contemptible hound!"

"Steady, there!" Blackstock's voice dropped to a dangerous key. "Remember——"

He found no time to finish. As he spoke Coast, beside himself, released the dog and whirled the tiller above his head. With a grunt Blackstock stepped back, tugging at the weapon in his pocket; but before he could drop it the dog, free and frantic with hatred, launched itself like a bolt for his throat and, blind though it was, springing by instinct toward the sound of his voice, found its mark. Coast's bludgeon, sweeping for his head with deadly accuracy, none the less missed its mark, so quickly the dog staggered and carried Blackstock off his feet.

In a twinkling they were down, Blackstock underneath, grappling madly with the frenzied collie whose jaws were snapping wickedly at his throat.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Dorn, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. "Had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was nothing but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my cooking and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds.

LOOK FOR THE CAUSE

Follow the Advice of Other Women Who Have Had Experiences Similar to Yours.

Have you ever stopped to consider what is the meaning of the various symptoms from which you are suffering? Certainly the paleness, pain in the back, headaches, loss of appetite, nervousness, shortness of breath must have some one cause. They are not diseases in themselves but are complaints and warnings from the different organs of the body that these organs are not being supplied with pure blood and cannot do their daily work well.

To be in good health a person must always have good rich blood. Every tissue of the body depends upon it for nourishment and strength. Knowledge of this fact makes possible a direct treatment for the various disorders from which women suffer. They can cure their troubles by making the blood pure with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Mrs. F. N. Kenning, of No. 411 Fifteenth avenue, North Minneapolis, Minn., who was completely cured by this remedy, says:

"For over a year I was in very poor health. I was very weak and thin and had terrible pains through my back. I would be in bed for a week at a time. I was subject to dizzy spells. My limbs would seem to give out and I would have no control of them during these spells. I was reduced in weight to 98 pounds and could not do my work.

"The doctor did not seem to help me and I quit his treatment. It was then a cousin recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to me and I gave them a trial. I soon felt much better and I now weigh 115 pounds. For years I had terrible headaches but since taking the pills these have disappeared. My health is better than it has been in years and I give the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I would advise all suffering women to take the pills for I know they will relieve them of much misery."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People should be used in anaemia, chlorosis or green sickness, sick headache, and for nervousness and a general run-down condition of the health.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Our new booklet, "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free on request.

RED RIVER WHEAT GOOD.

Germination Is Good and Crop and Seeding Condition are Fine.

Crookston.—The first planting of spring wheat is up in the Red River valley, and on Sunday last scores of automobiles were run from the city in all directions for an inspection of the fields. Special interest was taken because of the stress that had been laid upon the necessity of testing all grain sown this spring. The wheat is coming up even and the germination of the grain sown is as high as it ever was in all the fields examined. Scores of wheat fields are showing shoots nicely above the ground and a few oat fields are up, but most of the farmers are just beginning to sow oats. Many finished their wheat seeding last week.

The number of gasoline plows at work this year is trebled over any previous year. All of the big companies have been rushed with orders. Many of the people who purchased land last fall or during the winter had gasoline tractors and plows placed on them as soon as the ground was fit this spring. Henry I. Baldwin purchased a full section of land in Fanny township, 640 acres, put a gasoline tractor pulling six 16-inch plows, attached a shoe drill behind the plows and is plowing and seeding twenty-four acres a day to oats. He will seed the entire section to oats, barley and flax.

The Crookston State bank reports that men to whom they sold land are doing the same thing, and at least fifty of such rigs are working within a radius of fifteen miles from Crookston.

The weather for seeding continues ideal. Many farmers are entirely through seeding wheat and 75 per cent of the wheat is seeded. With continued good weather this week the bulk of the oat crop will be in, though quite a number of farmers will plow for oats and seed all their plowed land to wheat. There is a general feeling of optimism prevailing. The merchants are buying freely because of the outlook, and traveling men are all bringing in good reports.

CARLTON IS WINNER.

Defeats Ripon and Coe Colleges in Debate on Closed Shop.

Northfield.—Carleton college affirmative debating team in the Tri-State Debating league, the members of which are Carleton, Ripon and Coe colleges, won a unanimous decision here over the negative team, representing Ripon college. The question for the debate was, "Resolved, that the closed shop is justifiable. The members of the Carleton team are C. Whit Pfieffer of Winona, leader; George W. Schmitz of Albert Lea, and Glen S. Hunt of Winona. Word has been received from Cedar Rapids that the negative team won a unanimous decision over Coe college. The members of this Carleton team are W. Park Dougherty, Leslie More and Lawrence Rossman. The students celebrated the double victory with a big bonfire on the campus.

TO ELECT POSTMASTER.

Congressman Anderson Promises to Recommend Man Chosen by People.

Winona.—It is probable the choice of a postmaster at Alden, Freeborn county, may be made by means of an election. This plan is said to have received the sanction of Congressman Sydney Anderson, who promises to recommend for the appointment whoever is the choice of the people. F. L. Walker, the present assistant postmaster, and T. J. Burton, are both in the field for the place.

Alexandria.—Six farmers of Todd county have been caught by Deputy Game Warden Moore fishing illegally in Lake Osakis. The game warden found them spearing crappies, bass and sunfish. Their hearing was before a justice in Long Prairie and the fishing expedition cost each the sum of $12.50.

TWO MORE DOCK OPTIONS

More Than $6,000,000 Improvements in Sight in West Duluth.

Duluth.—Options have been taken on two more dock sites in West Duluth by coal companies, the names of which are withheld. Two docks are now under construction in West Duluth, and three, possibly four, additional coal docks will be built there within the next eighteen months. Improvements under way and prospective in coal docks construction foots up $6,250,000.

The Whittier building will be enlarged and an assembly room added in the high school building for the junior department.

SHRINERS ON A TOUR.

Delegates From Northwest Assemble for Pilgrimage to Los Angeles.

Minneapolis.—Shriners from all over the Northwest were in Minneapolis Monday evening where they were joined by Osman temple of St. Paul and Zuhrah temple of Minneapolis. From here the start was made at 10:30 p. m. for the annual pilgrimage to the thirty-eighth annual session of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for North America at Los Angeles, May 7 and 8.

Two special trains will carry the nobles from Minneapolis over the North-Western line as far as Omaha where the Rock Island and the Burlington railroads will take charge of the transportation.

Several hundred Shriners were aboard the train when it pulled out of Minneapolis. Among some of the patrols and bands will be those from Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Duluth, Fargo, Grand Forks and Aberdeen. The temples represented will be El Zagal of Fargo, which will accompany Imperial Potentate J. F. Treat of that city; Aad temple, Duluth; Kem temple, Grand Forks; Kahrtum temple, Winnipeg; Yeldez, Aberdeen; Zuhrah, Minneapolis, which will accompany Imperial First Ceremonial Master C. E. Overshine of Minneapolis, and Osman temple of St. Paul.

UNITED AFTER YEARS.

Widow and Widower Resume Courtship Interrupted in 1879.

Fergus Falls.—A wedding that has more than a tinge of romance has just taken place in the northern part of the county. A. H. Trowbridge came to the county thirty-three years ago, and as a young man of 18, settled in the town of Candor, where he has ever since resided. A few months after his arrival, he formed the acquaintance of Miss Bertha Groner, and the two kept company for a year and a half. They then parted, and two years later, Miss Groner became the bride of C. G. Hortosh. In 1888 Mr. Trowbridge was married also, his bride being Miss Emma Whiting, of Clitherall. Mr. Hortosh died in 1900 and Mrs. Trowbridge passed away ten years later, in 1910. A few months ago, Mr. Trowbridge met his former sweetheart by accident at Vergas. She had been living in Bemidji for ten years, and had came back to this county on a visit. The friendship of thirty-three years ago was renewed, and their marriage occurred April 18

CONTRACTS ARE LET.

Mankato Company Reports More Railway Work Than Usual This Year.

Mankato.—The Widell company, of which Governor Eberhart is a member, expects to see more railway construction work in the northwest this year than any season during the last five years. It has secured a number of contracts recently for bridge and culvert work. One contract covers the entire Great Western system, another is in connection with the completing of the double tracking of the North-Western road from Truax, Wis to St. Paul, a distance of sixty-two miles, and another is for concrete bridge work on the Omaha and North Western railways in Minnesota, South Dakota and Wyoming.

CHOIR TO GO ABROAD.

St. Olaf Organization Plans Tour of Norwegian Cities Next Year.

Northfield.—Plans are being completed for a European trip in 1913 by the choir of St. Olaf college, under the direction of F. Melius Christianson This choir, of about forty mixed voices, recently returned from a successful tour through several states of the Middle West. The trip abroad will include the larger cities of Norway, and the choir will start from here early in the summer.

TO EXPRESS CHOICE.

Presidential Preference in Blue Earth County.

Mankato.—Peter Lloyd, chairman of the Republican county committee, has issued a call for the county convention Monday, May 13, and the primaries the previous Saturday evening He has incorporated in the call a request that all voters indicate upon their ballots their preference as to presidential candidates, and instructions to the caucus secretaries to report the results to the convention.

33 HORSES BURNED TO DEATH

Fire in Barnesville Livery Early Today Causes $22,000 Loss.

Barnesville.—Fire in Wright's livery, one of the largest in the Northwest, caused the death of thirty-three horses and totally destroyed the barn valued at $8,000.

A dance was on in town and most of the animals belonged to farmers living in the vicinity. One animal was valued at $4,000. The total value of the others was $10,000.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time —not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

Proof that most men like "Bull" Durham

Fact No. 1—"Bull" Durham has outsold any other tobacco since 1859.

Fact No. 2—"Bull" Durham has been the world's standard smoking tobacco for three generations.

Fact No. 3—"Bull" Durham has increased its sale every year of its existence.

Fact No. 4—More men smoke "Bull" Durham than all other high-grade tobaccos put together.

Four tremendous facts. Four facts that are absolute proof of quality. Four facts for you to remember when you buy tobacco.

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

Forty "rollings" in each 5c muslin sack

is just the sweetest, purest, finest leaf grown down on that famous sunshine belt in Virginia and North Carolina. "Bull" Durham is all tobacco—rich, mild, fragrant—just as fresh and natural as when it leaves the field—not an artificial thing about it.

"Bull" Durham is packed in plain muslin sacks, instead of in fancy tin boxes. That's why you get more value in the tobacco itself.

Join the "Bull" Durham army today—the sooner you fill your pipe with it or make yourself a fragrant "Bull" Durham cigarette—the quicker you'll get real smoke satisfaction.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

As a politician, it certainly must be admitted that T. Roosevelt is no slouch. After splitting the Massachusetts delegation squarely in half with Taft, he released eight delegates at large from their pledges, or instructions, to support him, and informed them that they really ought to support Taft, because Taft had received a few most votes in the entire state. It was a clever move. With the Bay state delegation split, even a little, Taft's re-nomination has been made practically impossible, and there is very little probability of those eight delegates voting for Taft at any stage of the game. Roosevelt knew all this, but his action has spiked the enemy's guns, without in reality costing Roosevelt one single vote. The main thing, however, is that another rotten old political machine has been demolished, and Roosevelt's magnanimity will convince lots of people that his efforts have been exerted more for the purification of politics and government by the people than for personal aggrandisement.

Eberhart, watchdog for the breweries, declares he will spend no money to be re-elected. Of course not; his owners will attend to that.

Battle Lake Review: The Eberhart-Smith-Hamm administration has caused Minnesota people to pay the highest taxes they have ever paid since Minnesota became a state. Why not have a new deal? It couldn't possibly be worse.

The government has now started a suit for the purpose of dissolving the International Harvester Co. under the provisions of that colossal joke, the Sherman anti-trust law. If this is not a piece of political buncombe, then there is nothing of the kind in existence.

Willow River Farmer: The bunch that are out to "do" Sam Gordon, had better take their own goat in o'nights as said goat has chewed the caboose end out of a whole line full of public garments. The public is, therefore, lying for his nibs with a fence rail.

Chicago Record-Herald: Oh say, can you see by the dawn's early light, where so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming? The Colonel and President keep up the fight, each shaking his fist and defiantly screaming. They vow and declare, they scowl and they glare, but nevertheless, the flag is still there.

During a May-day celebration by Socialists and Industrial Workers of the World at New York on Wednesday the Stars and Stripes were torn down and trampled upon while red flags were hoisted. A woman socialist rescued the flag and curtly told its insultors that they ought to be shot. Socialism needs more friends and members like that woman.

Cement Talk No. 12

The appearance of any place can be greatly improved by using concrete wherever possible. If you have a nice home, whether in the city or in the country, you can add greatly to its attractiveness by building, not only the sidewalks but the steps, curbs, flower beds, well and cistern covers, hitching posts and fence posts, driveways, cellars, and so on, of concrete. Concrete improvements will make your place the envy of all your neighbors. Concrete is so much neater than wood; never rots, is clean and sanitary, fire and rat proof. Concrete is the simplest building material and the most durable. Things can be readily built of concrete by using clean sand and good Portland cement—preferably UNIVERSAL, because of its uniform quality and great strength. We would like to talk to you about UNIVERSAL Portland Cement whenever you do any concrete work.

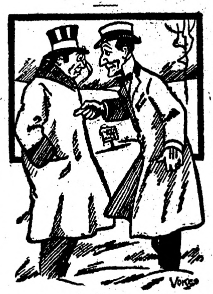
MORE SUNLIGHT IN THE HOME

Sun's Rays God's Own Microbe Killer, Germicide, Disinfectant and Sickness Healer.

Fresh air enthusiasts are familiar enough to most of us, but we hear less of enthusiasm for light. Darkened sick rooms are too common. Sir B. W. Richardson, the eminent London scientist and physician, declared that when the professors of healing enter a sick room their first words in most cases ought to be Goethe's dying exclamation, "More light! More light!" The light of the sun is God's own microbe killer, germicide, disinfectant, prophylactic, sickness healer. There is no physician, no chemical antidote, no compounded prescription to be compared with sunlight. Without it nature could not perform her functions. Man, beast, bird, insect would fall victims to the deadly gases that would prevail. The horrid mists and deadly gases are dispersed and decomposed by the action of light. Let it in, everywhere! Let the light in more and more abundantly. Faded carpets are not as pitiful as faded cheeks. Spoiled cushions are trivial compared with spoiled health. Darkened rooms are too suggestive of darkened lives.—Christian Herald.

QUITE WHITE



Mr. Woodson—It looks like snow out here.

Mr. Pippin—What are you talkin' about, man? Why, it's already half a foot thick on the ground.

Mr. Woodson—Yes, and I say it looks like snow! it never does in town.

TO ENCIRCLE GLOBE.

A project is being developed in France by which it is expected to send wireless messages around the globe, and this will be done by erecting stations in the French colonies. A commission has already been formed by the colonial department to carry out the enterprise and Commodore Ferrie, the well known wireless engineer, who is at the head of the Eiffel tower plant, is in charge of the technical matters. Not more than $2,500,000 will be required for the twelve wireless stations called for by the program, and it should be completed in about two or three years.

HIS LIFE FOR HIS PUPILS.

Devotion to duty caused the death recently, under distressing circumstances, of a brave master in a boys' day school in Seville, Spain. The school building collapsed quite suddenly, and the master got as far as the balcony of his office, whence he could easily have jumped down into the street. But he went back to fetch his pupils, and at that moment the interior of the house went down in a heap. His body was found several hours later with those of the children, one of whom still held a lesson book in his hand.

ANCIENT NURSING BOTTLES.

That nursing bottles were used in prehistoric times is true, at least for the age of polished stone, inasmuch as a French archeologist, when exploring a neolithic funerary deposit recently found a small clay nursing bottle, and this was quite intact. Among other specimens are those which were found in the Gaulish burial places of Jonchery and more recently in the Gallo-Roman area of Paris.

FITTED FOR IT.

"Why do you want that cheap lawyer, anyhow?" asked his doctor of the mean old rich man. "He used to be a barber."

"Just the one," muttered the old man. "I'm going to make a new will and I want him to cut my hair."

Annabel—And I hear that he doesn't fancy work.

SMUGGLING BY GASOLINE AID.

French customs officials recently discovered deserted in a little ditch near Hazebrouck, on the Belgian frontier, a powerful motor car specially constructed for smuggling. The smugglers had fitted a steel guard in front of the car a few inches from the ground so formed that it would catch any obstruction and hurl it into the air out of the way, says the New York Tribune. The projecting portions of the car were armed with spikes to prevent any attempt to hold it back. In the car were over 3,000 pounds of tobacco, and as it is thought that this was the car's maiden journey the investment was not a very profitable one to the smugglers.

DEEP THINKER.

The new teacher was somewhat uncertain as to the nationality of her latest charges. She was not kept long in doubt, however. "Yoke," she wrote on the board, then asked in her most musical tones, as she looked graciously round the class, "Can any little boy or girl tell me the meaning of that word?"

A small, blonde boy raised his hand. "Ay know," he said hoarsely, "it—it ess when you say somet'ing funny."—Woman's Home Companion.

Death Came Suddenly

Gunelius Olson, aged 66 years, died very suddenly on Monday evening at the home of his son, Haltan Olson, in East Valley. He had gone out to turn the cows in the barn and, as he seemed to be staying an unusually long time, his son went to see what was the matter and found him lying dead. Dr. Nelson was called in later and made an examination which showed that death was directly caused by cerebral hemorhage. Deceased formerly resided in the vicinity of St. Hilaire but has recently made his home with his son here, and was highly respected.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon, Rev. M. B. Ordahl officiating, and the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery here,

RELICS OF EARLY CHRISTIANS

Italian Soldiers in Tripoli Have Made Discoveries of Great Archeological Importance.

Several discoveries of great archeological importance have been accidentally made by the Italian soldiers at Ainzara, a small oasis about five miles from the coast of Tripoli, where two large ancient mosaic pavements in an admirable state of preservation as well as the remains of a Roman temple built under the Emperor Severus have been brought to light. Professor Marucchi, the secretary of the Pontifical Society of Christian Archeology, has recently made public another discovery at Ainzara which is of the utmost historical importance. Some time before the Italian occupation of Tripoli Dr. Aurigemma discovered a Christian cemetery consisting of an open area where so far over sixty tombs have been found. These tombs are built of stone and bricks faced with mortar, on which inscriptions in Latin have been scratched. Crosses and other symbolic Christian devices have been discovered as well as Latin formulas taken from the liturgy. There seems to be no doubt that this cemetery dates from the fifth century, and the fact that it was situated in an open area seems to prove that a flourishing Christian colony existed in North Africa at that time.

AVIATION INSTITUTE.

At Kouchino, near Moscow, there is established the most complete laboratory now in existence for the prosecution of researches pertaining to aviation. This institution has become the center of much interest within the last year or two. Here investigations are made of all questions relating to aero-dynamics, and some remarkable results have been obtained, especially in regard to what is called the "autorotation" of bodies of certain shapes when placed in currents of air. It has already been made evident that there are many phenomena of an unexpected character which, when they have been thoroughly investigated, may materially aid investors and engineers in the construction of improved flying machines.—Harper's Weekly.

CONDUCTING A COLLECTION.

The Rev. Allen Fort, pastor of the Baptist tabernacle in Chattanooga, asked J. B. Capeheart, a railroad conductor, to take up the collection one day. It was Mr. Capeheart's first experience as a taker of collections in church.

He started down the center aisle. There were several children in the first pew and each put in a penny. The people in the next pew also contributed something each. A big, glum fellow sat alone in the third pew. Capeheart passed him the plate. The man shook his head and stuck his hands deep in his pocket.

Capeheart stopped, put up his hand as if to jerk the bell cord and said: "Well, you'll have to get off."—Saturday Evening Post.

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS

More Than 1,375,000 Now In Use

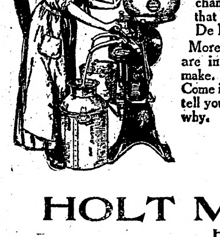
Those Who KNOW Buy De Laval Separators

Creamerymen—Because they are experts in the handling of cream and know by long experience that the De Laval skims cleanest and wears longest. That is why 98% of the World's creameries use the De Laval exclusively.

Experienced Dairymen—The De Laval is the universal favorite among big dairymen. They know that no other separator will give them such satisfactory service.

Old De Laval Users—Whenever a man who has used an old model De Laval decides to purchase a later style machine he invariably buys another De Laval.

Men Who Investigate—If anyone takes the time to investigate the merits of the various cream separators, either by finding out from other users what kind of service their machines have given or by testing other machines out against the De Laval, the chances are a hundred to one that his choice will be the De Laval.



More De Laval machines are in use than any other make. There is a reason. Come in and we will tell you why.

Easiest to turn, easiest to wash, skims the cleanest lasts the longest.

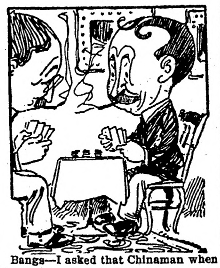
FOR EVERY FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST

To the head of every family the health of its different members is most important, and the value of an agreeable laxative that is certain in its effect is appreciated. One of the most popular remedies in the family medicine chest is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is known to druggists and physicians as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is mild and gentle in its action on the bowels, yet positive in its effect. A dose of Syrup Pepsin at night means relief next morning, while its tonic properties tone up and strengthen the muscles of stomach, liver and bowels so that these organs are able in a short time to again perform their natural functions without help.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this simple, inexpensive, yet effective remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and ask for a sample bottle. Dr. Caldwell will be glad to send it without any expense to you whatever.

HIS ANSWER.



Bangs—I asked that Chinaman when the Chinese invented fan-tan.

Wangs—What did he say?

Bangs—Why, he said they invented fan-tan when they got tired playing bridge whist six thousand years ago.

ERUPTION COVERED BODY

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came out in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body and limbs down to my knees, also my arms down to my elbows. Where I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, for about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease since. I never had a good night's rest after the skin eruption first broke out till I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used them a few days before I could see they were beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone.

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered, and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukegan, Ill., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Having Fun.

The brilliant wit of the Bar looked at the moon-faced farm laborer and winked at his friends and whispered: "Now we'll have some fun."

"Have you been married?" he began.

"Ye-e-es," stammered the laborer, "once."

"Whom did you marry?"

"A w-w-woman, sir."

"Come, my good man, of course it was a woman. Did you ever hear of any one marrying a man?"

"Ye-e-es, sir; my sister did."

SYNOPSIS.

Garrett Coast, a young man of New York City, meets Douglas Blackstock, who invites him to a card party. He accepts, although he dislikes Blackstock, the reason being that both are in love with Katherine Thaxter. Coast fails to convince her that Blackstock is unworthy of her friendship. At the party Coast meets two named Dundas and Van Tuyl. There is a quarrel, and Blackstock shoots Van Tuyl dead. Coast struggles to wrest the weapon from him, thus the police discover them. Coast is arrested for murder. He is convicted, but as he begins his sentence, Dundas names Blackstock as the murderer and kills himself. Coast becomes free, but Blackstock has married Katherine Thaxter and fled. Coast purchases a yacht and while sailing sees a man thrown from a distant boat. He rescues the fellow who is named Appleyard. They arrive at a lonely island, known as No Man's Land. Coast starts out to explore the place and comes upon some deserted buildings. He discovers a man dead. Upon going further and approaching a house he sees Katherine Thaxter, who explains that her husband, under the name of Black, has bought the island. He is blind, a wireless operator and has a station there. Coast informs her that her husband murdered Van Tuyl. Coast sees Blackstock and some Chinamen burying a man. They fire at him, but he is rescued by Appleyard, who gets him to the Echo in safety, and there he reveals that he is a secret service man and has been watching the crowd on the island, suspecting they are criminals. Coast is anxious to fathom the mysteries of No Man's Land, and is determined to save Katherine. Appleyard believes that Black and his gang make a shield of the wireless station to conduct a smuggling business. Coast penetrates to the lair of Blackstock's disguise. Katherine enters the room and passes him a note which tells Coast that neither his life or her own are safe. Coast feels that Blackstock suspects him. Appleyard and the Echo disappear. Coast assures Katherine of his protection, and she informs him that they are to abandon the island immediately. The blind man and his coolie servant overpower Coast, who afterward escapes and is met by Katherine, wishing to flee. They discover a yawl but before they can reach it the coolie disables the craft. Black appears and tauntingly states that he is no longer blind. He is overpowered.

Almost beside himself, Coast retained sufficient presence of mind to recognize his golden chance. Dropping his club, he went to his knees at Blackstock's side and with swift, sure hands rifled his pockets, possessing himself of the pistol which had been taken from him, or its counterpart. Dully, while thus employed, he was aware of a shout and a scream, oddly blended. The fear of Chang uppermost in his consciousness, he jumped to his feet, armed and alert, and whirled about.

But everything had taken place so swiftly and with so little warning, that the Chinaman, quick though he was to take the alarm and start at top speed for the scene of the struggle, was still many yards distant when Coast arose, without a scruple leaving Blackstock at the mercy of the dog.

He saw Chang coming and saw him stop and level a revolver. Simultaneously he heard a shot—but from another quarter and another weapon than the Chinaman's. The latter, gleaming in the half light, suddenly flew out of his hand and to one side, falling in shallow water, while Chang grabbed his right hand with his left and doubled like a jackknife over it, screaming with agony. In mute amaze, Coast, seeking the source of this timely assistance, discovered Katherine standing with her revolver still uplifted, half-way between the Cold Lairs and the beached catboat.

He marvelled at her. In this moment of trial and terror, she retained her wits and courage in a manner calculated to command the homage of a veteran of many wars. The instant after Coast caught sight of her, she fired again, placing a bullet shrewdly at the very feet of the Chinaman.

"Get back!" she called clearly. "Back—or I'll shoot to kill!"

Chang not only heard, but in all his pain and blank amazement understood. Without a breath's delay he turned his back and, nursing his injured hand, trotted sullenly off, to eastward down the beach.

Coast woke the echoes with a shout. "Well done, Katherine! Look to him now—while I——"

He turned back to Blackstock and the dog, just then a confused and struggling mass in the shadow of the boat. So quickly had Chang been disposed of that Blackstock, for all his tremendous strength and activity, for all that he was pitted against nothing more powerful than a blind and aged if infuriated dog, was only just succeeding in fighting to his knees. Already Coast was closing in to his assistance, forgetful of his hatred and thinking only of aiding him in that unnatural contest; though always with the thought that they had by the rarest turn of Chance won the whip-hand—when Blackstock rose with a lurch, wrenched the collie from his breast and with a sudden, swift and merciless movement swung the dog above his head and brought it down with tremendous force across the coaming of the boat. There was a single, terrible yelp, and the dog lay inert with a broken back.

Panting and shaken, both hands to his lacerated and bleeding throat, the man staggered a pace or two away, and fell suddenly against the bows of the boat, grasping its stem for support.

Stunned with the surprise of it, Coast turned away, aware that Katherine was calling him.

"Garrett! Garrett!" he heard her cry. "Come—quickly! . . . Don't you see——?"

She flung an arm seaward and to the west. Following this sign, he saw, perhaps a quarter of a mile off shore and sweeping swiftly in under the urge of a dozen oars, a mackerel-fisher's seine-boat, crowded to the thwarts with men.

There was no sign of any vessel in the offing. Whither this long-boat could have dropped from defied his most far-fetched guess. He stared agape and thunderstruck until the woman, gaining his side, caught his arm with an imperative hand.

"Garrett!" Her voice was quavering now with consternation and the reaction from the excitement that had buoyed her up through the last few minutes. "Take me away, take me quickly! There's not a minute . . . The catboat . . . ?"

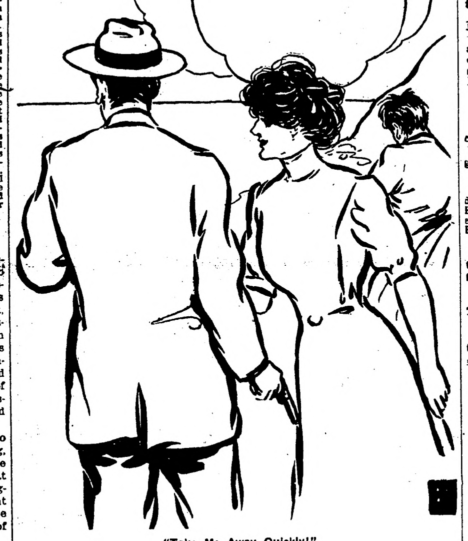
"Gone," he answered stupidly: "sunk by Chang—Blackstock's orders. We've no chance now—only Appleyard."

"Then, hurry! Don't you see that boat——?"

"Yes, but——"

"They're his men—the crew of that schooner—at least, I think so, I'm sure of it. Against them, what chance have we? Let's get away, hide some place until your boat——"

"Right!" He whipped in his wool-gathering faculties. "But—we'll take him with us." He made as if to move for Blackstock, holding that gentleman under cover of his pistol.



"Take Me Away Quickly!"

But she held him back. "No; he'd only delay us. We must find a place of safety—"

"Right again!" he assented, turning with her and hastening toward the Cold Lairs. "But where—?"

She dragged heavily upon his arm for a moment, gasping and shaken with short, dry sobs. Then bravely she pulled herself up and released him.

"I don't know—some place—we must find some place—"

From behind them came a long-drawn, piercing hail:

"Black, O Black! Aho-o-oy!"

Blackstock lifted his head with an effort.

"Aho-oy!" he cried in a shaking voice, and: "Help!" in a feebler.

And Coast, looking curiously over his shoulder as they toiled up the incline, saw him paw feebly at the side of the boat, then collapse upon the sands beside it, as if fainting.

CHAPTER XIX.

By the time they had passed through the Cold Lairs, Katherine's strength began to fail. The rapid pace at which they had made the ascent from the beach had told upon her more than Coast would have realized but for insuppressible evidences of distress she betrayed, her laggard footsteps and her labored breathing. Passing an arm round her waist, he held her up and gave her what support and help he could, but when they had gained the summit of the first ridge inland, between the farm-house and deserted village, he had to pause and rest.

From that point of vantage, with the broad crescent of the beach spread out beneath their gaze, they watched the landing of the seine-boat.

Like some huge water insect of many legs, black body silhouetted against the silvered sea, it sped inshore, four long oars to a side dipping and lifting with the rhythmical beat of a perfect piece of machinery. Then of a sudden with precise accord the oars were lifted and laid in: at slowly decreasing speed the long-boat slipped through the shoaling waters and nosed the sands. Four figures leaped overboard and grasping the thwarts hauled the bows high upon the beach. Others followed, some lingering to help drag the long-boat out of the tide's limits, some trotting to Blackstock's aid.

With difficulty, because of the momentarily fading light, Coast counted the company of the newcomers; they numbered, as nearly as he could estimate, ten. With Blackstock and Chang, that meant twelve to two—fourteen to two, if he were to include the two coolies in the farm-house.

He withheld a groan of dismay, and tightened his arm round the woman's waist, unconsciously consecrating his life to her defense. Blackstock should recapture her only when he, Coast, had fallen fighting.

Dimly through the gloaming he saw Blackstock lifted to his feet before the throng closed round him, a vague dark blur about the boat. From the east the tall, gaunt figure of Chang was moving with long and steady strides back to join them.

As yet there was no indication of pursuit.

None the less, Coast stirred uneasily and glanced in solicitude down at the pale oval of the face resting wearily against his shoulder.

"Feeling better?" he inquired gently. "Do you think you can walk, dear?"

She drew in a deep breath and nodded assent. "I'm all right, now," she said, though still her respiration sounded harsh and uneven; "at least, I will be presently. . . . Are they coming?" she added with a start.

"No," he answered. "They're not worrying about us. We can't get far—not off the island. When we're wanted, they'll find us easily enough, I'm afraid. For the present, Blackstock's entertaining them with the story of his misadventure." He laughed shortly. "Come," he said; and they turned again inland, moving at a brisk walk toward the bungalow—with what purpose neither could have said.

"But that seine-boat?" he asked suddenly, a moment later. "Where under Heaven did she drop from? You spoke of the schooner . . . ?"

"It's ashore," she told him. "I saw it all from the bungalow. . . . I had been inside, looking for my trunk keys. I couldn't seem to find them at first. He was in the wireless-room when I went in, but by the time I found the keys he had disappeared. I went to the door and stood looking out, wondering what had become of him and whether I dared risk a return to the beach—and you—while it was still so light; and suddenly the schooner shot out of the mist a little south of the point, over there in the west. She was running under power—I could just hear the engine trobbing—and I don't think they suspected how close they were to the island. At all events, the next instant she struck—stopped short as if she had run against a wall, quite a distance out; and in two minutes her stern was under water. I saw the crew putting out the long-boat and jumping into it; and then I ran down to the beach. . . ."

"She's the one," he said abstracted—"the schooner Appleyard was after, beyond doubt. You heard them hail Blackstock by name—by the name they know him under."

The woman said "Yes," indifferently, leaning more heavily upon him.

A CHECK TO RHEUMATISM

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Build Up the Blood and Overcome the Rheumatic Poisons.

Rheumatism defies any treatment that does not build up and purify the blood. The poisons of rheumatism are in the blood and it is only through the blood that the disease can be fought successfully.

Unless the blood is weak and impure, rheumatism cannot get a foothold. When it does the thin and impure blood is not strong enough to overcome the poisons alone. It must be strengthened and purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best blood-building medicine you can take. They make new blood with every dose and promptly check further progress of the disease. They make the blood so pure and strong that not the least trace of rheumatism remains.

Mr. A. Hamann, a farmer on R. F. D. No. 2, Eldridge, Iowa, says:

"I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for indigestion and rheumatism from which I suffered for over six years. As these attacks came on every spring, I think they were caused by impure blood. The rheumatism was always more severe in my ankles and knees and especially in my arms, when I had been husking corn or working hard. The pains were so severe that I could hardly sleep at night. I used liniments of many kinds, but they didn't do more than drive the pain to some other part of the body and I did not get any relief from the doctor's medicine.

"When I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in our weekly paper I made up my mind to try a medicine that had actually cured some one else. A few boxes cured me and I think so much of the pills that I keep them in the house to use as a tonic. My wife finds them strengthening and we think the pills are the best medicine for the blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the blood's greatest aid in overcoming rheumatism, headaches, anæmia, chlorosis, and after-effects of the grip and fevers.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. Ollie Woodall, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Knew Something About It.

The small boy of the household was not notably proficient in sacred lore, but when his sister asked him, "Where was Solomon's temple?" he indignantly resented the supposed impeachment of his stock of information, and retorted:

"Don't you think I know anything?"

She assured him that she did not doubt that he knew, but urged him to state for her benefit.

Though not crediting her sincerity, he finally exclaimed, curtly:

"On the side of his head, of course, where other folk's are! D'you s'pose I'm a fool?"

Didn't Fully Understand.

A New York judge went over to Ireland recently and met the brother of "Tom" Costigan, a well-known district leader in one wing of the Democracy. The judge told "Tom's" brother in Ireland all about what a great man "Tom" had become, about his popularity and influence, devotion to politics. The brother, instead of sharing the judge's enthusiasm, looked anxious. "Before you go," said "Tom's" brother, "please satisfy me on one point. Isn't all this attention to politics interfering with my brother's business?"

PLAN POTATO TEST.

Clay County Growers to Have Aid of State Field Expert in Experiments.

Moorhead. — At a meeting of the board of directors of the Clay County Potato Growers' association, steps were taken looking toward an active campaign of education for Clay county farmers in the matter of potato culture.

A. R. Koehler, field expert from the Minnesota experiment station at St. Anthony Park, will be in charge of the work. A plot of ground from three to five acres in extent will be obtained just east of this city and upon this land Mr. Koehler will demonstrate the value of good seed. From many specimens of seed from all parts of the county an average will be obtained and a quantity of this planted. In another part of the plot seed of the highest grade will be planted. In another locality "scabby" seed will grow. Mr. Koehler says the difference will at once be apparent.

A series of experiments will be conducted on different privately owned farms and the relative values of fertilizer, depth of plowing, treatment of seed and many other things will be demonstrated and accurate data kept.

The association will conduct a contest for the most productive five acres of potatoes in the county. The First National Bank of Moorhead furnished sufficient money for the awards of three prizes of $50, $30 and $20 for first, second and third place. The competition will be open to members of the association only.

NEW ULM PROSPEROUS.

City Owns Public Utilities and Has Over $40,000 in Treasury.

New Ulm. — The annual financial statement of this city shows an excess of assets over liabilities aggregating $198,257. The liabilities are in the form of a bonded indebtedness of only $75,000, which is an excellent showing in view of the fact that the city owns its own municipal electric light and water plant, a 1,000,000 gallon concrete reservoir, which was erected a few years ago, as well as other extensive public improvements. The cost of the electric light department of the municipal plant to date is $70,433, and of the waterworks department $188,986. The former has a total of 741 consumers and the latter has 585. The municipal plant is one of the best paying publicly owned institutions of its kind in the state, the total receipts for the past fiscal year aggregating $47,356, which is nearly $13,000 in excess of the total expenditures. The city's receipts from all sources amounted to $106,162 and the disbursements totaled $65,644, leaving a balance in the city treasury of $40,497.

FOR EXTENSION WORK.

Neighborhood Meetings a Feature of an Itasca County School.

Grand Rapids.—School district No. 1 has instituted a series of neighborhood meetings at which the agricultural director and domestic science instructor of the Grand Rapids school speak on farm and household problems. Meetings have been held in the Cowhorn, McKinley, Splithand and Shoal Lake school houses, and talks made on gardening, poultry raising and domestic science as it applies to housework on the farm. School district No. 1 comprises sixty townships. Its size has enabled the directors to attempt many innovations that smaller districts could not carry through. This spring an agricultural director was added to the faculty of the Grand Rapids schools, and as a result the district has been placed on the list of schools that will draw $1,000 state aid.

ICE AND WIND ON LAKES.

First Steamers From Soo to Duluth Have Dangerous Time.

Duluth. — The steamers Agwa and Harry Yates, the first vessels to arrive from the Soo, had a hard and dangerous time on Lake Superior, fighting a gale of terrific force and bucking a field of ice that stretched to the horizon in the vicinity of Whitefish point.

Both vessels were twelve hours over due, and the weather was so cold that they reached port ice coated. They were held stationary by the gale for three hours, notwithstanding that they were working the engines ahead at full speed. The ice is heavily windrowed, which makes it dangerous. It lays in great fields off Whitefish, Manitou and Isle Royale.

BOY PAINFULLY INJURED

Has Leg Broken by Falling Between Spokes of Wheel.

Vernon Center.—Ralph, the 9 year old son of George Collins, a farmer, was injured while hauling wood. A stick fell off and lodged between the wheel and wagon box, and in trying to dislodge it the boy's foot slipped between the spokes of the wheel, and the team started suddenly and caught the leg, breaking the bone at the knee joint.

NEW FARM SPECIAL.

Northern Pacific to Take Exhibits and Lecturers Into Northern Minnesota.

Minneapolis.—The Northern Pacific, in co-operation with the State Agricultural college, will run an agricultural special between Duluth and Staples on the Minnesota & International from Brainerd to International Falls, beginning Monday, May 27. The trip will occupy two weeks.

Several experts from the farm college will give lectures and farm problems will be discussed.

Dairy cows, pigs and poultry, showing breeds adapted to different uses, will be carried and demonstrations will be given at each station. Dairy utensils, tools for barn, garden and field, farm machinery, barn and poultry devices and samples of seeds also will be exhibited.

Farmers' wives and boys and girls especially are urged to visit the train. The train will make stops at the more important stations of from one and one-half to four hours each. The train will be made up of cars of livestock, baggage cars for farm machinery, passenger coaches arranged for lectures and a business car.

IN INSTITUTE WORK.

Austin's Visiting Nurse an Expert on Tuburculosis.

Austin.—Miss Lowry, Austin's visiting nurse, has been asked by Dr. Bracken to aid in instructing the public through institute work the coming summer. There are many places which have no visiting nurse and the state board desires Miss Lowry to spend two weeks in June exemplifying her work in the care of the sick. Institutes are to be held at various points, the state being divided into circuits.

WAR ON BLIND PIGS.

Illicit Liquor Selling on the Range to be Suppressed.

Duluth.—A war of extermination on the blind pigs of the Mesabi range has been declared by the authorities of St. Louis county, and raids that have been made the last few days for the purpose of procuring the necessary evidence will be followed by arrests tomorrow, it is said. It is learned that twenty-seven warrants for the arrest of alleged blind piggers have been issued for service on the range.

SHE ASKS $115.70.

Albert Lea Woman Claims Damages from Recent Flood.

Albert Lea.—One of the results of the flood caused when the Fountain Lake dam gave way is a claim lodged by Mrs. Emma Hofer, a restaurant proprietor, who asks a total of $115.70 from the city's strong box to reimburse her for losses sustained because the building she occupied near the Rock Island freight house was in the submerged district, she alleges, for thirteen unlucky days.

DR. BRACKEN SPEAKS.

State Official Attends Anti-Plague Meeting at Janesville.

Janesville.—On Tuesday and Wednesday an anti-tuberculosis free exhibition was held here. It was conducted under the auspices of the Minnesota state board of health. Appropriate programs had been prepared for the occasion. Dr. H. M. Bracken of St. Paul gave the principal address on the "Control of Preventable Diseases."

Grain Tariffs Not to Be Renewed

Duluth.—The traffic commission of the Duluth Commercial club received a supplement to the Canadian Northern grain tariffs announcing that no extension on grain rates to Duluth and the Twin Cities would be made, and that the tariffs will expire on the dates originally intended. The tariff carrying rates on export grain will expire April 30, and that on domestic shipments will expire May 31.

Will Fight Deportation.

Hibbing.—Wah Bing, a Chinaman who was ordered deported by United States Commissioner Preshell of Duluth, has made an appeal. He was ordered deported on the ground that he has no certificate of residence in the United States, despite the fact that he claims to have been born in California.

Litter of Wolf-Cubs Caught.

Hibbing.—Edward Graft, a man who has been working in a lumber camp at Silliker, about twelve miles south of this city raided a wolf den and caught eight live timber wolf cubs He brought them to this city and the commercial clubs of several range towns are bidding for them to put in their respective parks. Mr. Graft is offered a much higher price than the bounty would amount to. This is the second litter of wolf cubs caught in the vicinity of Silliker this spring.

What Every Woman Knows.

A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expression, "a while" and "a time." Nobody seemed to have any ideas on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the preacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

That's one way of looking at it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FOR THE WOMAN WHO THINKS AND FEELS.

Some women complain that they periodically suffer from dull and heavy feelings, or dizziness in the head, nervousness, pain and bearing-down feelings which should not occur to the normal healthy woman. But most every woman is subject to these pains at some time in her life, due to abnormal conditions in life, such as corsets, over-taxed strength, bad air, poor or improper food, wet feet, sluggish liver, etc. A regulator and female tonic made from native medicinal roots with pure glycerin, and without the use of alcohol, called has proven its value in thousands of cases, like the following:

Mrs. Dona M. Martin, of Auburn, Nebr., Route 1, Box 84, says: "I thought I would write you in regard to what your medicines have done for me. I have used them for thirty years for female trouble and general weakness with the very best result, and they have saved me hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. I buy the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' and take them together. I never was disappointed in your remedies and take pleasure in recommending them to any suffering lady. I am now almost fifty years old; at forty-five I took your medicines, both kinds, and I passed that period very easily and left me fat and healthy. I feel like a young girl. "If any lady cares to write me, I will gladly tell her more about the good work of your medicines."

Mrs. Martin.

Be a booster—not a knocker.

It does not hurt the boosters in a community to keep on boosting and pay no attention to knockers. The public soon tires of the knocker, and then he takes his proper place on the dump pile.

The ordinary man nowadays is apt to vote more according to his ideas of the candidate's merits than to vote the straight party ticket. The politician who berates another for lack of party loyalty is, therefore, liable to find some shortage when the votes are cast and counted.

Maryland, too, has had a presidential preference primary and Roosevelt will have all of that state's sixteen delegates in the national convention at Chicago. Taft's manager credits the colonel's victory to the fact that the "rabble" and negroes voted for him. Taft, if nominated, will need the votes of the "rabble" in every state in the union if he is to be elected. Roosevelt seems to appreciate the value of a common man's vote—and gets it.

Next week Minnesota will have her state convention to select delegates to the Republican national convention at Chicago. This state convention is pretty certain not to be controlled by either Roosevelt, Taft or LaFollette, but each is sure to have some following. There will be some mix-up, for sure, and we will hazard the guess that the delegates selected will either be instructed for LaFollette, with Roosevely as second choice, or made up of men favoring one or the other of these candidates and uninstrudted. It would seem a certainty that this state will not stand for a Taft delegation.

THE IVY HARMLESS.

The impression that ivy is harmful to walls of stone or brick has been removed by the testimony of a large number of German architects, builders, foresters and master gardeners.

These trained observers agree that ivy has no tendency to make the walls damp. They maintain, in fact, that the clinging tendrils of the plant extract and absorb any existing moisture and that the thick leaves protect the walls from the action of the weather. Furthermore, they find no evidence that the ivy roots affect the foundations of stone structures.—Youth's Companion.

DIAGNOSIS WAS WRONG.

"Motor accident?" said the doc. The answer was in the negative.

"I see," said the doctor. "The poor woman has been mauled by some ferocious animal. She must have fallen from a great height and come down on some very explosive material. This, in its turn, threw her under a train, and an ordinary earthquake would account for the rest."

And still he was all wrong. She had merely tried to secure the remnant that just matched at the January soles.

INDUSTRIOUS GEESE.

The solan geese are so fond of collecting materials for their nests that they do not desist from the habit even when they are about to abandon their nests for the winter migration. Off the coast of Scotland, one day, patches of straw bedding were seen floating, and although the birds were on the eve of departure they gathered up every wisp as though they had their nests to build, and in the same place they were seen collecting seaweed every day.

RICHES THRUST UPON HIM

Though German Did Not Know It, He Had Identified Himself With Nefarious Gang.

Not very long ago a German organist, who went to St. Petersburg to live, had there an experience with a new cap that for a time almost made him believe in the magic of the Teutonic fairy tales.

The organist bought the cap during his first day at the Russian capital, and wore it the next day when he went out for a walk. On his return to his lodgings he was amazed to find two gold purses in his pocket, one of which contained a sum equivalent to $50.

The next day, after his usual walk, he found four purses in his outside pocket, a find that caused him to doubt his senses. A third day, with a similar profitable result, sent him to the chief of police to tell his story.

The authorities detailed a detective to go with the German to the tailor who made the cap. Investigation disclosed the fact that it had been constructed of an odd piece of English cloth brought in by a stranger. From it the tailor had made fifteen identical caps to order. Having a bit left, he had constructed a sixteenth cap, which was the one he sold to the organist.

The detective then followed the organist through the streets of the city, when the mystery was solved. The cap, it appears, was the emblem of a gang of pickpockets working cooperatively. The one who secured a purse dropped it into the pocket of the first confederate he saw. The cap had identified the German, and he had reaped the reward.

With this clew it was an easy matter for the Russian authorities to catch the whole gang.—Youth's Companion.

WEIRD EXPERIENCE OF SHIP

For Eleven Hours It Is Enveloped by Shower of Fine Powder From a Volcano.

The Australian steamer Paroo had a weird experience, recently, during a voyage from Singapore to Fremantle, West Australia. When off Mount Semru large volumes of smoke were noticed issuing from its summit, which even to the naked eye gave evidence of an active volcano, and which, on inquiry, proved to have been inactive for several weeks. When the Paroo was in the Madura straits an inky darkness set in and throughout the night a dense shower of fine dust settled over the sea, making it painful to keep a lookout. Dust continued to fall, and soon the vessel was covered with a layer of fine powder. To add to the strangeness of the scene the sea became brilliantly phosphorized, and alarmed sea birds in large numbers alighted on the steamer, and it was not until after eleven hours of steaming that the atmosphere cleared.

WHEN SMILING WAS A SIN

Puritans of New England Were Exceedingly Severe on Sabbath Delinquents.

The Puritans of New England were fully as severe as their co-religionists in Britain to Sunday deliniquents. Some of the pains and penalties exacted are recorded in Mrs. Earle's "Sabbath in Puritan New England." "Jonathan and Susanna Smith were each fined five shillings and costs for smiling on the Lord's day during service," while, in 1670, "two lovers, John Lewis and Sarah Chapman, were . . . tried for sitting together on the Lord's day under an apple tree."

SUCCESS IN SIGHT.

"I can't see why I should attempt to produce your play," said the manager. "There seems to be nothing in it."

"The mayor of this town has promised me that he will threaten to stop it if you put it on," the eager young dramatist replied.

"Hurrah! We'll put it in rehearsal at once, and in addition to being the author I want you to be the press agent."

SEVERE STRAIN.

"Unassisted?"

"Yes."

Minnesota Delegates Instructed for Roosevelt

The Republican state convention, held yesterday at Minneapolis, was almost unanimously in favor of Theodore Roosevelt for president and the 24 delegates to the national convention were snstructed to vote for him "first, last and all the time." The resolutions adopted endorsed the principles of progressive republicanism, and also directed state central committee to provide for a preferential vote on governor at the state primaries in June.

PRISONER HIS OWN POLICE

Takes Himself to Jail When Squire Did Not Have an Officer Handy.

There was a long, loud ring at the portals of the jail today and when Warden Colling answered it he found a stranger standing outside.

"What do you want?" inuired the warden.

"I want to come in," replied the stranger.

Collins inquired why, and in answer the man shoved a paper through the bars. Glancing at it, Collins read that it was a commitment issued by Squire Koch of Moore township for Harry Hahn.

Thinking that his visitor was a constable, Collins inquired where Hahn was.

"I'm Hahn," replied the man. "You see, Squire Koch didn't have a constable handy, so he gave me the commitment and told me to come down here myself. He knows me pretty well and wasn't afraid to trust me."

The squire lives about sixteen miles from the county seat. The complaint against Hahn was lodged by a young woman, who charged that he was untrustworthy in keeping pledges; just the opposite of the squire's idea of the man.

FORGERY OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Most Glaring Case of Kind on Record Occurred in Great Britain in 1872.

Forged postage stamps are seldom heard of. The most glaring case of stamp forgery in Great Britain occurred in 1872 and 1873, and its origin has never been discovered. In those days the minimum rate for telegraphic messages was one shilling, and the stamps that were forged were all for such amount, each being passed through the stock exchange telepraph office.

One of the principal reasons against postage stamp forgery is the keenness of philatelists. The vigilance of the collector would speedily bring to light the existence of any faulty stamps.

Of the many thousands of varieties of stamps issued only about one hundred are known to have been forged, and these specimens have usually been skillfully faked, more with the object of trapping the collector than robbing the postal authorities.—Answers.

Department of the Interior, United States Land Office at Crookston, Minn., May 8, 1912.

ROOSEVELT WILL GET MINNESOTA

STATE WILL SEND DELEGATION TO REPUBLICAN CONVENTION FOR EX-PRESIDENT.

LOOKS LIKE A LANDSLIDE

La Follette Runs Poor Second, While Taft Stands Third—St. Paul and Ramsey County for the Colonel.

St. Paul, May 14.—Minnesota will send a Roosevelt delegation to the Republican national convention in Chicago. Returns from caucuses held throughout the state, indicate an overwhelming victory for the colonel. Following the example set by Minneapolis and Hennepin county on Friday, St. Paul and Ramsey county made the indorsement even more emphatic.

The returns indicate that the colonel started a landslide in the state and has carried every district, with the possible exception of the First and with a chance of anti-Roosevelt combinations in the Seventh and Ninth.

In the First district former Congressman Tawney did effective work for the president and the Taft men may control the district convention. Winona county was carried for Taft, the city of Winona being practically solid. Mower, Wabasha and Waseca were reported favoring the president. Freeborn county, in which Albert Lea is located, the home of Speaker Dunn, Colonel Roosevelt won an overwhelming victory.

Roosevelt Wins in Eighth.

In the Eighth, or St. Louis county district, the colonel again showed himself a winner. The vote in the city of Duluth was overwhelmingly in his favor. President Taft carried some of the lower counties, where the influence of R. C. Dunn prevailed, but the entire Eighth, on the face of the first returns, appears to have gone against the president.

In the Seventh and Ninth districts, Senator La Follette showed considerable strength.

In Lyon county, Roosevelt received 873 to 245 for La Follette and 115 for the president. This would make it impossible for the La Follette and Taft men to control the county convention.

In Redwood county, La Follette made his best showing, running two to one ahead of Roosevelt. Meeker county went to La Follette while Yellow Medicine gives La Follette 28, Taft 8 and Roosevelt 21, making a Taft-Roosevelt combination possible.

In McLeod county, La Follette carried the county, but the delegates are instructed for Taft.

Douglas county, the home of Senator Nelson, in the Ninth district, gave Roosevelt 21, Taft 8 and La Follette 28. The La Follette and Taft people have it in their power to control the convention.

Reports from Crookston, in Polk county, were to the effect that not more than 100 votes had been cast. The delegates elected are said to be either Taft or La Follette. East Grand Forks went for Taft. The county precincts show a leaning towards La Follette.

Blue Earth Goes to Roosevelt.

Blue Earth county and Mankato, the home of Governor Eberhart, gave Roosevelt an overwhelming victory. The governor's friends took no part in the contest, the governor's course being an exact carrying out of the public position he had taken that he favored the president, but would not use his influence nor the influence of his administration to sway the result.

In Kandiyohi county, the first tryout of candidates for governor occurred. This is in Lieutenant Governor Gordon's home district and a vigorous primary fight was made between himself and W. E. Lee.

The precincts heard from gave Gordon, 253; Lee, 314; Eberhardt, 140. Lee will have 52 delegates and Gordon 36.

TAFT MEN CLAIMING 23 MORE

DECLARED EXECUTIVE NEEDS ONLY 40 MORE VOTES.

Roosevelt Bureau, on the Other Hand, Claims a Lead of Ninety Over Taft.

Washington, May 14.—Although admitting their disappointment over the result in the Maryland primaries, the friends of President Taft find much consolation in the fact that during the past week there were added to the list of Taft delegates 23 Taft men, and to the Roosevelt delegates only 11 men, without counting Maryland, which has not yet formally recorded her choice in convention.

Referring to the Montana results the Taft bureau issued the following and a comment upon the Texas results:

"President Taft will control the state convention by a majority of more than 100 and Dixon was beaten in his home county by five to one. The eight votes of Montana will be cast at Chicago for the president.

"Three districts in Texas elected delegates and President Taft got five of the six delegates. The third district in Arkansas also instructed its two delegates for him and the fifth Alabama will send two delegates also instructed for the president.

"The president now has 492 delegates to the Chicago convention, and if the Montana delegation be included, he has an even 500, needing only 40 votes to nominate on the first ballot. These 40 will be secured this week, while Ohio will add to his total next week a substantial number of delegates."

The Roosevelt national bureau gave out the following lineup of the delegates chosen to date:
